MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

The perspectives of a university range from the majestic to the minute; at Michigan State they offer a sweeping panorama.

PERSPECTIVES

M.S.U.

Our complex and varying moods reflect those of our surroundings.
The changing face of the campus in all its aspects demands appreciation by students, faculty and visitors.

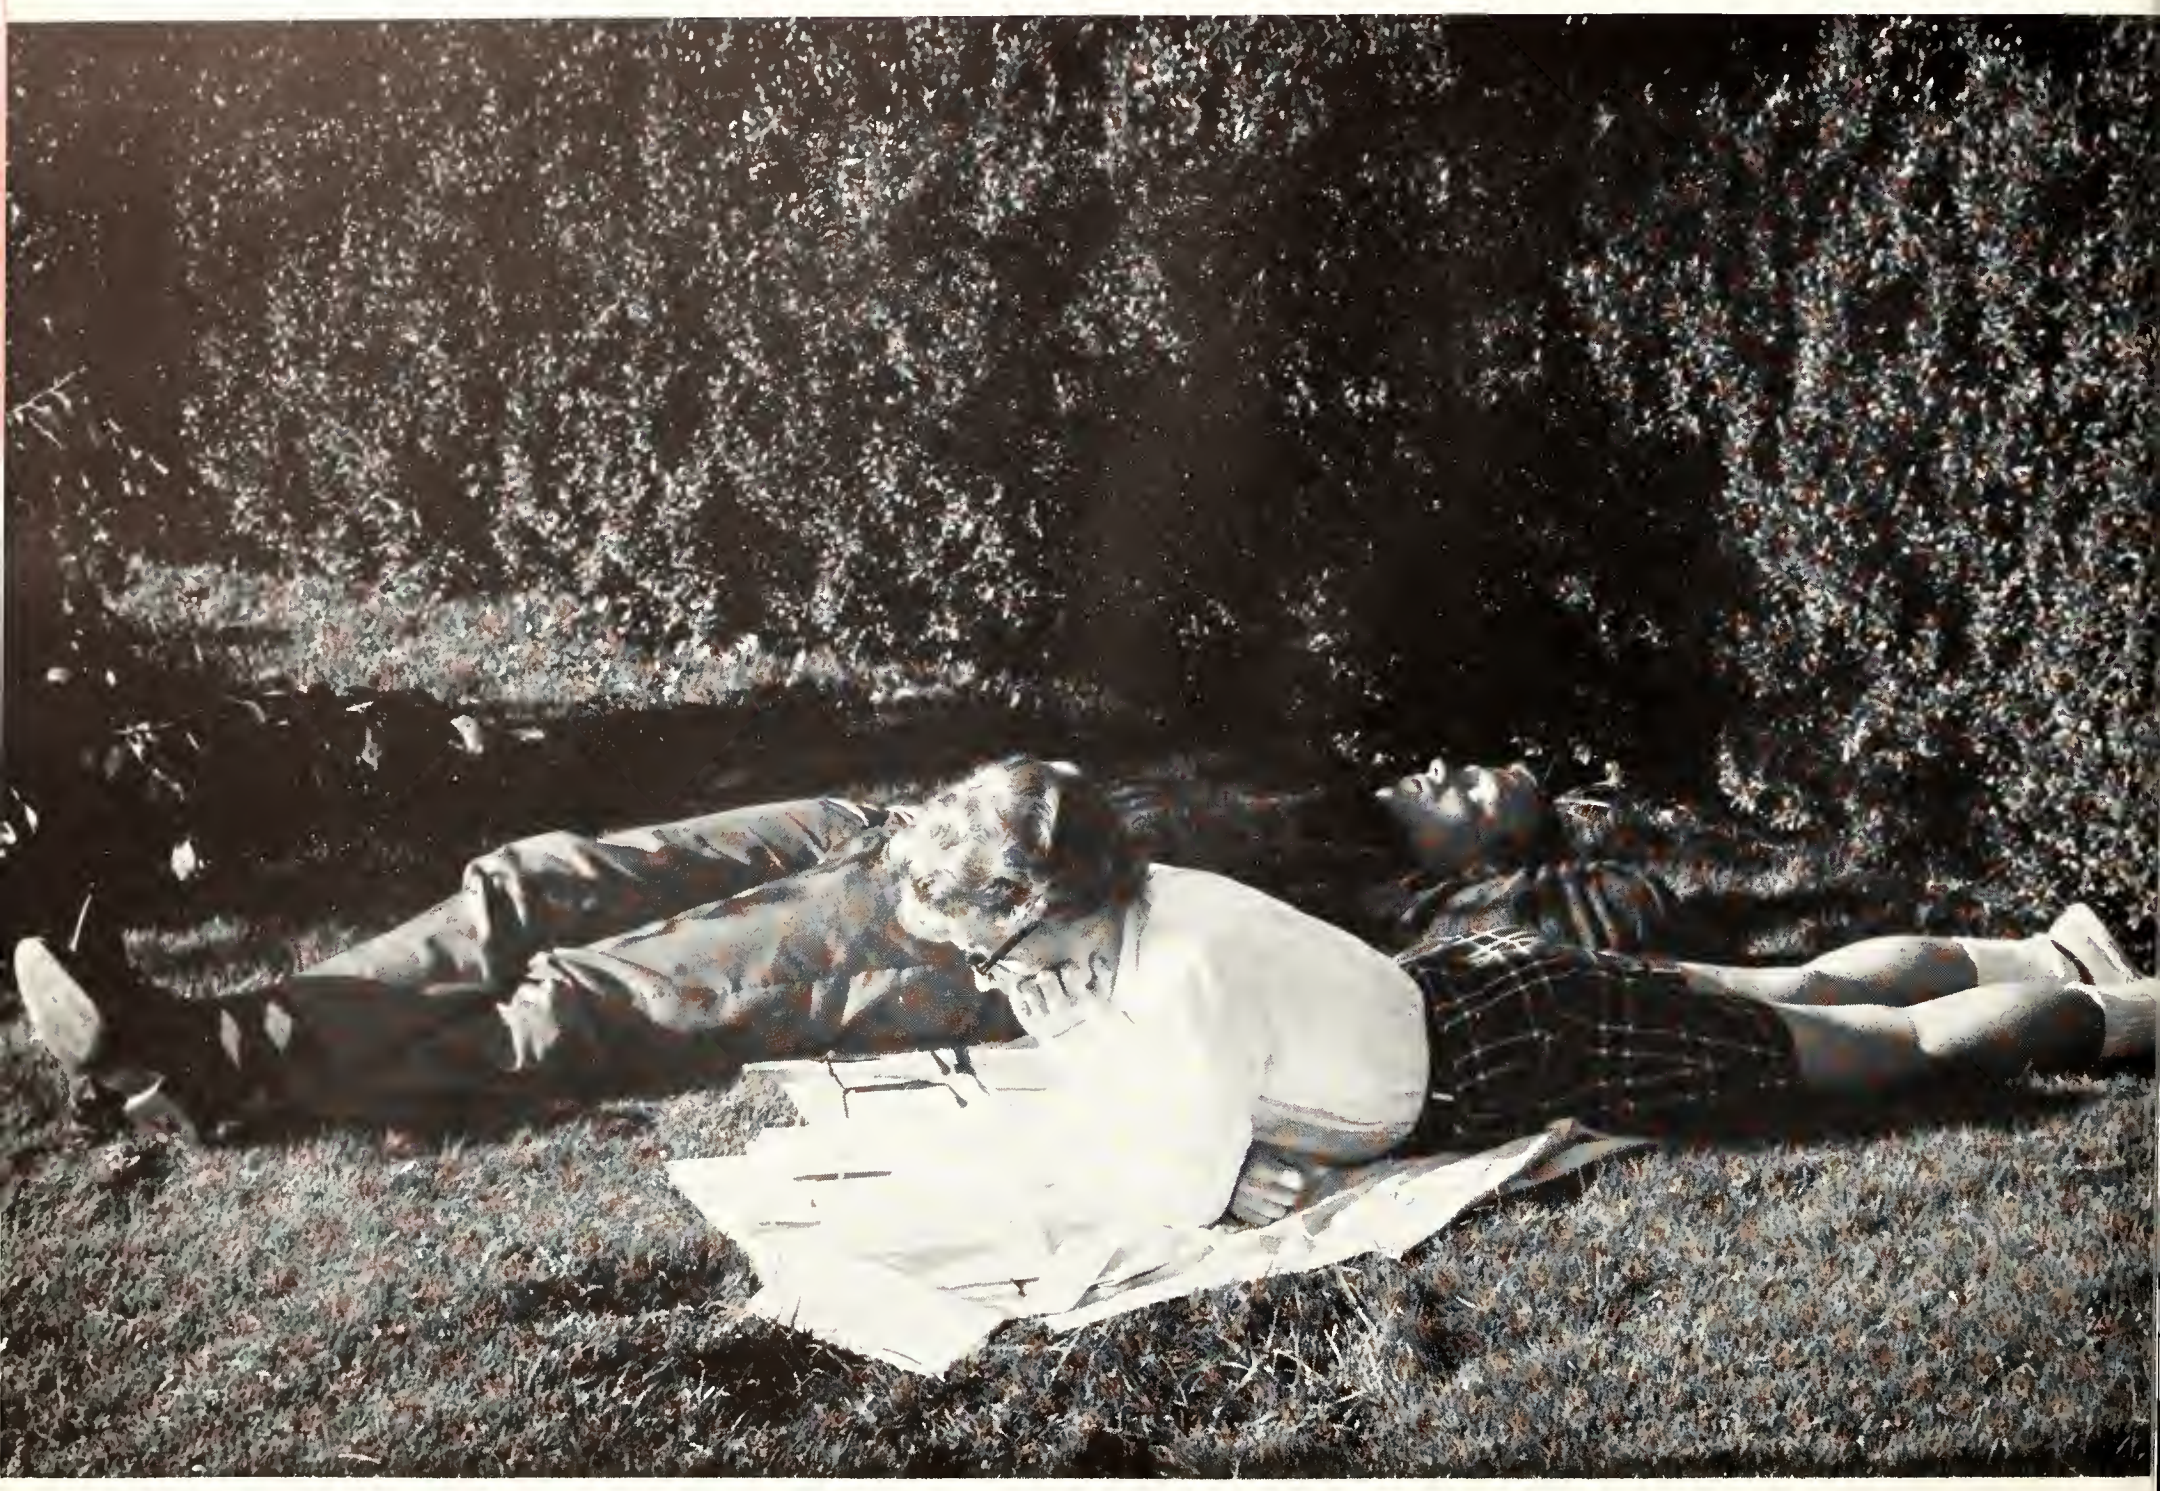
An occasional pause for quiet reflections is both solicited and answered by our environment.

MSU IS THE SUM OF HER PEOPLE

Rare moments of solitude emphasize the importance and the role of the individual in shaping the university community.

Shifting patterns of couples are the result of constant search and re-evaluation of personal values and goals.



The necessary synthesis of individuals into groups is accompanied by the strengthening of personal values. Each group becomes not a blend but an association.

The year 1961 marked a turn in the tide of our society. What had been familiar faded into memory as new faces and new scenes rose to fill the gap.

TO BEGIN THE YEAR 1961

MICHIGAN STATE'S story is a story of people who make the UNIVERSITY COMMUNITY. Unique in its setting, purpose and goals, our community is set apart from the mundane; its immeasurable dividends.

life is one which pays

Rare, quiet moments alone dot the social scene and present an aspect of university life that is at once universal and private.

Even university scholars find that daily duties require three hands — but mouths often have to clench safety pins on diaper detail.

Affairs of State

The academic stimulus, artfully applied, molds intelligence into understanding.

The character and personality of a community is inescapably the total of those who live and work in it.

At Michigan State, the community character is determined by the actions and interactions of students and faculty members that combine in the daily drama which builds the image of a progressive university. . . .

Cramped cubicles in Greek houses provide hide-aways for long-winded personal 'phone calls.

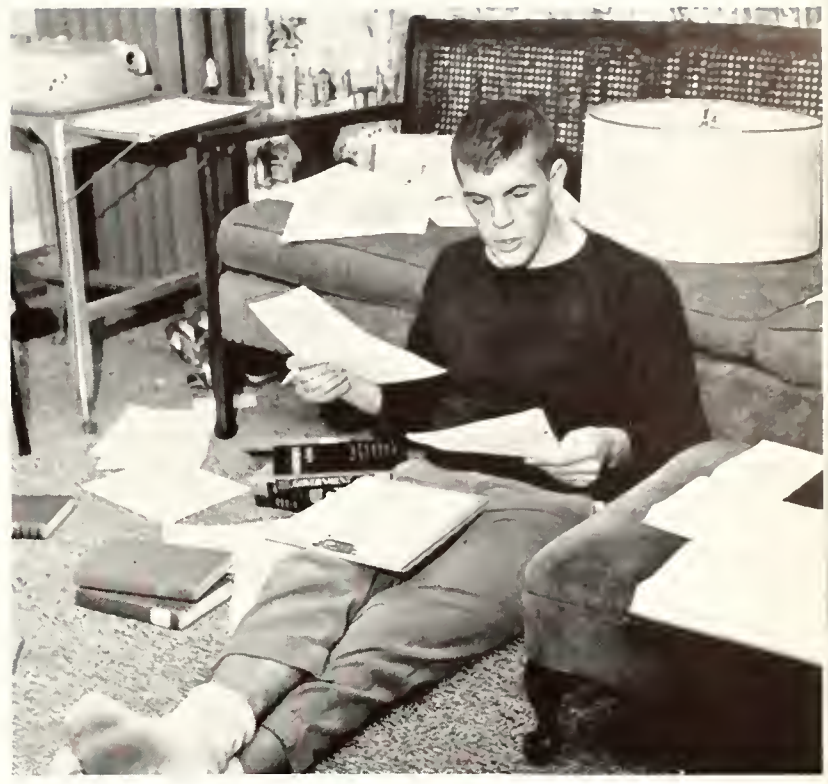
Kids and kites are only a part of the complex society of married housing which provides homes for thousands of married students and their families.

STUDENT LIFE Far beyond the hub-bub of daily university life each Spartan finds a haven to call his own. No matter what his age, sex or marital status, home to each student becomes simply that corner of the campus where he can be alone with himself, his friends or his new and growing family.

Whether desire or necessity places him in university-supported living quarters or informal off-campus housing, comfort and atmosphere are desired and attained through personal decorating schemes which demand more ingenuity than money.

For many, residence halls and Greek houses provide congenial community living and lessons in patience and tolerance. For others, the freedom found in home or apartment living is sufficient reward for the often familiar sacrifices of inconvenience and monetary difficulties.

Yet to all, the Spartan life is a good life.



Off-campus apartment living offers room to sprawl and a "home" to call one's own.

Friendly fellowship in residence halls is fostered by close quarters and congenial room- and precinct-mates.

The temptation of a fistful of snow and the passing of a pretty girl are usually too much for a healthy rambunctious Spartan male to resist.

STUDENT RECREATION At Michigan State, fun time is almost any time at all. Scraps of time snatched from study and class schedules linger on and stretch out over coffee, cigarettes and conversation.

Whether singly, doubly or in groups, students indulge in simple pleasures: serious study of contemporary cards; the triumphant setting of a slam hand; loosening a tie at a Saturday night party; rambling through a misty night past Beaumont; debating knee-length skirts and the Peace Corps, Ft. Lauderdale and the Rose Bowl, James Joyce and student government.

Yet even recreation is coupled with the same intense concentration devoted to serious endeavors — a concentration fostered by the realization that time is all too short and that even daily pleasures must be enjoyed hard to be enjoyed at all.

A sunny spring afternoon and a collection of wrenches are necessary ingredients to meet the mechanical challenge facing sports car enthusiasts.

Spring and summer terms are times for high-jinks and suntans around the outdoor pool.

STUDENT WORK State life is mainly student life —the daily struggle with texts, lectures and term papers. For four years the daily dash toward a degree spurs more than 20,000 students through crowds, traffic, lines and assigned readings.

Counseling Clinics and orientation for new students each fall begin the education adventure which becomes increasingly complex as each term ends and a new one begins.

Registration in September, January, March and June formalizes student roles and sorts the scholarly and unscholarly alike into coded slots of curricula, class hours, credits and campus addresses.

With the staggering chore of classification completed, Michigan State tightens its belt and launches into still another skirmish with scholarship. Study becomes supreme.

Three-day Summer Counseling Clinics for newly-admitted freshmen gave them an opportunity to visit the campus and become acquainted with university life and familiar landmarks.

Competition for the ten full-expense Alumni Distinguished Scholarships drew hundreds of outstanding high school seniors who were entertained at a candlelight dinner on the evening preceding rigorous tests.

The maze of fall term registration marked the end of vacation time and heralded the beginning of another year-long segment of study and class work.

Coffee and cramming somehow go together — and a corner table at Kewpee's is often an incongruous hide-away for ten o'clock scholars.

STUDENT - FACULTY WORK The essence of any community is cooperation; no one part of its membership can exist alone. This is the predominant philosophy underlying the flow of life in a university community such as ours.

Even though students and faculty lead separate lives and have their particular responsibilities, the spirit of the university community binds them together in an atmosphere of free association on many levels and at many points of contact. The common goal is knowledge.

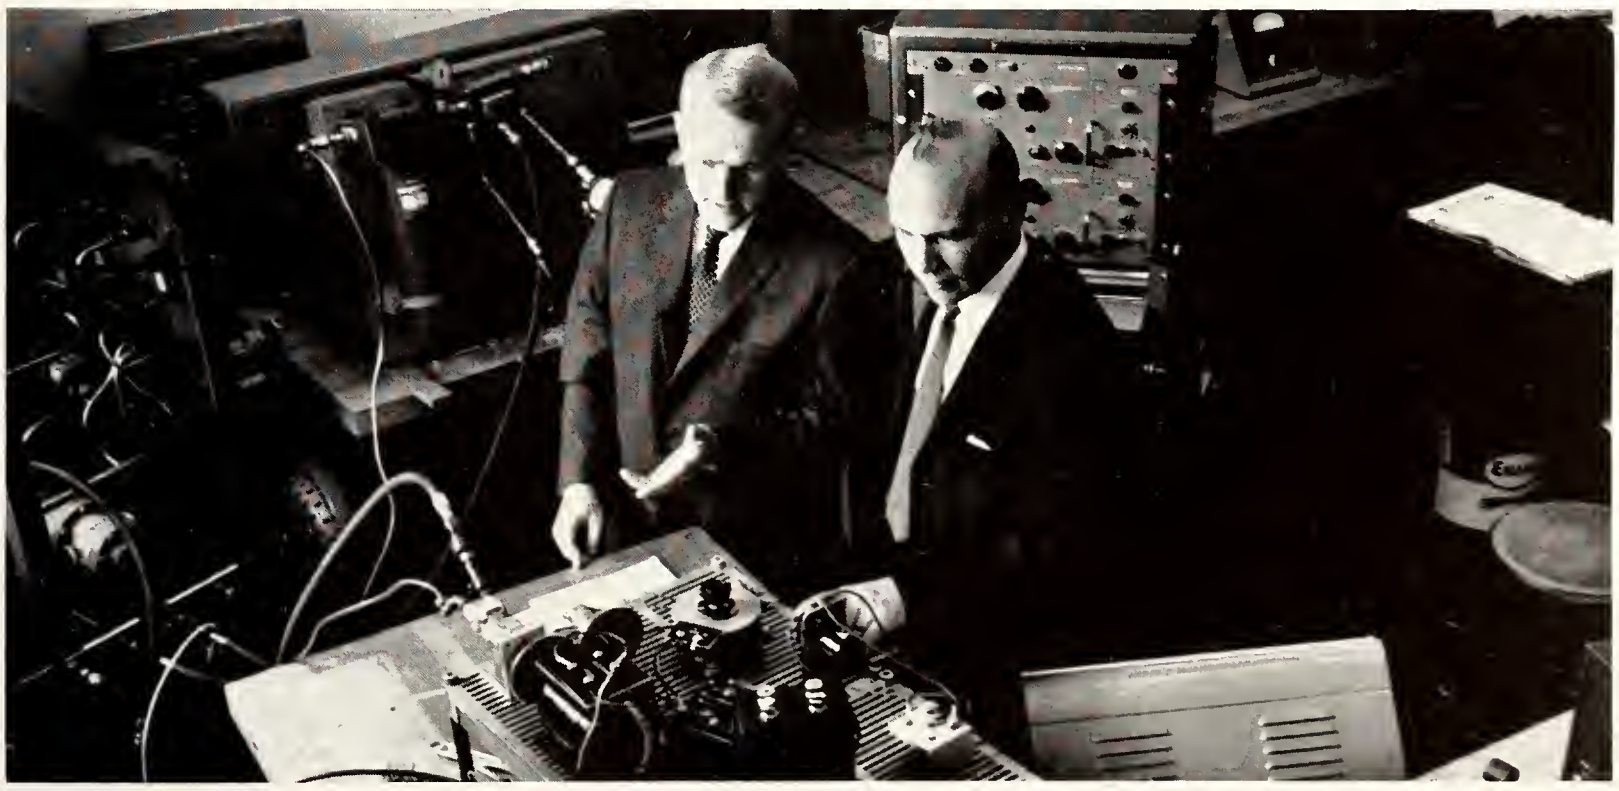
Mutual respect on the part of students and faculty is the foundation upon which successful relationships are built in many areas of university life. In the classroom, in conference and in extra-curricular and social activities, friendly co-operation is the keynote.

Words about words about words and diligent delvings into thick volumes are usually the beginning of understanding.

Instructors such as Rachel Smith of social work welcome opportunities for individual conferences with interested students.

Piles of bluebooks greet faculty members at mid-term and final exam time. Dr. Edward Natharius, assistant professor of humanities, shuffles through a whole day's work of grading.

Professor Herman E. Koening and graduate assistant Hinrich Martens conduct research of hydraulic systems as a cooperative effort in electrical engineering.



Informal discussions with colleagues are welcome diversions at any time of the day. Here Dr. Harold Ecker, associate professor of short course agriculture, Victor Goldkind, instructor of sociology and Dr. Frank Nall, assistant professor of sociology gather for coffee and conversation.

Dr. Harry H. Murakishi, associate professor of botany and plant pathology, conducts individual research on plant diseases to keep abreast of recent developments in his field.

FACULTY WORK To many students, the image of a faculty member begins and ends at the classroom door. But beyond the confines of 50-minute class segments lies the complex and vital world of the professional scholar.

The men and women of Michigan State's faculty are bound together by a common dedication to continual scholarship, professional excellence, and service to youth and education.

These goals are reached only through constant devotion to daily duties which makes possible the polished lectures and assured authority.

Aside from the careful preparation of course work and lectures, paper-grading, conferences, staff and department meetings and advisory duties, each faculty member devotes hours weekly to the further development of himself and his field through research and study of current trends. Many attend classes themselves to swell the ranks of Ph.D. holders—which now total 64 per cent of the faculty.

This is the busy and rewarding life of the professional scholar.

The returning of carefully-graded papers represents hours of reading and evaluation.

Department duties often include stints at registration each term.

Night classes plague teachers as well as students—yet add hours to class and credit-hour capacities.

The Academic Senate meets once each term in the Music Auditorium to consider matters of policy for the university.

FACULTY ORGANIZATION Michigan State's faculty is governed by and governs through a unique system of councils designed to insure efficient administration of academic problems.

The Academic Senate, composed of professors, associate professors and assistant professors with tenure, and including the academic deans, meets once each term to consider legislative and policy matters. The Senate represents the entire voting faculty and initiates legislative measures which affect the university as a whole.

The Academic Council acts as a screening agent for the Senate. Composed of the deans, the steering committee of the Senate and two representatives elected from each college, the Council investigates academic problems through a system of standing committees and makes recommendations to the Senate for full consideration and debate.

Dr. Carl F. Huffman, professor of dairy husbandry—leading authority on dairy cattle nutrition; he devised the use of a plastic "window" to observe the digestive processes of cattle; a member of the faculty since 1922.

OUTSTANDING FACULTY Among the hundreds of fine faculty members, Michigan State claims many outstanding persons. Some have become known internationally for their research; others have been friends to generations of students. This year, several of them, such as those pictured here, are retiring after long years of service to Michigan State and her students. Their contributions to the university community will long be remembered.

Dr. Karl A. Stiles, professor and head of zoology—an international authority in genetics; author of 57 books and articles; faculty member since 1945.

Roy L. Underwood, professor of music and director of the division of fine arts—accomplished pianist and teacher of music; joined the faculty in 1940.

Miss Mary Lewis, associate professor of foods and nutrition—pioneer in off-campus teaching of foods and nutrition; recipient of the Distinguished Faculty Award; member of the faculty since 1931.

Assistant professor Milton Goldberg joins associate professors Dr. Arthur Warner and Dr. Paul Smith in escaping from the College of Business and Public Service for a fast round of golf on a Saturday afternoon on the university course.

FACULTY RECREATION Even professors are people. Most often, bulging briefcases brought home from the office are stashed away in front closets as faculty members turn to their families and life's problems of leisure—green lawns that sprout crabgrass, putts that won't sink and partners who trump aces.

After-five life in East Lansing brims with informal and simple pleasures—Friday night spaghetti suppers, high school ball games, t.v. westerns, building kites and spraying rosebushes.

Hobbies and leisurely recreation for Michigan State's faculty members provide refuge from the pressures and demands of being professional scholars.

This is our university community.

Dr. Lucille Barber, associate professor of social work, relaxes in leisure moments by making bread for her family and neighbors.

Intricacies of antique watches intrigue Dr. Edward Natharius as he spends hours cleaning and repairing old timepieces.

The installation of black-topped bike paths highlighted the year for cross-campus travelers.

All-University Events

The evolution of Michigan State to national prominence has been accompanied by the slow growth of traditions. Each year the academic atmosphere is brightened by the sporadic occurrence of events which are designed for the enjoyment and participation of the entire university community. . . .

All-university spring elections began the year with heated campaigns for class and student government officers.

Kennedy backers went all-out to greet the Senator here in October.

The Burroughs Company attracted scores of visitors into their Career Carnival booth with their perpetually running machine.

CARNIVALS AND EXPOSITIONS When its carnival time at MSU it's also imagination time, organization time, work time, a crowded time, and always—fun time.

At "Activities Expresso" 70 campus organizations went beatnik at Activities Carnival. This is the time when upperclassmen show freshmen the wide range of activities open to them.

"Success in the Sixties" set the theme for this year's Career Carnival. This is a time when students learn from industry representatives how to best prepare for their future.

Every spring crowds flock to the International Festival to enjoy its talent show and displays, and to the Engineering Exposition to view micro-midget races and scientific models and exhibits.

Ski Club enthusiasts constructed an elaborate display at Activities Carnival to attract new students into their active organization.

AIChE conducted fascinating experiments at their Engineering Exposition booth for the delight of many visitors.

Foreign students went all out at the International Festival spring term to bring a little bit of the homeland to the campus. Here Indian students explain their culture.

Ambitious co-eds employed busy fingers to fashion corsages for the dates for the February Spinsters' Spin, the annual turn-about dance.

Surprised and delighted Arlyn Greifendorf received the coveted Miss MSU crown and an armload of roses from the 1960 winner, Patti Pickens, as Blue Key president Bryce Plapp made the happy announcement at winter term J-Hop.

DANCES Happy dancing feet slid over campus floors this year as the popularity of all-university and private group dances soared to an all-time high.

Highlighting fall term activities were the Harvest Ball, sponsored by Agriculture Council to honor their queens, and the annual Coronation Ball, sponsored by the Army and Air Force ROTC.

The Junior Class sponsored a record sell-out J-Hop, "Tara" in January and highlighted the festivities with the crowning of a new Miss MSU, Arlyn Greifendorf. Three weeks following, Mortar Board, Tower Guard and Spartan Women's League joined forces for the annual Spinsters' Spin, appropriately titled this year the "Student Prince."

Army and Air Force ROTC cadets participated in caping ceremonies at the Coronation Ball, held to honor corps sponsors for both groups.

HOMECOMING More than 20,000 loyal alumni flooded East Lansing for the annual Homecoming festivities in October.

Living units constructed elaborate displays to welcome their alums—and Gilchrist, West Shaw, Theta Chi and Chi Omega captured first place trophies for their efforts.

Miss Mary Berles reigned over the festivities which included a torch-light rally, "Bacchanalia," sponsored by the men of Phi Kappa Psi, the tough football game with Ohio State, and the Homecoming Dance at Kellogg Center.

To highlight the weekend, four outstanding civic leaders, Gladys Olds Anderson, Warren M. Huff, John W. Rice and Howard J. Stoddard were designated Honorary Alumni.

The men of Theta captured the first-place trophy among fraternities for their elaborate display.

High-flying Spartan alumni rejoiced in a moment of glory in the ill-fated Homecoming contest with Ohio State.

LECTURE-CONCERT SERIES The Lecture-Concert series, under the supervision of Dr. Wilson B. Paul, gathers a fine and varied array of talent each year. Presented to Michigan State students free of charge, its purpose is to widen their cultural experiences in the most enjoyable manner.

Approximately seven foreign films are presented in Fairchild theatre each term. The World Travel series brings a famous lecturer to the stage of the Auditorium on Saturday evenings. The MSU players contribute much time and effort to make the term plays successful and rewarding.

All of these features combine to make up one of the finest college cultural programs for both the students and the community.

Montovani obliged autograph-hunters following his fine fall term orchestral performance.

The Israeli Philharmonic Orchestra marked its first appearance at Michigan State on November 2 with a stirring performance.

Members of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra tuned their instruments before going on stage for their February 8 appearance.

Audiences were thrilled by the striking performance of Archibald MacLeish's "J.B.", a modern interpretation of the book of Job, as it was presented by the touring company.

Piano artistry by Errol Garner drew packed houses for his winter term appearance.

Each year the Lecture-Concert Series presents more than 50 programs, featuring some of the world's foremost figures of the concert hall, stage, and lecture platform. Included in this varying program are lectures, ballet, concerts, drama, foreign films, and world travel films.

The programs are presented to give MSU students opportunities for enrichment and enjoyment through personal experience with a variety of artistic achievements; to help students better understand the cultural, economic, and social backgrounds of the peoples of the world; to give the faculty and staff opportunities to experience the intellectual challenge and aesthetic enjoyment that comes from a variety of cultural and educational programs; and to cooperate with other organizations in providing such cultural and educational programs for the community.

Jose Limon's Dance Troupe closed out the 1960-61 Lecture-Concert season with modern interpretations. Here Betty Jones dances a duet with Limon.

The Basin Street Jazz Show featured local jazz groups which played to a full house in the Union ballroom.

Sophomore Ruth Ann Helmrich donned a stripped suit for the Fifth Avenue Style Show during Union Board Week.

UNION BOARD WEEK Which way would you go? A stroll down Fifth Avenue? An exciting trip up Broadway? Or maybe Basin Street? Perhaps you'd prefer a quiet walk down Main Street? The members of Union Board offered all of these alternatives to travel-hungry students during the presentation of the annual Union Board Week.

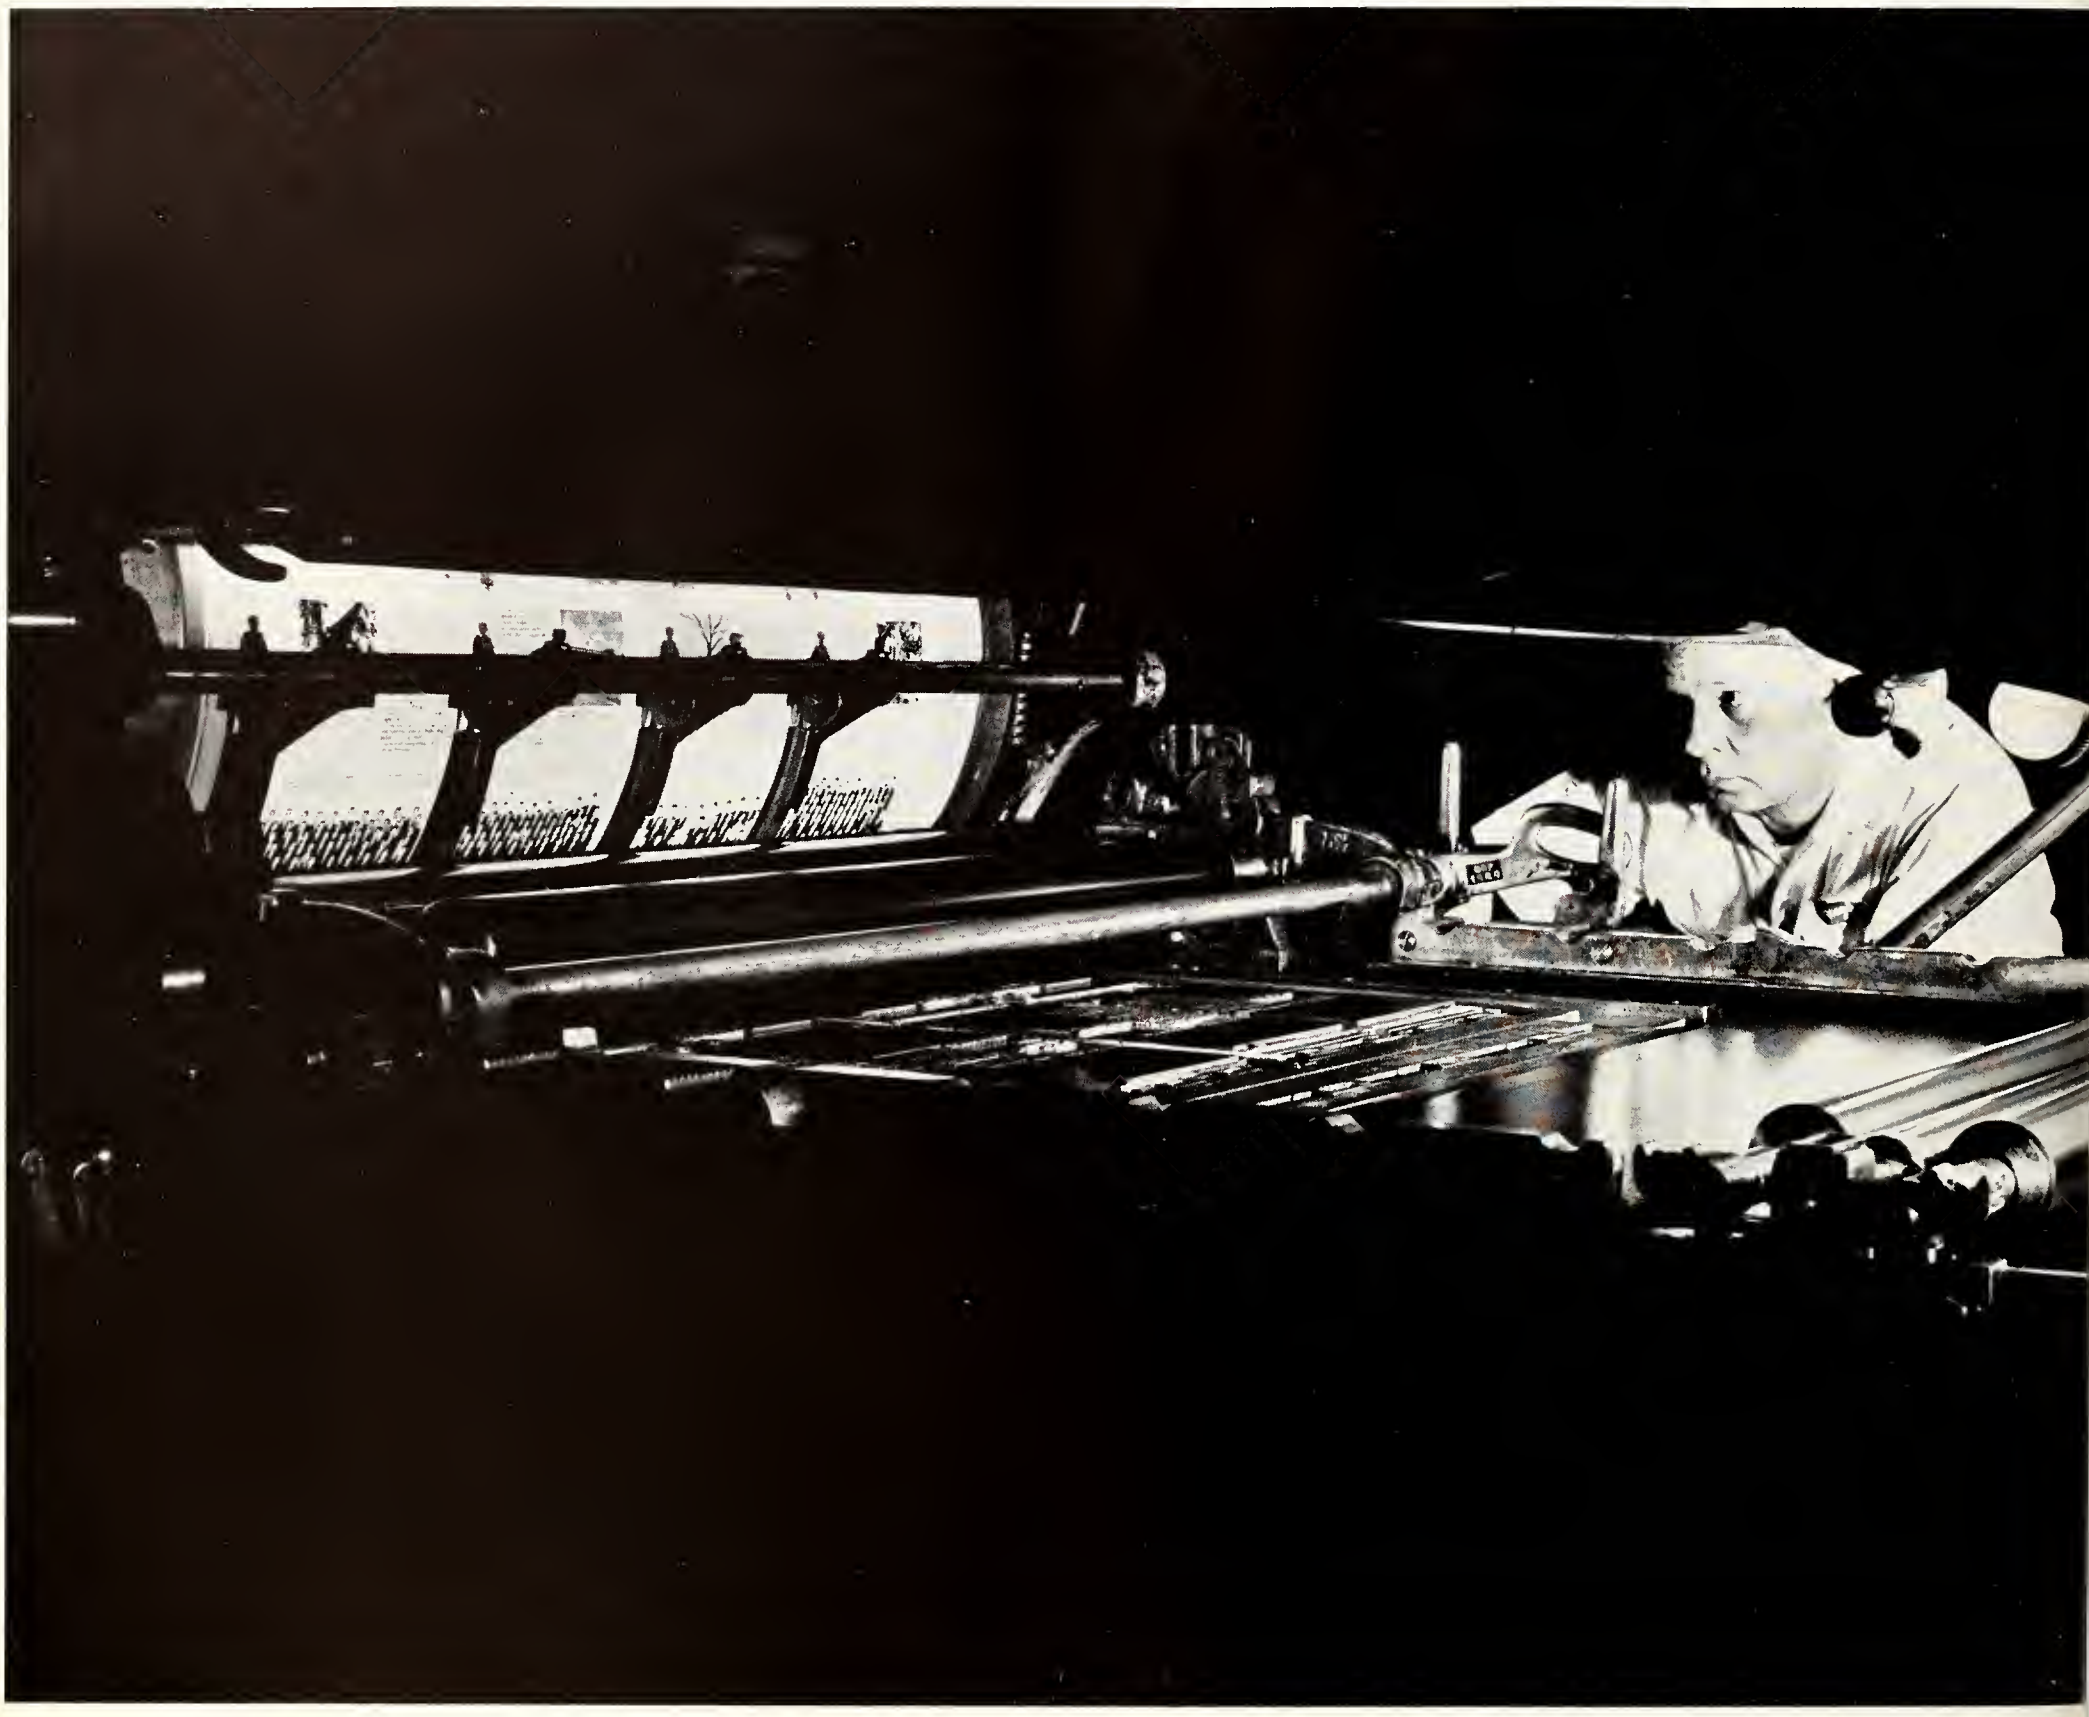
For this traditional winter term event the service-minded campus organization presented a Broadway variety show, a Basin Street Jazz concert, a Fifth Avenue style show, and a 12th Street dance, all following the theme, "Which Way?" At the Main Street preview drinks in the grill were served at reduced prices.

A string of talented U-Bettes strutted their stuff at the U.B. Week Variety Show in the Union Ballroom.

Dancing feet filled the Union parlors for the Union Board Week Twelfth Street all-university dance.

Religious expression finds roots in regular family worship.

Speaker-Hines and Thomas pressman Vaughan Kenyon checks a Wolverine form as the press begins to roll on the finished publication in the Lansing plant.



Spirited high-jinks at the 1960 Publications Banquet involved President Hannah in some "dragnet" pranks.

University Theater delighted audiences during winter term with its farcical "Man and Superman."

Public and private forums for the expression of personal views are supported and jealously protected by Michigan State Students. The reflection of contemporary student thought is encouraged and fostered by the freedom from censorship in student publications and student governing groups. . . .

Methods of Expression

Kiddingly dubbed the "Petticoat Press," these four women held control of the two major publications. The responsible ladies are State News city editor Marcia VanNess, State News editor-in-chief Sue Price, Wolverine editor Jane Denison and State News managing editor Sharon Coady.

Spartan Engineer editor Reg Pilarski confers with staffers Roberta Hoffmaster, Paul Butler and John Thorton on layout and photos for the winter issue.

PUBLICATIONS Located on the third floor of the Student Services Building is an anything-but-obscure corridor known as Pub Row.

Day and night this small corner produces such frantic cries as: "Where are the sissors?", "Editorial on line one", and "Sell! Sell! Sell!"

Pub Row is the home of MSU's student publications. There, amid a mixed air of cooperation and friendly rivalry members of the "State News", "Wolverine", "Spartan Engineer", and "MSU Veterinarian", shout in panic, sigh in despair, and meet deadlines.

The Board of Publications, which supervises all student publications, also selects major editors and business managers. These appointees in turn choose their staff and determine editorial policy.

Jennings Bird, editor of the 1960 Wolverine, presided as emcee at the Publications Banquet which climaxed the year for Pub Row personnel.

Staffer Ross Biederman confers with State News Editor-in-Chief Sue Price about the fine points of his story for the next day's paper.

The S'News office on Pub Row is a hub-bub of activity each afternoon as editorial and advertising personnel pitch in to piece together news and ads to fill the columns for press.

Tarot editorial staff members Ron English and Jim Reed (background) led discussions of submitted material at staff meetings.

Veteran photographers Tom Armstrong and Norm Hines turned in a high percentage of shots for the 1961 Wolverine.

One long-standing member of Pub Row was missing this year as the "Spartan", former campus humor turned literary magazine, left its office for good due to circulation difficulties. It was replaced by the Tarot, a purely literary effort.

At the annual spring Publications Banquet service awards were given for outstanding work in the year just over. The high point of the evening, as always, was the skit competition among the publications for the coveted oil-can trophy, won again in '60 by the Veterinarian.

In case of emergency Pub Row denizens can usually be found singing songs in the Wolverine office, drinking coffee in the State News office, or recovering in Olin.

MSU Veterinarian staffers Charles Anderson, Stan Newman and Donald Sawyer spent hours editing—and polishing their prized Oil Can trophy.

AUGS made an all-out, last minute effort to influence state legislators to increase MSU appropriations by sending letters to the parents of all Michigan students urging them to contact their state Senators. More than fifty students worked 'round the clock to send out almost 18,000 letters.

Student insurance director Gil Cox headed the health insurance program made available at reduced rates to Michigan State students.

ALL - UNIVERSITY STUDENT GOVERNMENT

The All - University Student Government, patterned after the federal government, is divided into executive, legislative, and judicial branches.

The executive branch of AUSG is headed by the president, who is elected by the student body each spring term. He is directly responsible for the enforcement of all laws passed by the Student Congress. Assisting him in this function are executive branch departments.

The legislative branch is contained within the Student Congress. Representatives are elected from each dormitory, collectively from the fraternities and sororities, married housing and off-campus students. They are chosen each spring or whenever a vacancy occurs.

The constitutional legality of all AUSG activities, both present and future, is determined by the All-University Judiciary. This same body also judges many cases involving student discipline.

AUSG President Dan Riedel guided the complex activities of the organization throughout the year.

Individual mailboxes in the Speaker's office are used for the distribution of resolutions and other communications to Congress members. Here Jim Anderson and Chuck Bruce check the contents.

Veteran AUSG officer Bill Alldredge checks over reports with a willing secretary.

Volunteer workers Ellen Bradley and Marguerite Todt assisted many students who came to AUSG for small, short-term loans.

Operating on a fee of 25¢ from each student per term, and under the general direction of President Dan Riedel, AUSG again proved its financial responsibility with the many services performed for the students it represents.

Student sleeves were again rolled up, some admittedly reluctantly, to receive the polio shots that AUSG provided at a nominal cost. Campus clubs and organizations happily thanked the governing body for all the free mimeographing and for the indispensable student organizations directory.

Many students benefited from the continuation of the AUSG student loan and insurance programs.

As spring term comes, so also come elections to campus offices. At this time the elections committee, which is responsible for directing the entire elections procedure—petitions, ballots, tabulation—is kept especially busy as the campaign for class and AUSG offices get under way. The purpose of this committee is to assure fair elections.

Finance committee chairman Jim Gibson confers with Speaker pro-tem Jim Anderson as Speaker Chuck Herbert and Congressman Trevis Markle delve into other problems in the background of the busy main AUSG office.

AUSG sponsored mobile units to enable more students to vote in the April 18 elections.

Free mimeographing for student groups is one of the services made available by student tax money. Here Pat Oberlink copes with the always-busy machine.

Wednesday night Congress meetings were often the scenes of heated debates during the 1960-61 session as Congressmen mulled over policy and procedure questions.

The Union Concourse is the popular scene of many activities. Union Board maintains a desk in the main lobby to assist students with questions about UB events and services.

The United Nations Lounge on the Union's lower level is maintained for the comfort and convenience of MSU's foreign students.

UNION BOARD Need a ride home? Check with the Union Board ride bureau. Worried about getting some typing done? Go to the Union Board typing bureau. Looking for talent for a special event? See the Union Board talent bureau. These and many other services are offered by the 125 member body of Union Board whose responsibility it is to coordinate all cultural, recreational, and social events held in the Union Building.

Besides offering bridge, chess, and bowling to all students, Union Board also offers an excellent fine arts program including speakers, exhibits, and movies. The newly created forum committee was busy all year on vital issues from the viewpoint of their particular field.

All of these many and varied activities and services are carried out by students who gain membership by petitioning and rushing each winter term.

The Union Browsing Room attracts many students for quiet reading and studying.

Joe Drolett and Sally Spiller pitched in with other members of Union Board to interview prospective members during winter rush.

MSU UNITED NATIONS Michigan State's forum for discussion of international problems is provided through the MSU United Nations, founded in the fall of 1958 to offer an outlet for foreign students and American students alike to air opinions on foreign policy.

Since its small beginnings under the sponsorship of the Junior Council, the campus UN has grown under Secretary-General Mohammad Toussi to more than 200 members and is the first collegiate United Nations to meet on a regular, bi-weekly basis.

Fifty-two nations are represented by delegations at the regular sessions of the General Assembly. The delegates stage full-fledged debates on current international problems and crises and send copies of all resolutions passed by the Assembly to each delegation at United Nations Headquarters in New York.

Highlighting the activities of the year was the national United Nations Conference, held on the campus in February. Students from 35 schools from New York to Colorado converged on the campus, molded themselves into 70 national delegations, and debated 22 crucial issues. Five resolutions were passed, including a condemnation of South Africa's apartheid policy and a refusal to seat Red China.

Flags of all UN countries rimmed the Kiva in the Education Building for the February 17 meeting of the General Assembly during the three-day National UN Conference.

The art of theatrical make-up is carefully practiced by two east members of spring term's "Hansel and Gretel."

Senior Charles Cioffi portrayed a convincing MacBeth in Shakespeare's tragedy which highlighted the winter season.

THEATER Broadway a la MSU—no names in lights, only posters; no big stars attending, only students; no lavish costumes or sets, just a limited budget; but an abundance of good acting, good music, and good entertainment.

Highlighting the MSU theatre season were the four term plays, the Pulitzer Prize comedy "Harvey", G. B. Shaw's witty "Man and Superman", Shakespeare's tragedy "Macbeth", and William Saroyan's fantasy "The Cave Dwellers".

Shades of Arabian Nights appeared in the musical "Kismet", jointly sponsored by the departments of speech and music.

Film classics such as "The Three Musketeers", "The Private Life of Henry VIII", and "The Good Earth", and three studio productions rounded out the MSU version of life on Broadway.

University Theater members sold books of season tickets during fall term to insure full houses for each performance.

Easter Sunday drew thousands of Michigan State students to services at the University Lutheran and dozens of other churches in the Lansing area.

RELIGION Michigan State University feels strongly that religious activities and services are a necessary part of student life.

The University considers that one of its responsibilities is to maintain an atmosphere of religious freedom for the individual and, with this environment, to provide adequate opportunity for the development of spiritual maturity and the exercise of spiritual interests.

Nearly all major denominations are represented on campus, many having their own houses or centers for college students. These student centers devote their facilities to the meeting of student needs, including staffs of ministers, priests, rabbis, and directors of student activities.

The newly-completed Wesley Foundation building on Harrison road is typical of the student centers which many denominations have established to provide worship and recreation facilities.

Packed pews for Sabbath services are familiar scenes in Lansing-area churches and synagogues.

Choir directors can count on many student voices each Sunday to offer sacred music to services.

Michigan State's first family—President and Mrs. John A. Hannah.

Holding fast to the fundamental principle that it should be the purpose of every university to seek the truth, to teach the truth, and to preserve the truth, the administration of Michigan State University is constantly striving to see that their university produces educated individuals who will be trained and conditioned to be effective citizens.

The ever-present goal of our administration is that the graduates of MSU be ready and willing to assume the duties of leadership and responsibility in a nation crying for, and ever needful of, intelligent direction and guidance in a world full of confusion, insecurity and doubt.

The burden of guiding and governing the diverse activities of a wide-spread university falls upon the shoulders of the administrative team. The efforts of the elected Board of Trustees and our own highly-trained administrators keep the ship of State on an even keel in East Lansing and her outposts from Colombia to Pakistan. . .

The men who assist the elected Board of Trustees in governing the university are highly skilled in specialized areas of administration.

Vice-presidents Philip May (finance), Milton Muelder (research and development) and Gordon Sabine (special projects) head up extensive programs. Provost Paul Miller is in charge of all academic problems.

James Denison, assistant to the President, is the director of university relations. Tom King, Dean of students, is scheduled to retire this year after 27 years of service to the university.

Jacweir Breslin, assistant to the President, became Michigan State's third secretary in less than a year in February. James Miller, appointed by the Board to replace Karl McDonel who retired in July, 1960, left in January to become the President of Western Michigan university. Miss Marie Mercier became acting secretary in the one-month interim.

Berkey hall has become the symbol of Michigan State's educational process. Thousands of students flow in and out of its classrooms daily.

The main concentration of academic buildings is found clustered north of the Red Cedar River.

Divisional rooms in the modern new library are packed daily by students in diligent concentration over assigned readings and class assignments.

Academics

From her founding in 1855 as the first agricultural college in the world, Michigan State's academic area has grown to encompass 175 undergraduate, graduate and professional curricula. The 72 academic departments in the eight colleges offer collectively 3,838 courses to 20,000 students. . . .

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

Students of animal husbandry are thoroughly trained in the techniques of judging all types livestock in competition and daily use.

The lobby of the Agricultural Engineering building on Shaw Lane features elaborate displays about the field of agricultural engineering.

There is always something special about being the "first", and Michigan State can well afford to be proud of its College of Agriculture which was the first of its kind to be established anywhere in the world Founded more than 100 years ago, this innovation eventually led to the wide spread development of the many land-grant universities found throughout the United States today.

Thomas K. Cowden, dean of this, the oldest college in the university, is the head of our huge agricultural program whose purpose is to scientifically train its students in teaching, research, or extension work — the three major areas of the College of Agriculture.

Agriculture may be the oldest industry in the nation, but the students of this college, regardless of their major area, are much more interested in what is happening today, and what is apt to happen tomorrow.

Dr. Thomas K. Cowden, Dean of Agriculture.

Intensive microscopic study of embryonic development is a crucial aspect of poultry science.

To help in this goal of planning for an ever better tomorrow in the field of agriculture, the students are constantly kept informed of the latest developments and newest scientific knowledge in agriculture and conservation.

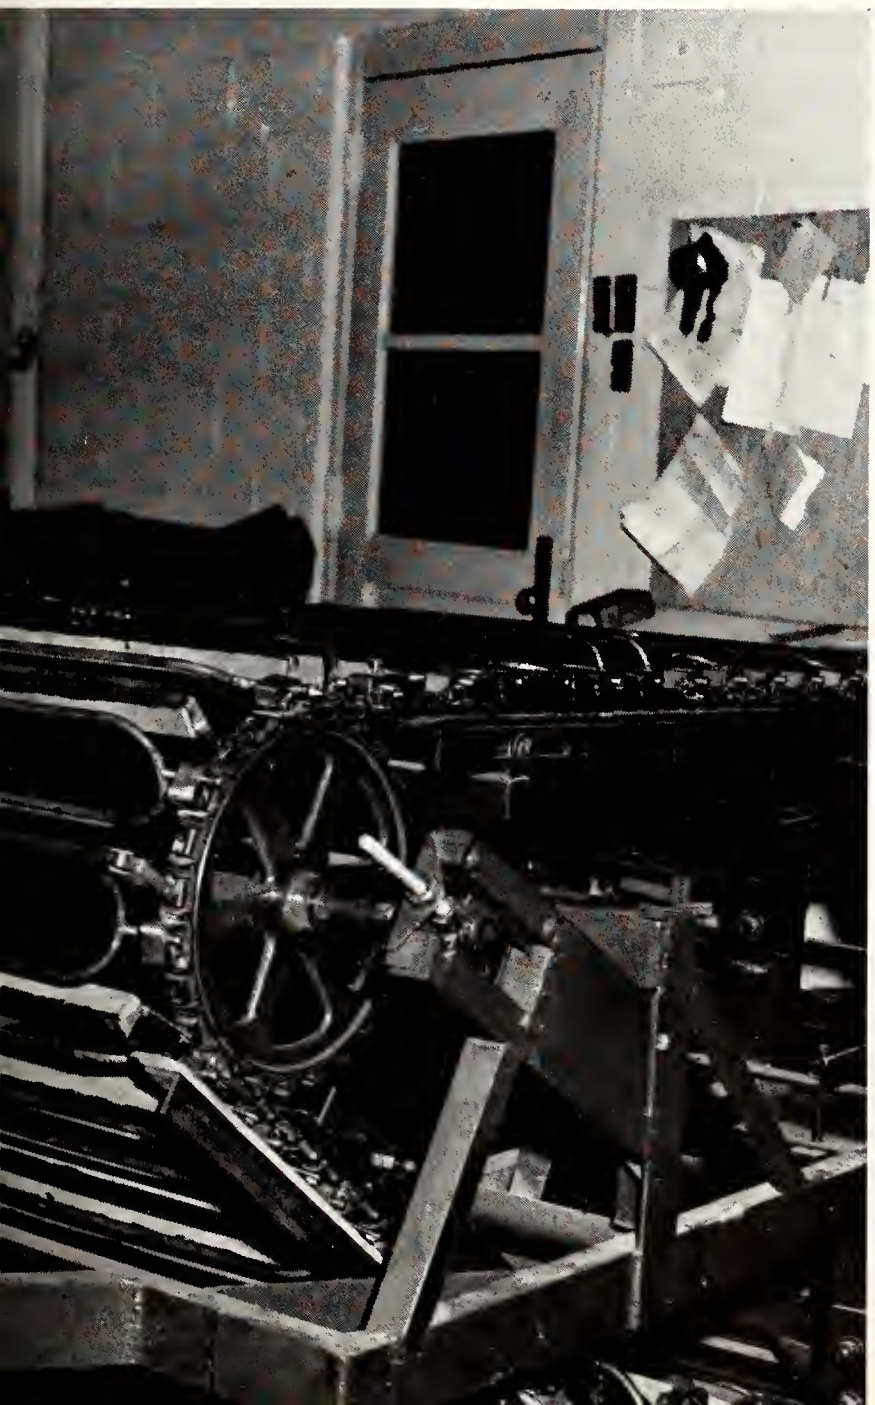
Because the College is convinced that the best scientific training is the path to this goal, ag majors are provided with a very real and practicable lab in the form of the various university farms. These farms include not only livestock, but experimental and demonstrational fields as well.

The present curricula program enables ag students to study in any one of three basic areas: agricultural business, agricultural science, or general agriculture, all leading to the bachelor of science degree. In addition to these four-year programs, the College also offers a two-year terminal course and a short course program in agriculture which permits students taking only two years of university work in a number of electives.

A fundamental understanding of the basic physical, biological, and social sciences as they apply to agriculture and conservation, a broad educational background, and technical knowledge for specialization is what the College of Agriculture offers to its students.

The maintenance and care of farm machinery—such as this experimental asparagus harvester—are important factors in efficient production.

Agriculture short course students Mike Rogers and Jim Creger concentrate on the care of ornamental plants as part of their studies.



Clarence Lewis, associate professor of horticulture, conducts a class on a tour of the campus's wide selection of shrubs.

The intracacies of economic curves are given significance and importance to students of business and economics through intensive study in the College of Business and Public Service.

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS AND PUBLIC SERVICE

Visual aids are often employed in the study of social work to acquaint students with many aspects of community life.

Techniques of drafting are necessary prerequisites to the successful application of principles learned in landscape architecture and urban planning.

One of the most all-encompassing colleges of the University is that of Business and Public Service. For whether the student is banging a typewriter, clattering dishes, cleaning a pistol, or struggling with a profit and loss statement, he can call this college his own.

The College of Business and Public Service, directed by Dean Alfred Seelye, has the largest enrollment of any at Michigan State and is composed of two divisions; business administration and public service.

Those students in the business administration program may study and explore their interests in such varied, yet related, fields as accounting and financial administration, marketing and transportation administration, personnel and production administration, insurance law and real estate, business education and office administration, economics, and hotel, restaurant and institutional management.

Students enrolled in the public service division may concentrate in the areas of police administration and public safety, political science, urban planning and landscape architecture, or social work.

Dr. Alfred L. Seelye, Dean of Business and Public Service.

Students in business services become adept in the techniques of business machines.

Construction began this year on the elaborate Eppley Center for graduate studies in business east of Shaw hall on Shaw Lane.

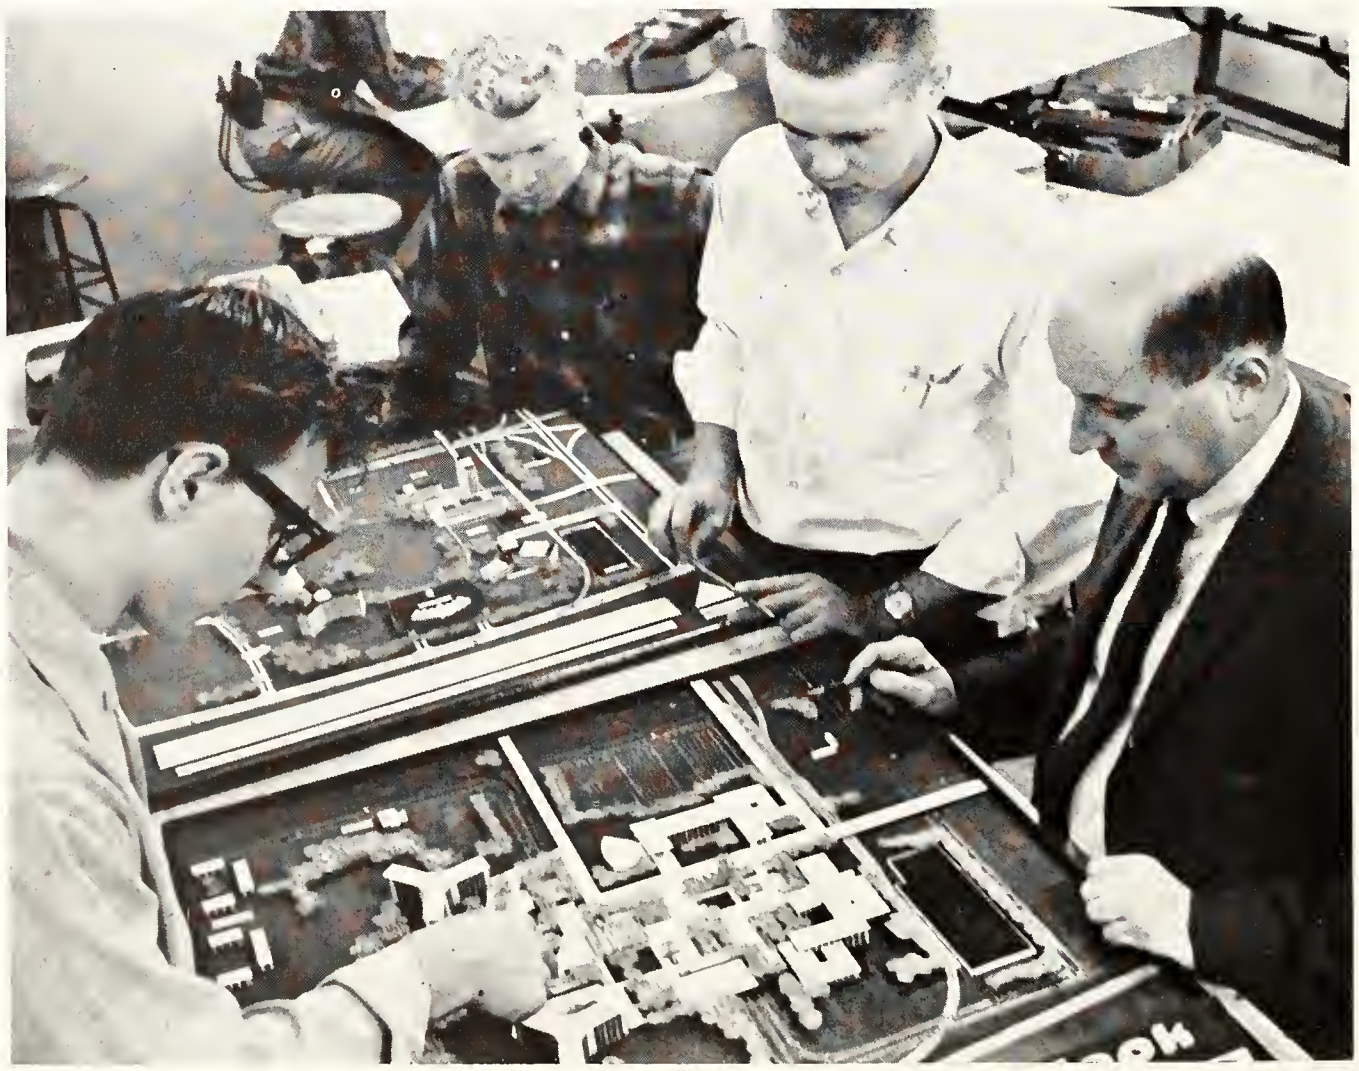
Freshmen entering the College of Business and Public Service are often overwhelmed and confused by the large array of possible majors open to them, but each soon finds his place in the major area of his developing interests.

In each division students may center their interest in technical programs, and in many departments field training is of great importance. For example, hotel majors get on-the-job training at Kellogg Center, and supervised field work is an integral part of the social work and police administration curricula.

This College also offers two-year terminal programs in banking, general business, insurance and real estate, retailing, and secretarial studies.

In short, the purpose of the College of Business and Public Service is to ready its students and equip them with the necessary knowledge for a career in the complex and changing business world of today.

The department of landscape architecture and urban planning utilizes the construction of scale models in class work to prepare students for actual problems in the field.



COLLEGE OF COMMUNICATION ARTS

Dress rehearsal of "Man and Superman" was surveyed by the critical eyes of theater students skilled in production and acting.

It takes many different kinds of students to make a niversity and the College of Communication Arts ruly has its share of these differing kinds. Within his College, the newest and smallest at MSU, are ound the school of journalism, department of adver- ising, department of television, radio and film, de- partment of speech, and general communication arts urriculum.

The College of Comm Arts, as it is known to its nembers, is headed by Fred S. Siebert. Every de- partment of the college is designed to give its stu- lents a broad background in the social sciences, iterature and science, as well as in communication nethods. The purpose of this program is to provide ducation for communications as well as education in ommunications.

This College was founded upon, and is guided by he principle that good communication is a basic ecessity to any democratic form of government and ts citizens.

Allen N. Kepke, doctoral student in speech, spends part of his study time in show direction.

ohn Crawford, head of the department of advertising, conducts popular class for advertising seniors in the ad room of the ournalism building.

Dr. Fred S. Siebert, Dean of Communication Arts.

The AP wire in the J-building is a magnet which attracts communications majors.

Students of the school of journalism can often be found trying to load a camera for press photography, interviewing for a reporting class, or worrying about a deadline for one of the campus student publications.

"Of course I want it today, if I'd wanted it tomorrow I'd have asked for it tomorrow." These words are all too familiar to ad majors, not only in their various advertising classes but from their State News accounts as well.

Beginning students in Radio-TV are often awed at the array of expensive equipment available to them in their classes at the WKAR radio and WMSB television stations. It isn't long however until swinging a boom and focusing a TV camera are second nature.

The department of speech, largest division of the College, includes study in rhetoric and public address, theatre, speech pathology and audiology, and speech education.

Theater-oriented students learn the arts of costume design and fitting as part of their training in the department of speech.

Typewriters clatter incessantly in the two reporting labs in the Journalism building as journalism students pound out their stories.

The fully-equipped studios of WMSB-TV provide laboratory facilities for television students in producing and directing their shows.

Students of broadcasting gain valuable experience before the microphone as a part of required class work.

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION

The field of education is the largest and one of the most important in our modern world. It is the professional educator who trains all of our future citizens whether they shall be scientist, lawyer, machinist, plumber, or president.

Under the leadership of Dean Clifford E. Erickson, the College of Education provides professional education programs for elementary and secondary teachers, instructors in colleges, and adult educators. It also provides for the professional preparation of personnel who offer leadership of special services in the educational system, such as counselors, principals, superintendents, supervisors, or visiting teachers.

With an enrollment of almost 3,000 this College is doing its part in solving the teacher shortage.

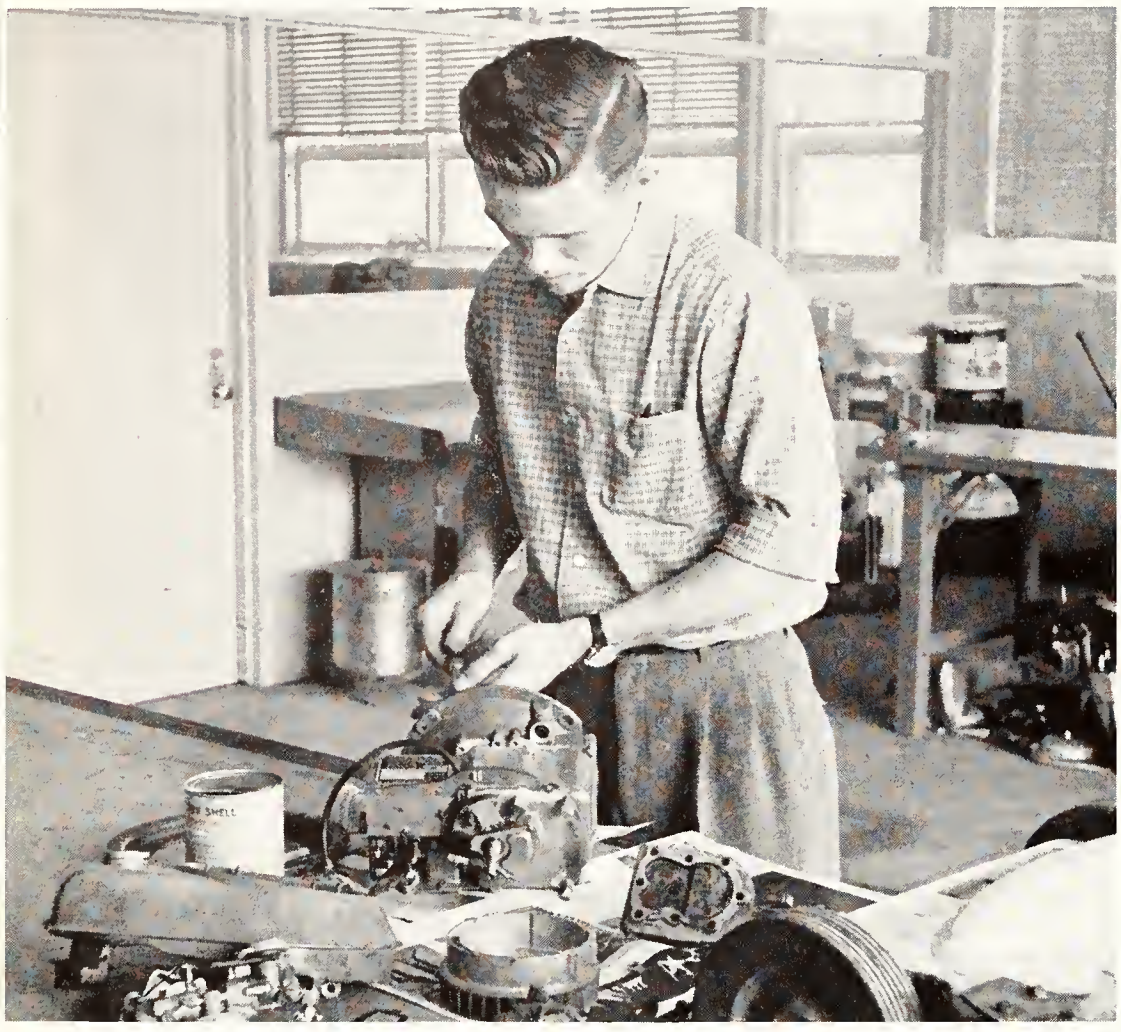
Dr. Clifford E. Erickson, Dean of Education.

Student teaching is required in all curricula, including mechanical and industrial arts. This class is being conducted at East Lansing Junior High School.

Believing that the actual experience of teaching is necessary for a complete education, the MSU College of Education provides for laboratory experiences through local school systems. Each prospective is able to profit from a realistic educational experience which would be impossible to duplicate in a campus school.

Each student teacher spends one full term working in a particular school system. He lives in the community and is to teach with a supervising teacher during this term. His responsibility is viewed broadly and includes involvement in civil and community undertakings and after-school work with boys and girls. In short, by living the life of a teacher, he finds out just what the job of being a teacher is, he knows what to expect after graduation.

Elementary education majors are trained in many fields, including art and design, to round out their skills for teaching use in the lower grades.



Well-equipped metal working shops offer men students of industrial arts an opportunity to find practical use for the principles learned in the classroom.

The spacious lounge in the Education building provides a setting for informal discussion groups and between-class studying.

The circular Kiva in the Education building is a popular attraction for visitors and an ideal setting for large classes such as FE 200 and 301.

Beginning this fall student teachers were no longer graded by the 4.0 system but instead were given marks of passing or not passing.

In addition to the laboratory experiences offered to all students enrolled in the on-campus program, a new experimental program for elementary school teachers is being conducted in cooperation with Michigan junior colleges and public school systems. This program provides for three years of supervised classroom experience. The undergraduate training extends over a five year period, but a salary is paid to the intern teacher for two of these years.

Students in most fields of secondary education are granted degrees from two colleges: the College of Education and the College of the student's subject-matter major. A least 30 credits in education, including student teaching, are required for certification.

The College of Education includes departments of Guidance and Counseling Training, Higher Education, Secondary Education, Elementary Education, Physical Education, and Administrative Education. Each of these departments provide specialized training for its students.

Students of this College are given additional interest in studying and discussing the field through the education clubs and honoraries. Independent and individual study and projects are recommended and encouraged.

The Instructional Materials Center in the Education building offers many materials from children's books to visual aids on all levels for the use of budding teachers.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

Dr. John D. Ryder, Dean of Engineering.

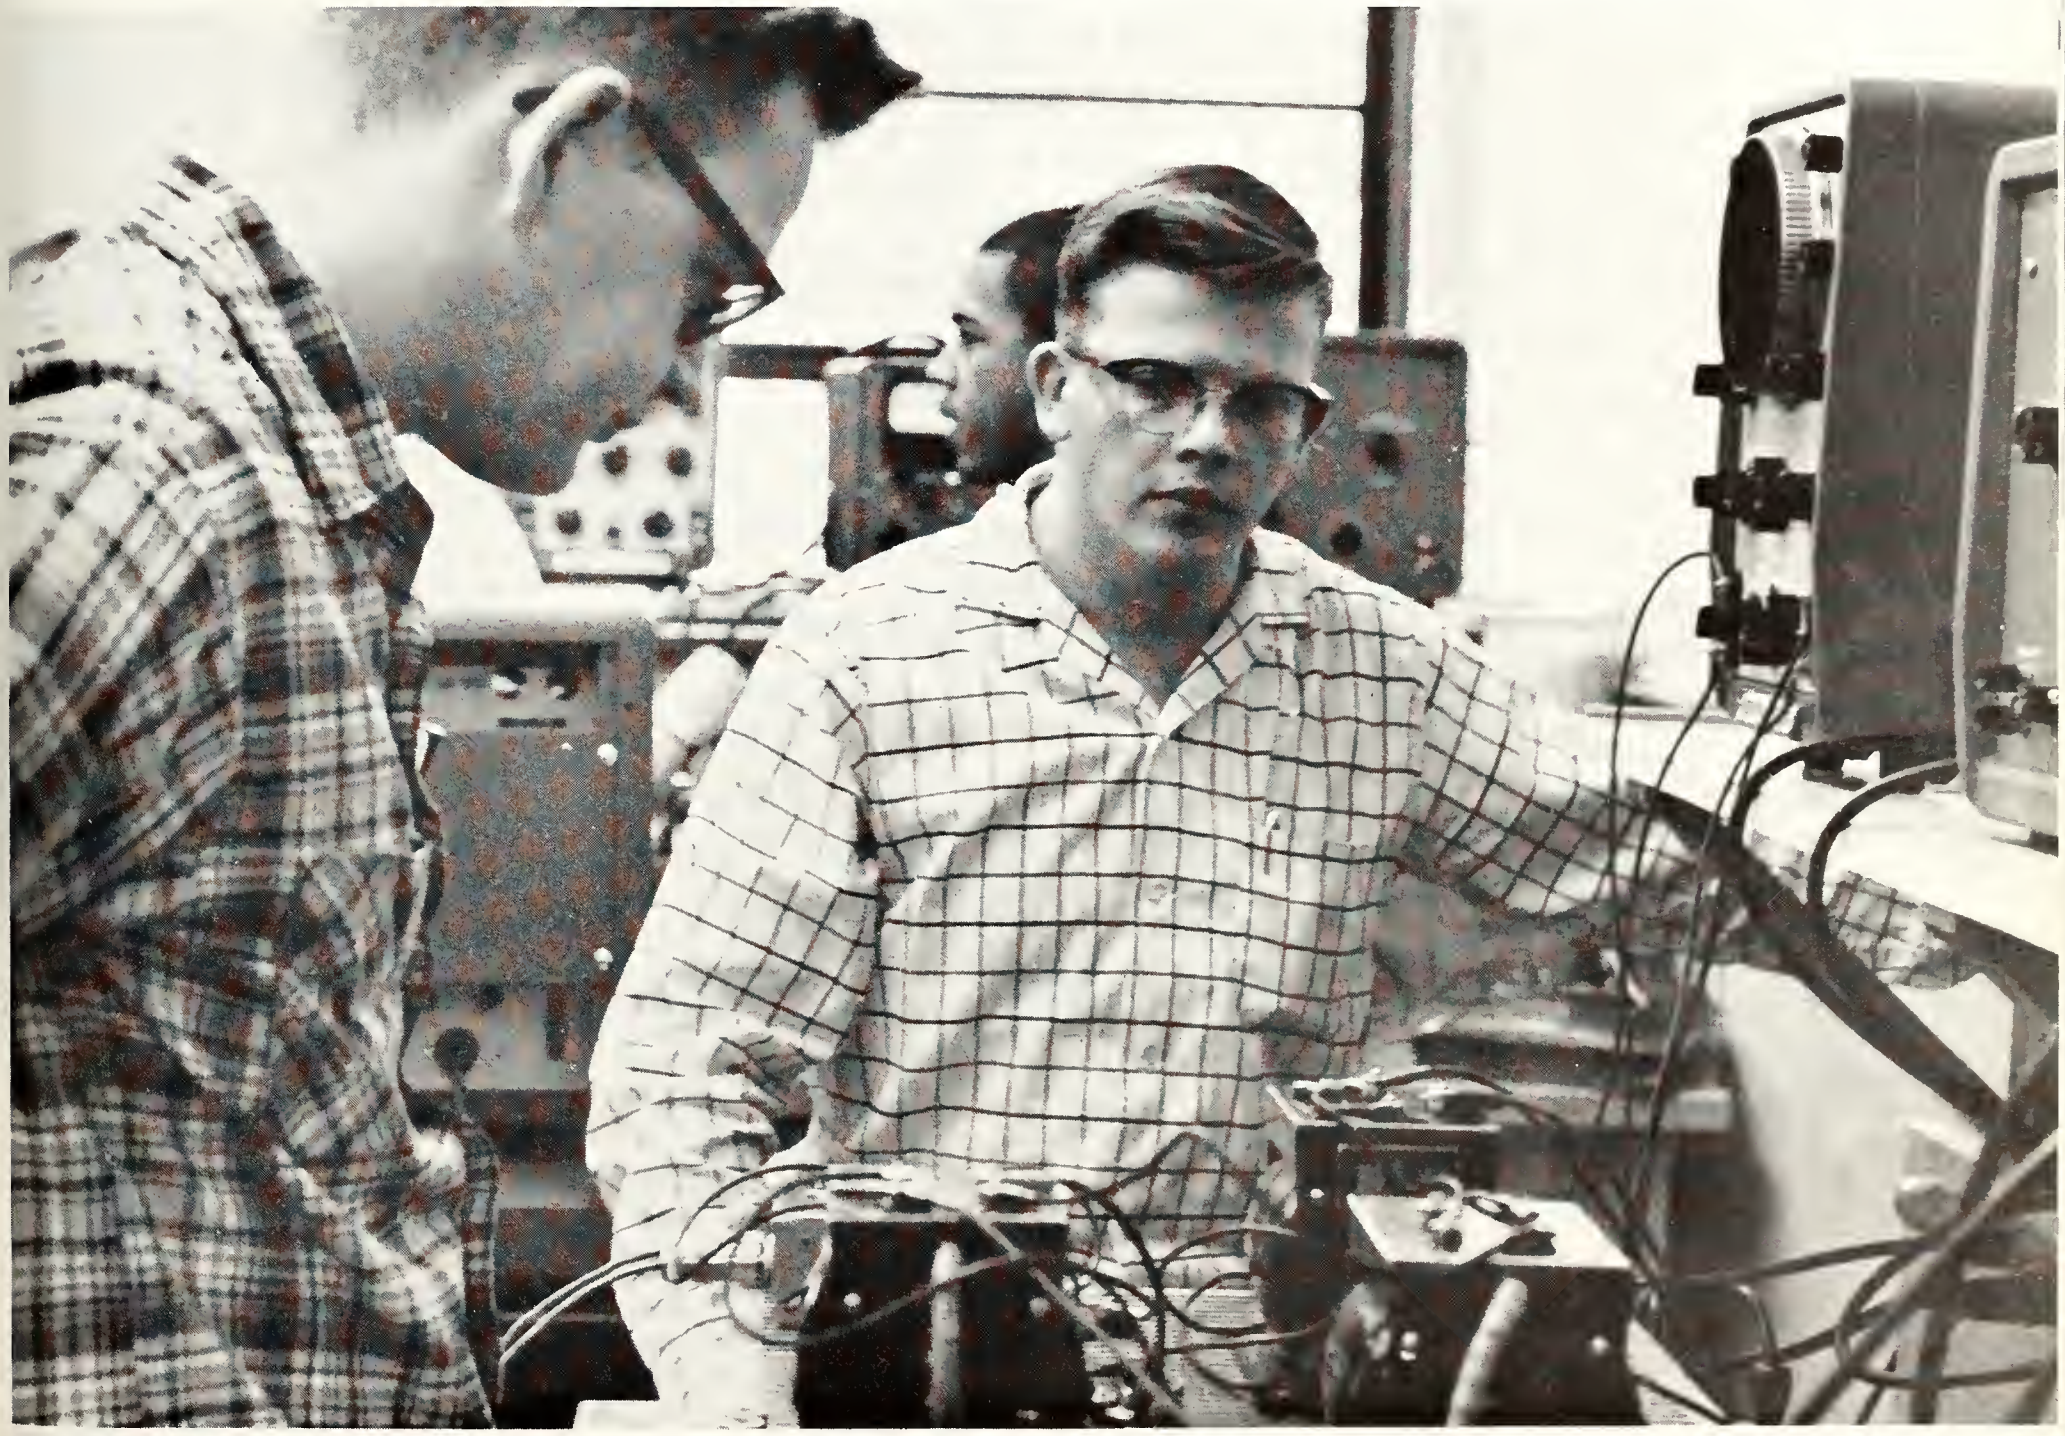
Graduate assistant William Saunders supervises the undergraduate unit operations laboratory from a balcony in the Chemical Engineering building.

The goal of the College of Engineering is to develop the abilities of its students along lines which will allow him to progress with the advancing field of engineering and to lead a useful professional and private life.

Since engineering deals with the science and art of employing nature's forces and materials, energy, and men for the ultimate benefit of mankind, the engineering programs are planned to provide the engineering student with a firm knowledge and understanding of the fundamental engineering sciences, as well as the engineering methods in applying them for the benefit of mankind. In addition, each student is urged to develop his skill in communication and his ability to work with others.

Under the leadership of Dean John D. Ryder, the College offers courses in seven related fields: applied mechanics, chemical, civil and sanitary, electrical, mechanical, metallurgical, and agricultural engineering.

Seniors Harold Wooten and Charles Perry study the characteristics of a speed control system as part of their studies in electrical engineering.



H. C. Kocher, doctoral candidate from Delhi, India, concentrates on his apparatus to determine turbulence intensity around a cylinder as part of his research for a degree in applied mechanics.

The setting up experiments in engineering often takes as much skill and patience as actual research.

Dr. Shosei Serata, assistant professor of civil engineering, and Joginder Anand, doctoral candidate in engineering study the effect of nuclear fallout on the behavior of structural materials.

The College of Engineering, in cooperation with the College of Science and Arts, now offers a five-year program in engineering for international service which leads to two degrees, Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Arts. This program is designed to serve the need of students preparing for engineering careers in foreign lands.

The program for the first two years is the same as the usual engineering program. In the third, fourth, and fifth years, the remaining engineering courses are pursued along with liberal arts courses in foreign languages, foreign studies, and history appropriate to student's chosen foreign region. Courses in economics, geography, political science, religion, and sociology are among the electives available.

Students in textiles and clothing delve into problems of design and construction with painstaking attention to detail.

COLLEGE OF HOME ECONOMICS

Dr. Thelma E. Porter, Dean of Home Economics.

The College of Home Economics at MSU is one of the largest in the United States. For more than sixty years it has been engaged in the education of young people in this field of study and is recognized as a leader among the colleges and universities throughout the nation for the excellence of the program it offers to its students. Today this College is rated among the top three of the country in regard to the quality of its research program.

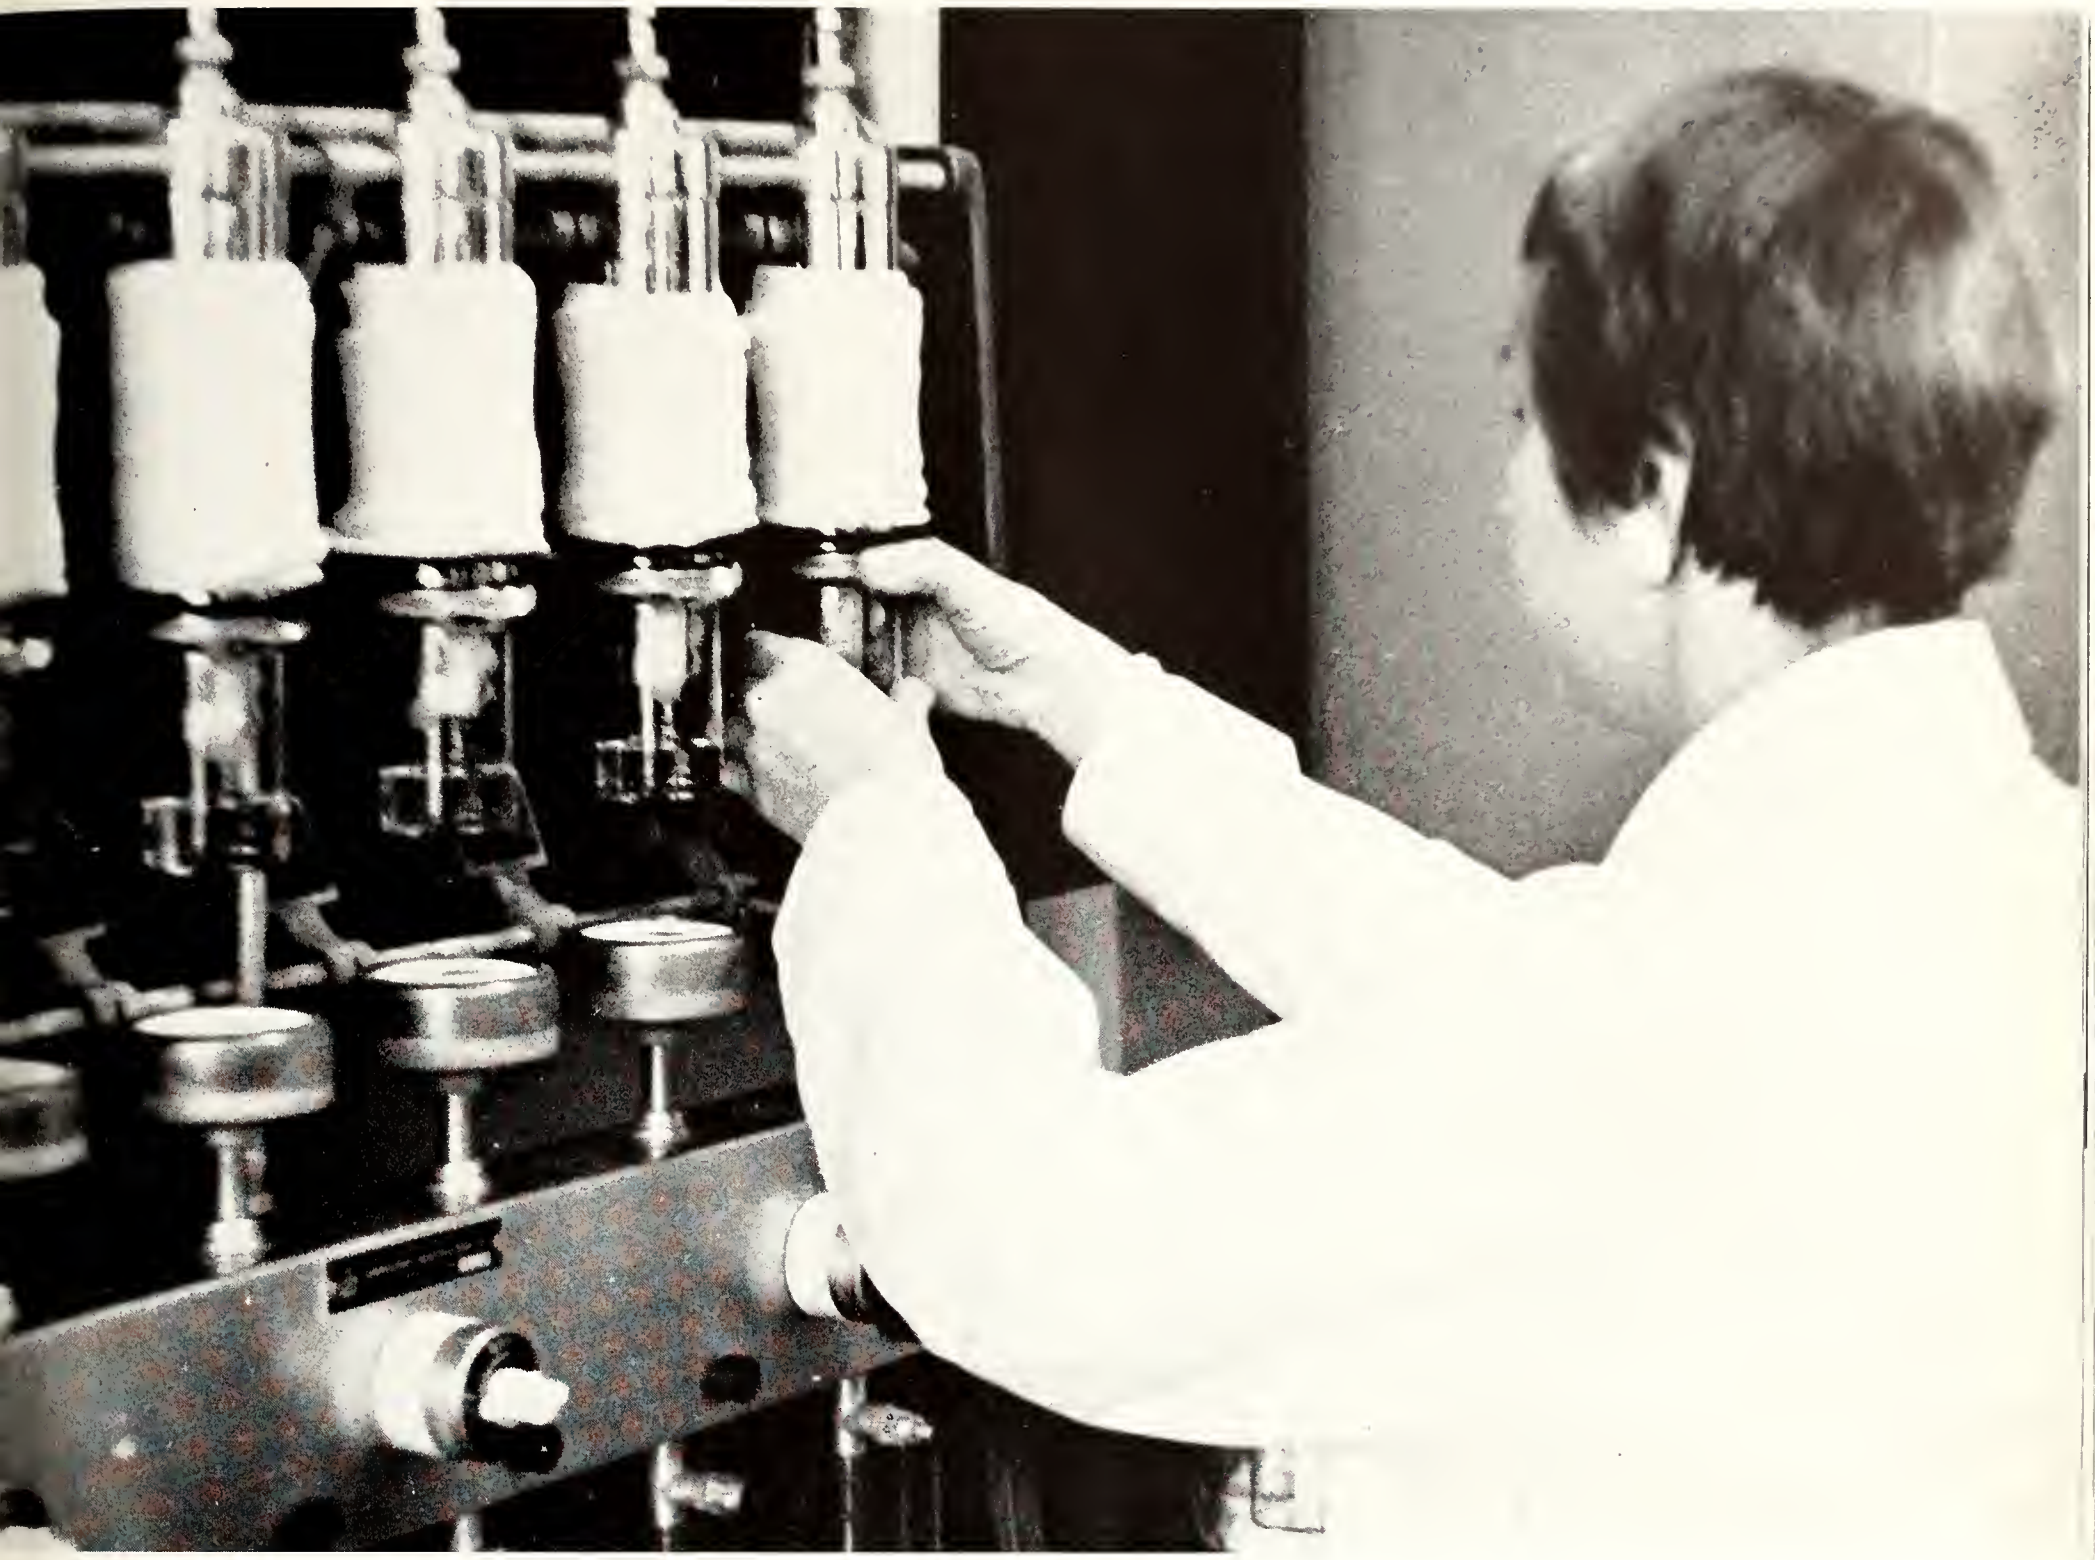
Home economics is indeed a broad field of study, focusing not only on the home and family, but upon the individual as well. Under the direction of Dean Thelma E. Porter, the MSU College of Home Economics offers opportunity for study in such varied fields as foods, nutrition, child development, family relations, home management, family economics, clothing, textiles, applied art, housing and home furnishings, household equipment, and institution administration.

Students in child development spend several hours weekly at the Spartan Nursery observing pre-school children as part of their course work in understanding young children.

Students of dietetics study animal feeding with laboratory rats on both advanced undergraduate and graduate levels.

The College of Home Economics cooperates with the School of Hotel, Restaurant and Institutional Management by offering course work in institutional textiles for its majors. Here the class is taught by Mrs. Stephania Winkler.

Miss Jean Stange conducts a class in applied design for students interested in the relation of design to daily use.



The complexities of a fat extraction apparatus are among those which candidates for the Ph.D. degree in nutrition such as Esther Brown must master and interpret as part of their research.

For three weeks, sometime during her junior or senior year, every home economics major comes face to face with the actual problems involved in home management. Living in the university home management residence each girl learns from practical experience the managerial role of the homemaker. This is the time when she must put to use all of the principles of managing a home which she has been studying and reading about.

With their goal of constantly improving living for families and individuals, majors are continually called upon to combine their knowledge of the physical, biological, and social sciences with their knowledge of art and tasteful surroundings.

To prepare young women for their future roles as homemakers, professional women, and citizens is the express purpose of the College of Home Economics.

From the time each student hopefully places her first attempt at roast beef in the oven to the last time she closes her locker in the Home Ec building, each woman has been given the opportunity to observe many aspects of her field.

She may have been able to see first-hand the college nursery school, to study management practices in the university cafeteria or one of the residence halls, to experience field training in retailing and interior design, or to perform experimental laboratory work in foods, nutrition, and textiles.

Miss Rita Fuszek, assistant professor of music, is one of the many accomplished musicians qualified to give group and individual instructions to talented students.

COLLEGE OF SCIENCE AND ARTS

The principle upon which the College of Science and Arts is founded is a basic belief that a democratic society can function well only in an enlightened one in which the individual citizen has an understanding of its diverse elements and is able to make sound judgments on crucial issues.

Students of this college are given the opportunity to cultivate a wide acquaintance with science, literature, philosophy, history, and social institutions together with a basic knowledge of one field to the end that they might become effective participants in our democratic way of life. Equipped with the largest staff of any college in this University, it is constantly evaluating and improving the standards of its programs.

Research in microbiology is guided in all steps by the watchful eyes of thoroughly trained instuctors.

Dr. Lloyd C. Ferguson, Dean of Science and Arts.

This Beta-ray spectrometer, located in the Physics-Mathematics Building, is used to study radioactive nuclei and the low energy properties of nuclear transitions.

Activities in the department of art center around practical application of skills learned as well as theory. Here Janice Cohn puts finishing touches on a puppet in arts and crafts.

To facilitate the administration of the many and varied activities of the College, the various departments and schools have been organized into five divisions, all under the leadership of Dean Lloyd C. Ferguson. From these five divisions, Biological Sciences, Fine Arts, Language and Literature, Mathematical and Physical Sciences, and Social Sciences, students may obtain either a departmental or divisional major.

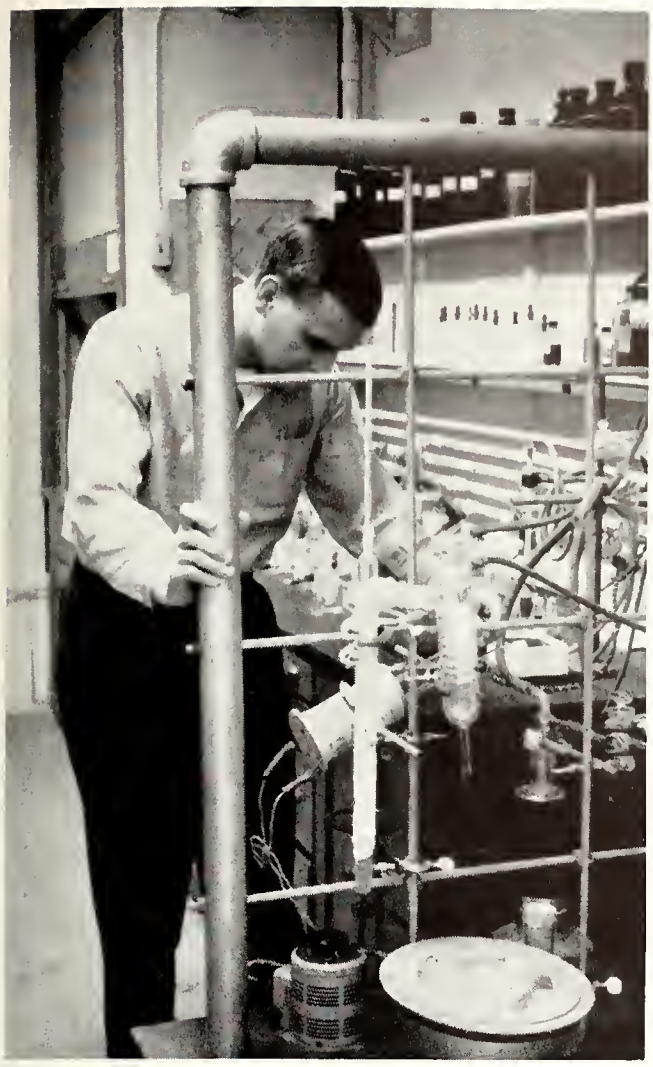
Both evening and off-campus programs, either for credit or non-credit, are provided by the College in cooperation with the Evening College and Continuing Education Service.

Ceramic students enjoy the benefits of modern versions of the ancient potter's wheel as they fashion various objects in Kresge Art Center.

The College of Science and Arts functions in a three-fold manner in the educational program of the University: by serving as a prime source of the many courses which contribute to a liberal education; by offering courses of a scientific and cultural nature basic to the programs of the several professional colleges; and by providing programs for the students with a major in the college which combine a liberal education with concentrated study in the several fields of the humanities, the social sciences, and the mathematical and natural sciences.

As an example, resources of the Colleges of Engineering and of Science and Arts are utilized in a special program which enables engineers to train for careers in foreign countries.

Dr. Hans Lampl, director of MSU orchestras and the Opera Workshop, takes the MSU Symphony through a fast movement in the Music Building rehearsal room.



Scientific research is the backbone of learning for both students and faculty of the sciences.

Students of geology count on expert assistance such as that offered by graduate assistant Norman Winegard in determining the location and properties of minerals.

COLLEGE OF VETERINARY MEDICINE

Middle age brings special problems to cows. To offset the wear and tear on teeth, an experimental process of capping them with stainless steel was used in the College for the first time in Michigan to prolong life and milk production.

Dr. Willis W. Armistead, Dean of Veterinary Medicine.

The College of Veterinary Medicine, organized under the leadership of Dean Willis W. Armistead, is composed of five departments: Anatomy, Microbiology and Public Health, Surgery and Medicine, Physiology and Pharmacology, and Veterinary Pathology. Also included is the School of Medical Technology.

The Vet School, with its headquarters in Giltner Hall, offers a comprehensive six year curriculum leading to the degree of Doctor of Veterinary Medicine (DVM).

No different than any other medical school, candidates for admission to the professional program in Veterinary Medicine are screened and interviewed extensively with a limit of only 64 new students being accepted each year.

The professional veterinary program provides not only an excellent basic medical education, but also training in diagnosis, disease prevention, medical treatment, and surgery. Graduates therefore are qualified for a great variety of careers in this growing profession. There is a current shortage of veterinarians in the United States, and the demand is expected to increase. Michigan State University graduates can qualify for salaried positions or for licensing as private practitioners in any state in the Union.

Because of the perisisting shortage of medical technologists and the increasing importance of their work, the MSU School of Medical Technology is continually seeking ways to expand and better its program. The med tech program, four years of college and one year of internship, prepares its graduates for a variety of positions.

Skill and sensitivity are the neeessary requirements for a successful veterinary surgeon.

Dr. David T. Clark's parasitology lab sessions concentrate on the influence of parasites on living organisms.

Students and staff members assist in the Small Animal Clinic which is a treatment center for thousands of animals in central Michigan.

As are all other Michigan State Students, future veterinarians spend their first two years on campus enrolled in the University College. These students are, however, also dually enrolled in the College of Veterinary Medicine. The number of students accepted into the pre-veterinary program is not limited. But because of the limitation on the number of students admitted each year to the professional program in veterinary medicine, completion of the pre-veterinary program does not assure admission to the professional program.

In addition to its regular academic program, the College has added to its activities by providing a considerable amount of service to the public in the area of animal disease diagnostic services and treatments. Huge numbers of examinations of serologic, microbiologic, and parasitic materials are made yearly as well as bacteriological examinations of water and milk samples.

As part of its services, the College maintains a small animal clinic in Giltner hall for the treatment of dogs, cats and other animals which are injured or infected. Thousands of animals are treated here yearly.

Anita Garric sections tissue as part of research in the pathology division on tuberculosis.

A central control room in Giltner hall is the nerve center for closed-circuit television which is used in class instruction in veterinary medicine.

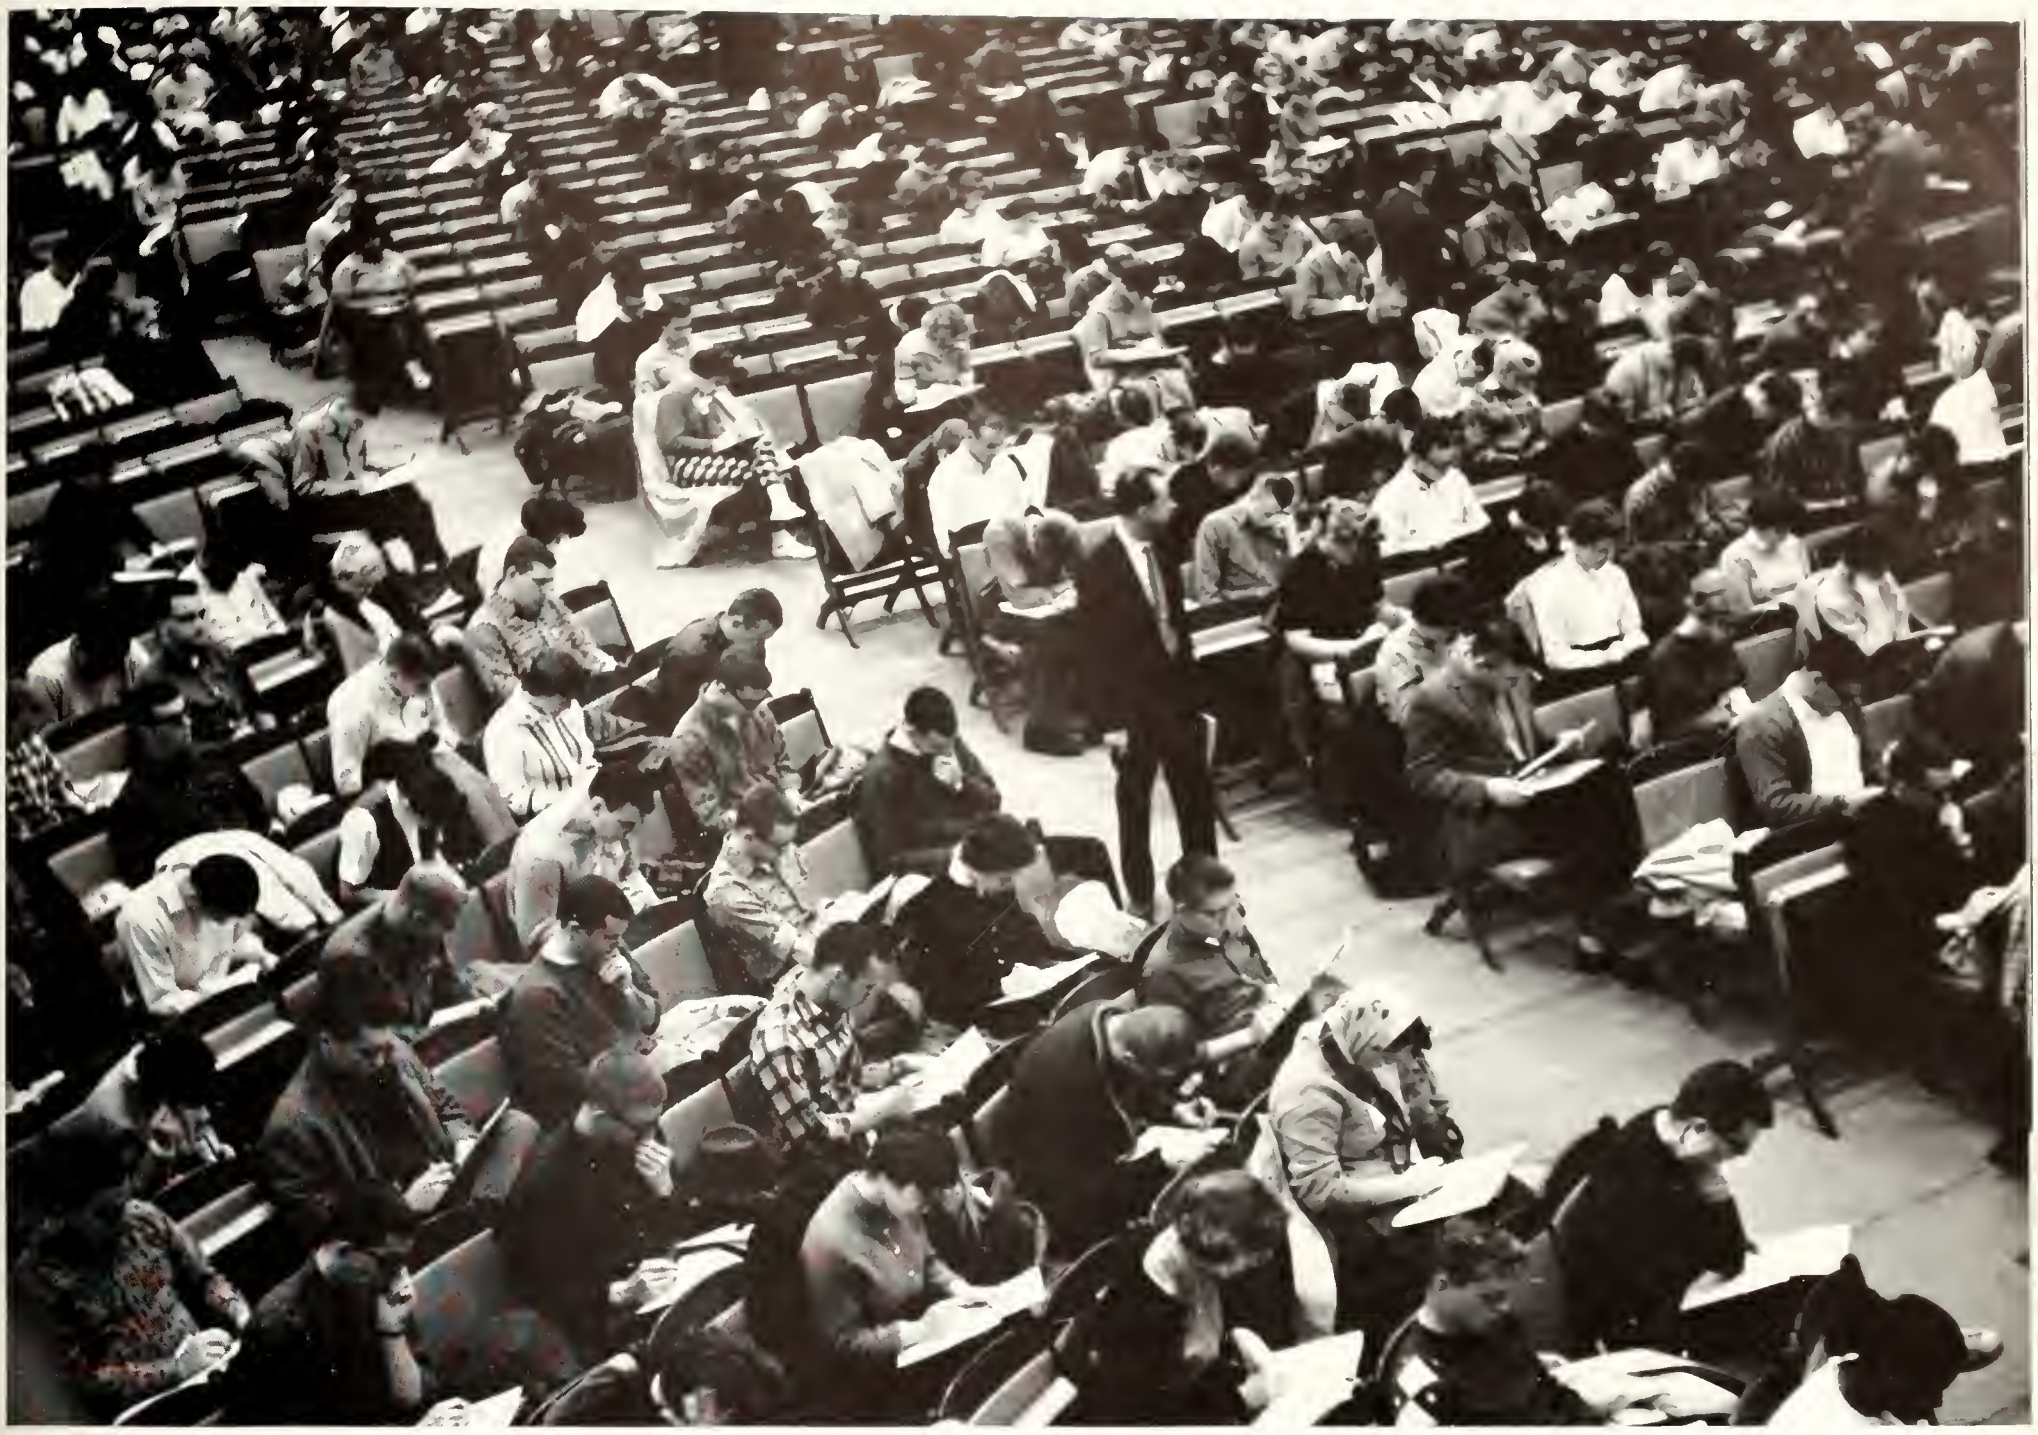
UNIVERSITY COLLEGE



One lone proctor in a sea of concentration marks University College final exams held in the Auditorium and other large lecture halls across the campus.

A new title and revamped program greeted underclass students this year as the Basic College became, more appropriately, the University College.

The function of the University College is to provide all Michigan State students with a core of general education—an experience not only desirable, but necessary, for all individuals aspiring to the status of mature human beings. The University College, with its focus on general education irrespective of vocation or specialty, is thus distinguished from any specialized education necessary for a career in a particular occupation.

While general education provides a foundation for an intelligent and satisfying human life regardless of vocational goal, it at the same time complements specialized training by placing it in perspective.

All freshmen and sophomores are enrolled in the University College, which is directed by Dean Edward Carlin, and are required to take four separate, yet integrated courses.

Communication Skills aims to improve the student's reading, to improve his writing, and to give him a sense of the forces which have created American civilization.

Scratching glass with rocks may not be every students idea of an exciting afternoon, but it is a part of the interesting biological, physical, and geological experiments of Natural Science.

Anthropology, economics, and government constitute the Social Science course, while Plato, Shakespeare, Hemingway, Philosophy, and art occupy students studying Humanities.

HONORS COLLEGE

onors College students Bill Barker, Anson Lovellette and Bill oerner pool their efforts to study for an advanced seminar.

The Honors College, directed by Stanley J. Idzerda, as created to encourage the development and chievement of all undergraduate students of su- erior academic ability. Students who finish their eshman year with a 3.5 grade average, or who at- in that average during their sophomore year, are igible to enter the Honors College program.

Once a student becomes a member of the Honors ollege, all normal requirements for graduation, ther than total number of credits, are waived. The rogram undertaken by the Honors College student ay include independent study with faculty guid- nce, the waiving of prerequisites for advanced or raduate courses, the attainment of credit in some urses by special physical examination, and the priv- ege of superior ability.

Honors College scholars also enjoy special priv- eges in the use of the University library, and have portunities to attend faculty seminars as well as the rious co-curricular programs arranged especially r them.

SCHOOL FOR ADVANCED GRADUATE STUDY

The new Owen Hall, completed in September, provides homes and recreation facilities for 394 men and women enrolled in the graduate school.

In response to its manifold obligations to graduate study, Michigan State University has established eight colleges authorized to give programs leading to advanced degrees. The colleges offering graduate programs are: Agriculture, Business and Public Service, Communications Arts, Education, Engineering, Home Economics, Science and Arts, and Veterinary Medicine.

The School for Advanced Graduate Studies, under the able leadership of Dean Milton E. Muelder, exercises the over-all review and supervision of the graduate education programs conducted in the several colleges, and provides leadership in the evolving of new programs as well as insuring standards for existing programs consistent with the highest national standards.

MSU's graduate school offers the doctorate and master's degrees in 65 departments and the master's in an additional 10 departments.

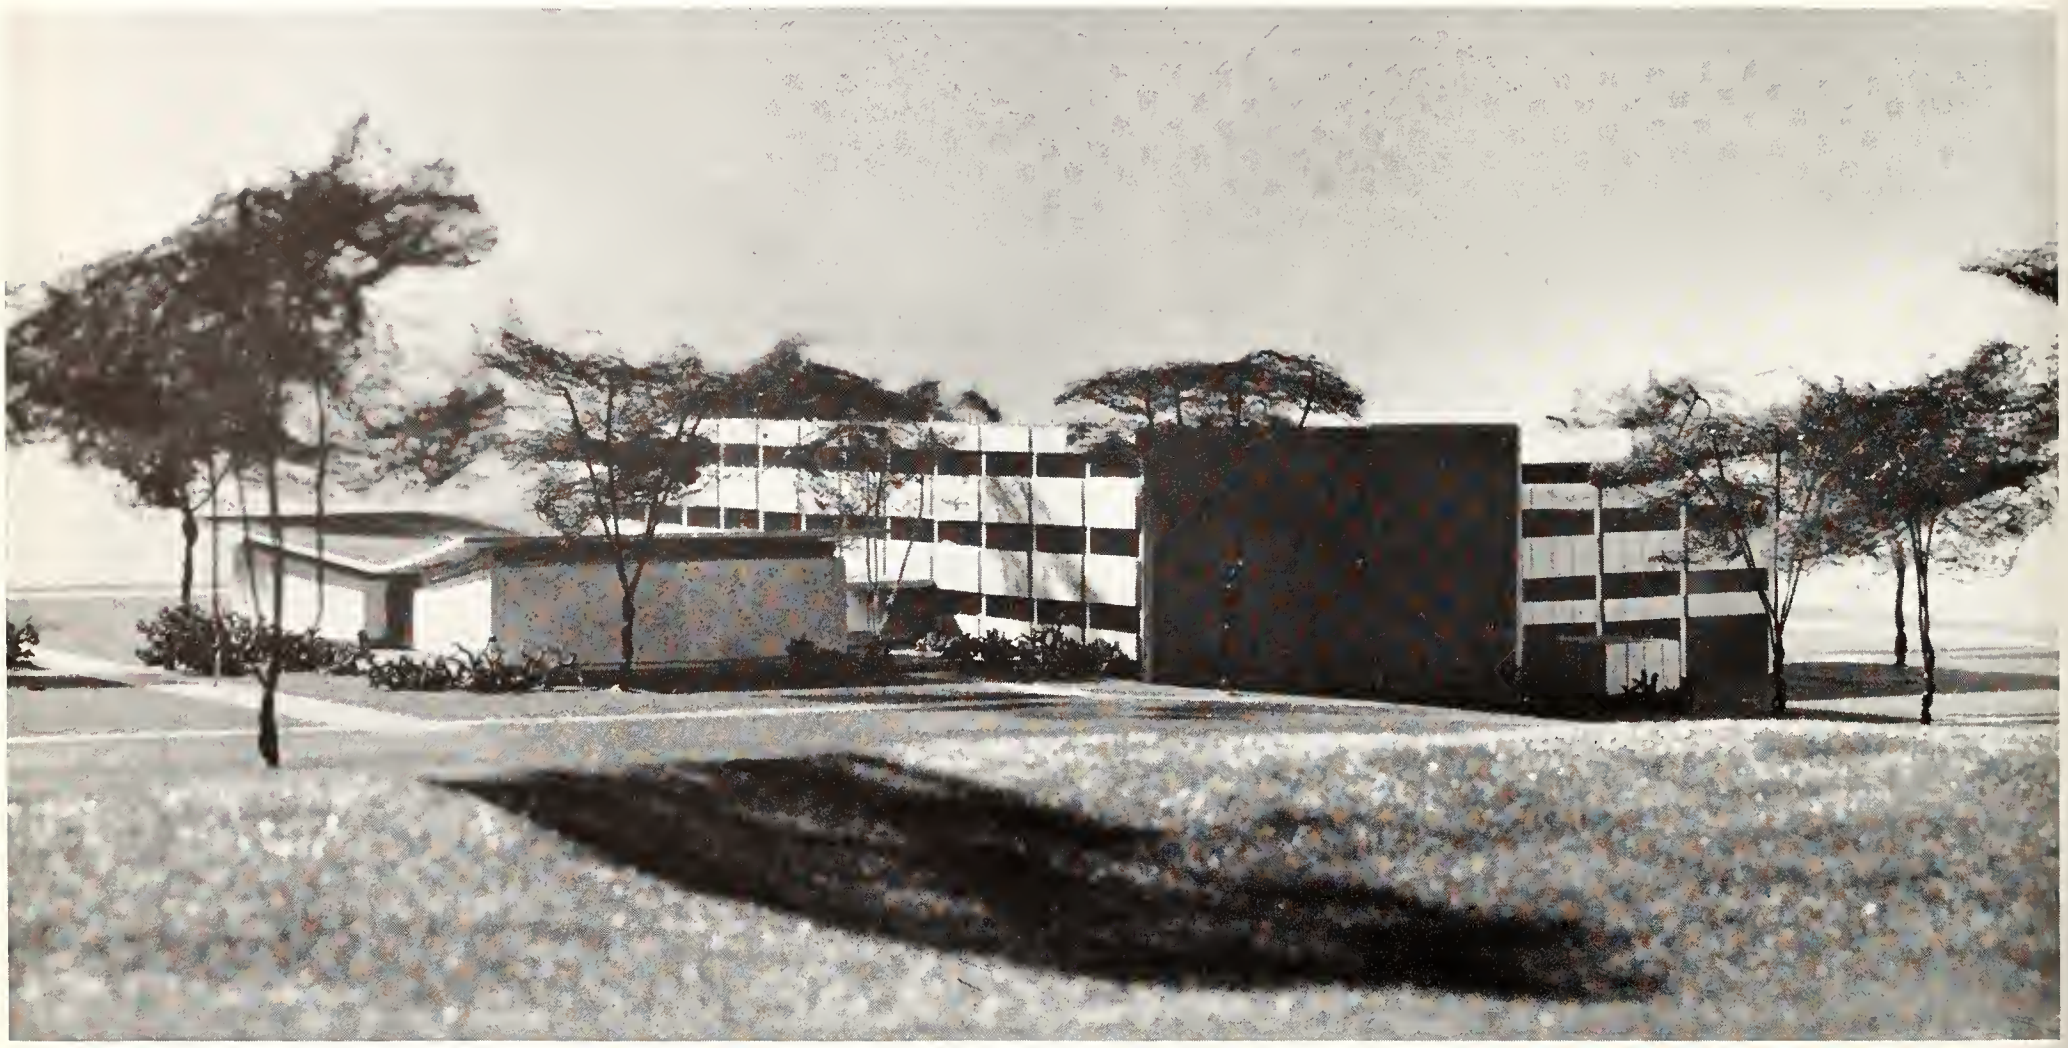
Each college of the University has developed its graduate programs consistent with the highest professional standards of the respective fields. Academic programs are in the hands of competent faculty enjoying national and international reputations.

Michigan State University is not only responsive to the spirit of the times, but its faculty and administration take pride in exercising leadership to make learning, teaching, and research a more meaningful and interesting intellectual endeavor. The variety of intellectual opportunities and the unique challenges of MSU are indeed found in the graduate programs offered by the several colleges.

Through meetings and recreation, the presence of the new Owen graduate dorm has enabled graduate student-faculty relations to become more informal and friendly.

Many graduate students combine both work and study by becoming graduate assistants. Here William Hight, grad. assistant in radio and television, conducts a class in TV program development at WMSB-TV.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY OAKLAND



The Science and Engineering Building, now under construction on the Rochester campus, will be the center of study in these technical fields.

Dr. Durward B. Varner, Chancellor of Michigan State University Oakland.

Ever since 1959, when MSU Oakland first began its college career, the students attending this sister university of Michigan State have had the experience of studying under a different and new type of curriculum—a curriculum orientated toward a liberal arts education from a vigorous and modern point of view.

All students at MSUO devote at least 50 percent of their studying to the liberal arts. While Oakland offers degrees in business administration, engineering, teaching education, plus liberal arts, all students, with the exception of science and engineering majors, are required to develop a thorough knowledge and skill in at least one foreign language. Also mandatory for every student is a full-year sequence dealing with foreign studies. Both of these requirements are a part of the attempt to provide a liberalized curriculum for all students regardless of major.

Intense concentration is the keynote at MSUO as top-notch students participate in a new dimension of education.

The graceful arcade of Foundation Hall, MSUO's main building, form an open setting for student activities.

Like students everywhere, those on the Rochester campus indulge in between-class gab-fests.

Michigan Secretary of State James M. Hare spoke to ROTC and regular Army detachments at Pershing Memorial Day ceremonies at the Capitol in Lansing.

The ROTC program at Michigan State is comprised of the United States Army and Air Force, and consists of courses in the Basic and Senior Divisions of Army and Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps. All male students at MSU, unless they are aliens, veterans, enrolled in a short course, physically unfit, or over 23 years of age, must enroll in either the Army or Air Force program during his first 2 years in college. Upon completion of the basic course, the student may apply for admission to the advanced course which trains students for commissioning as Reserve Second Lieutenants in the U.S. Army or the U.S. Air Force.

Membership in the Arnold Air Force Society and Scabbard and Blade are just two of the honors for which advanced cadets strive. These active military honoraries provide an opportunity to socialize with fellow cadets, soon to be fellow officers.

Col. Thomas Barrett, Professor of Air Science, and Col. Merton Munson, Professor of Military Science.

Complete health facilities are offered to students through the Olin Memorial Health Center, which treats thousands of sniffles and other ailments yearly.

The center of activity at WMSB-TV is the completely equipped control room where student and professional personnel screen educational and cultural shows.

Services

The channeling of traffic is the chief headache of the Department of Public Safety.

The scope of Michigan State's services is as kaleidoscopic as that of her academic environment. Each day, she offers the benefits of research and study not only to the university community but also to thousands of communities throughout the state and the world. Communication of technical and general knowledge to those in need of help is the goal of Continuing Education. . . .

The office of admissions culls over thousands of applications yearly from high school seniors and advanced undergraduates to select the best qualified students.

Dr. Melvin C. Buschman, regional director of the continuing education service, check credentials of students in his area with Dr. William Finni, assistant director of admissions and scholarships.

ADMISSIONS AND SCHOLARSHIPS Michigan State's Admissions policy, directed by the Office of Admissions and Scholarships which is headed by Dr. Gordon A. Sabine, is to a large degree responsible for the ever-growing and higher quality of MSU enrollment.

Unlike many public institutions of higher learning, Michigan State is not required to accept every high school graduate in the state who applies. Using the method of selective admissions, the University carefully chooses its new freshmen. Although the size of the freshman class varies from year to year, depending upon the number of qualified students who apply, the standard or level of admissions remains constant.

To the most outstanding of those who are admitted each year, scholarships are awarded commensurate with ability and sometimes with need. From the ten all-expense Alumni Distinguished scholarships to small yearly stipends, hundreds of the brightest Michigan State students are given opportunities to study through scholarship grants.

Counselor David Payne combs over test scores of a troubled student with a colleague before having a conference to try to iron out the student's problems.

COUNSELING CENTER Many new students need help in adjusting to their University environment. Some may be concerned about choosing a vocation or selecting a major. Others may discover that they are having difficulty with course work. Some have personal problems.

The Counseling Center was established to give assistance to students with problems such as these. In a permissive atmosphere in which he may express his feelings and thoughts, the student is helped by the counselor to gain new insight into his problems and possible solutions.

A complete testing service is maintained, and when it is appropriate, the counselor and student may select tests to appraise abilities, interests, or personality characteristics.

The Counseling Center maintains two testing rooms where students may take one, two, or complete batteries of tests to determine personal profiles.

OLIN MEMORIAL HOSPITAL Michigan State University maintains a well-equipped, centrally located health service in the Olin Memorial Health Center. The Center has facilities for students in need of medical, acute surgical and psychiatric care. In so far as possible, the Center serves the role of the family physician while the student is on campus.

Consultation during daily office hours is given without charge and hospital care is provided free of charge, up to a total of 40 days per school year, for those students ill enough to require medical supervision and care. All medications, medical supplies, and X-ray services are provided at cost plus a reasonable handling fee.

The first stop for many patients is the completely-equipped laboratory, where blood and other tests are handled by competent technicians such as Mrs. Margaret Shick.

Mrs. Fern Decamp handles many of the x-ray patients and keeps records of thousands of films yearly.

Current job openings on campus are kept up-to-date on the popular bulletin board in the Placement Bureau waiting room.

Small individual conference rooms are made available to visiting firms for interivews with prospective employes.

PLACEMENT BUREAU A service for students wishing part-time employment while attending Michigan State University is maintained by the Student Employment Service of the Placement Bureau. This service is designed to cover all areas of student part-time employment both on and off campus.

The Placement Bureau also arranges contacts for summer employment for students. Job opportunities are solicited from prospective employers and then listed in a summer catalog according to the type or classification of job.

The Bureau provides perhaps its greatest service in the help it gives seniors in securing jobs before and after graduation. Panic-stricken or only slightly nervous seniors gratefully take advantage of the interviews the Bureau arranges with interested companies, of the up-to-date records of job opportunities, and of the annual Career Carnival and other career conferences sponsored by the Placement Bureau.

PUBLIC SAFETY AND BUILDINGS AND UTILITIES Policing and safety at MSU are the very special functions of the Department of Public Safety. Responsibility for the protection of life and property, the enforcement of local and state laws, and the general safety of students rests in the hands of the twenty-four uniformed, full-time police officers of this department.

The Department of Buildings and Utilities is in charge of campus buildings, the operation of MSU's two power plants, the utility system, and the telephone switchboards in on-campus living units.

Complete dispatching facilities in the Department of Public Safety insure fast response when an officer or an ambulance is summoned.

The Department of Buildings and Utilities handles maintenance of all campus structures, and works on the construction of various walks and buildings.

The beautiful stained-glass windows in the Alumni Memorial Chapel, as well as the Chapel itself, were all made possible through gifts to the MSU Development Fund.

ALUMNI RELATIONS With an active mailing list of almost 65,000 former students, the Alumni Relations office is MSU's way of continuing to serve its students even after graduation. This office interprets the progress and problems of MSU to alumni scattered throughout the nation.

This 48 year old office of the administration serves as a very welcome laison between the University and its long gone, and not so long gone, alumni. Another function of this office, often an invaluable one, is that of bringing alumni ideas and suggestions to the attention of the University.

The four-member staff also works with more than 100 alumni clubs, helping to coordinate projects ranging from scholarship and fund solicitation to promotion of MSU to prospective students.

Dave Fox and Marcia Finch help send out thousands of pieces of mail yearly to alumni through the alumni mailing room in the basement of Student Services building.

A. Westley Rowland, University Editor, confers with Barbara Brown, staff artist, on material for one of the many publications put out by the department of Information Services.

INFORMATION SERVICES Channeling the thousands of news items which arise in the university is the endless task of the Department of Information Services.

Director W. Lowell Treaster guides the extensive staff in disseminating educational and public service information through available media to Michigan residents. The department also supervises the university publications.

The work of the department is divided into six areas: agriculture and home economics information; continuing education information; university news bureau; photographic laboratory; sports information and the University Editor's office.

Staff members in these areas publish bulletins, plan television shows, handle news releases and photographic prints and generally take care of all information problems for the university.

Heading the long list of university publications are the two fine magazines, the "MSU Magazine" which is distributed to alumni and friends of the university, and the "MSU Reporter", circulated internally to all Michigan State employees.

Home economies extension programs on WMSB-TV are designed to assist homemakers throughout the state with problems concerning their families' health, appearance and welfare.

CONTINUING EDUCATION-EXTENSION The continuing education program is basically a projection of the University resources to those persons not regularly enrolled as students on the campus in East Lansing. This program may take the form of courses for credit, conferences, entertainment and cultural offerings, and special educational science projects.

During the past years, the University extension program registered an increase over the previous years in the number of off-campus courses. A total number of 415 courses with an enrollment of 7,848 were held. These courses were taught by many different University departments indicating the campus-wide participation in the University extension program. Six continuing education centers operate in Michigan to intensify the University services at the local level. These centers are located in Traverse City, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Benton Harbor, Pontiac, and Marquette.

WKAR engineer Rollin Dasen sets the turntable as he launches into one of the many hours of music offered on the radio station.

The control room at WMSB-TV is a popular drawing attraction for visitors of all ages.

WKAR - WMSB Experience is important in almost any field of endeavor, but for radio-TV majors it is an absolute necessity. Through the facilities of WKAR radio and WMSB-TV, university owned and operated stations, these students graduate armed with excellent experience.

WKAR provides MSU students with opportunities to work as production assistants, continuity writers, and announcers. The station operates on both AM and FM cycles to offer many programs throughout the day of music, news an information to farmers and homemakers throughout the state.

The lab for television courses is found in the WMSB-TV studios. In these courses students become acquainted with the equipment and with the headaches of producing television shows. They work with professional technicians who air many shows daily. WMSB shares channel 10 with commercial station WILX-TV of Lansing. This sharing of air time by an educational and a commercial station is an innovation in the field of television and provides a wide variety of shows to viewers throughout central Michigan.

A special seminar in MSU's Institute for Community Development is conducted for participants from Pakistan, Nepal and the Philippines. Coordinating the program is Nobel Bright, Jr., (end of table), of Michigan State's International Programs.

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAM Through agreements with foreign governments, the United States International Cooperation Administration, other governmental agencies, and private foundations, MSU maintains five major advisory groups in countries of Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

This international impact is being felt by students in both courses and research on campus. Distinguished speakers and foreign students are a part of this impact, but the international dimension is being driven ever-closer home through the classroom and the teaching of returning faculty members.

President John Hannah and Board of Trustees' chairman Connor Smith were present for the opening of the MSU-sponsored University of Nigeria in October, 1960. Leading the procession are Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, Governor-General of Nigeria and Dr. George M. Johnson, acting principal of the university.

Though a fumble to Iowa doused the scent of roses, we could still humble the Wolverines.

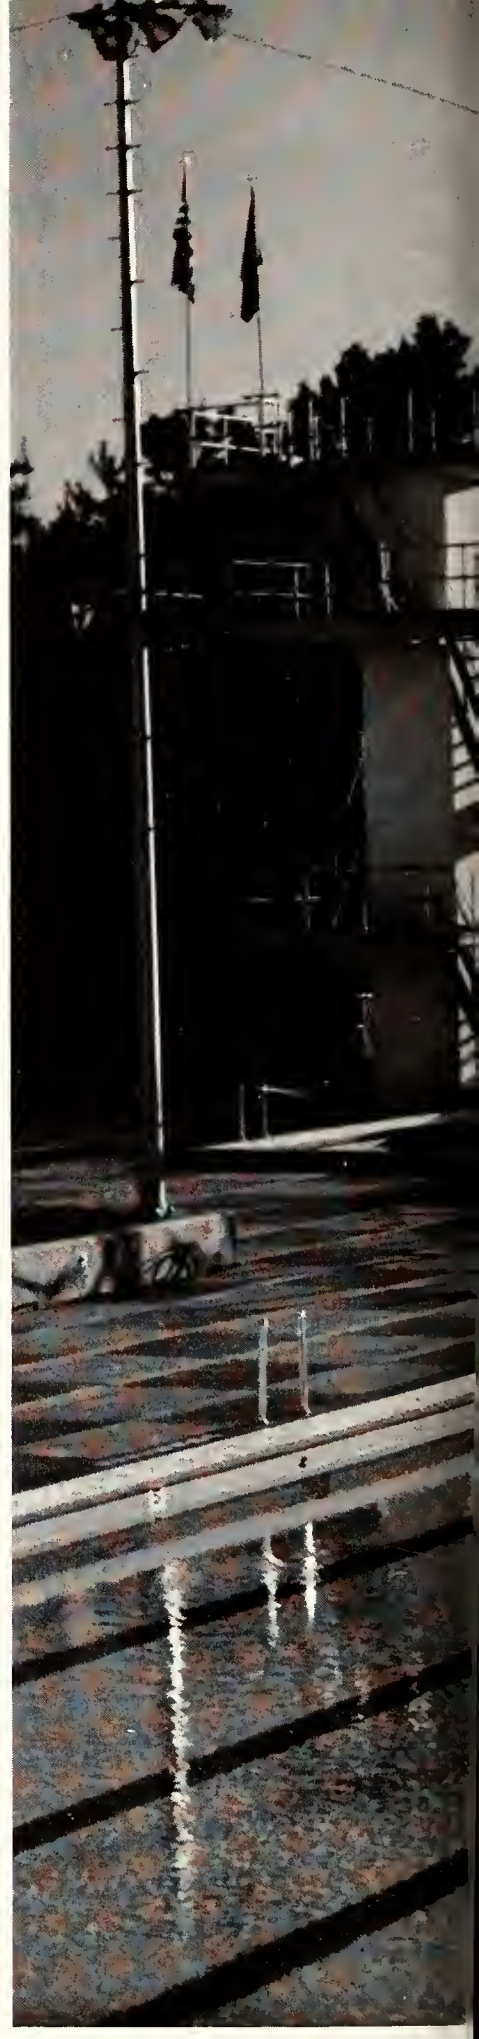
INTRAMURAL teams

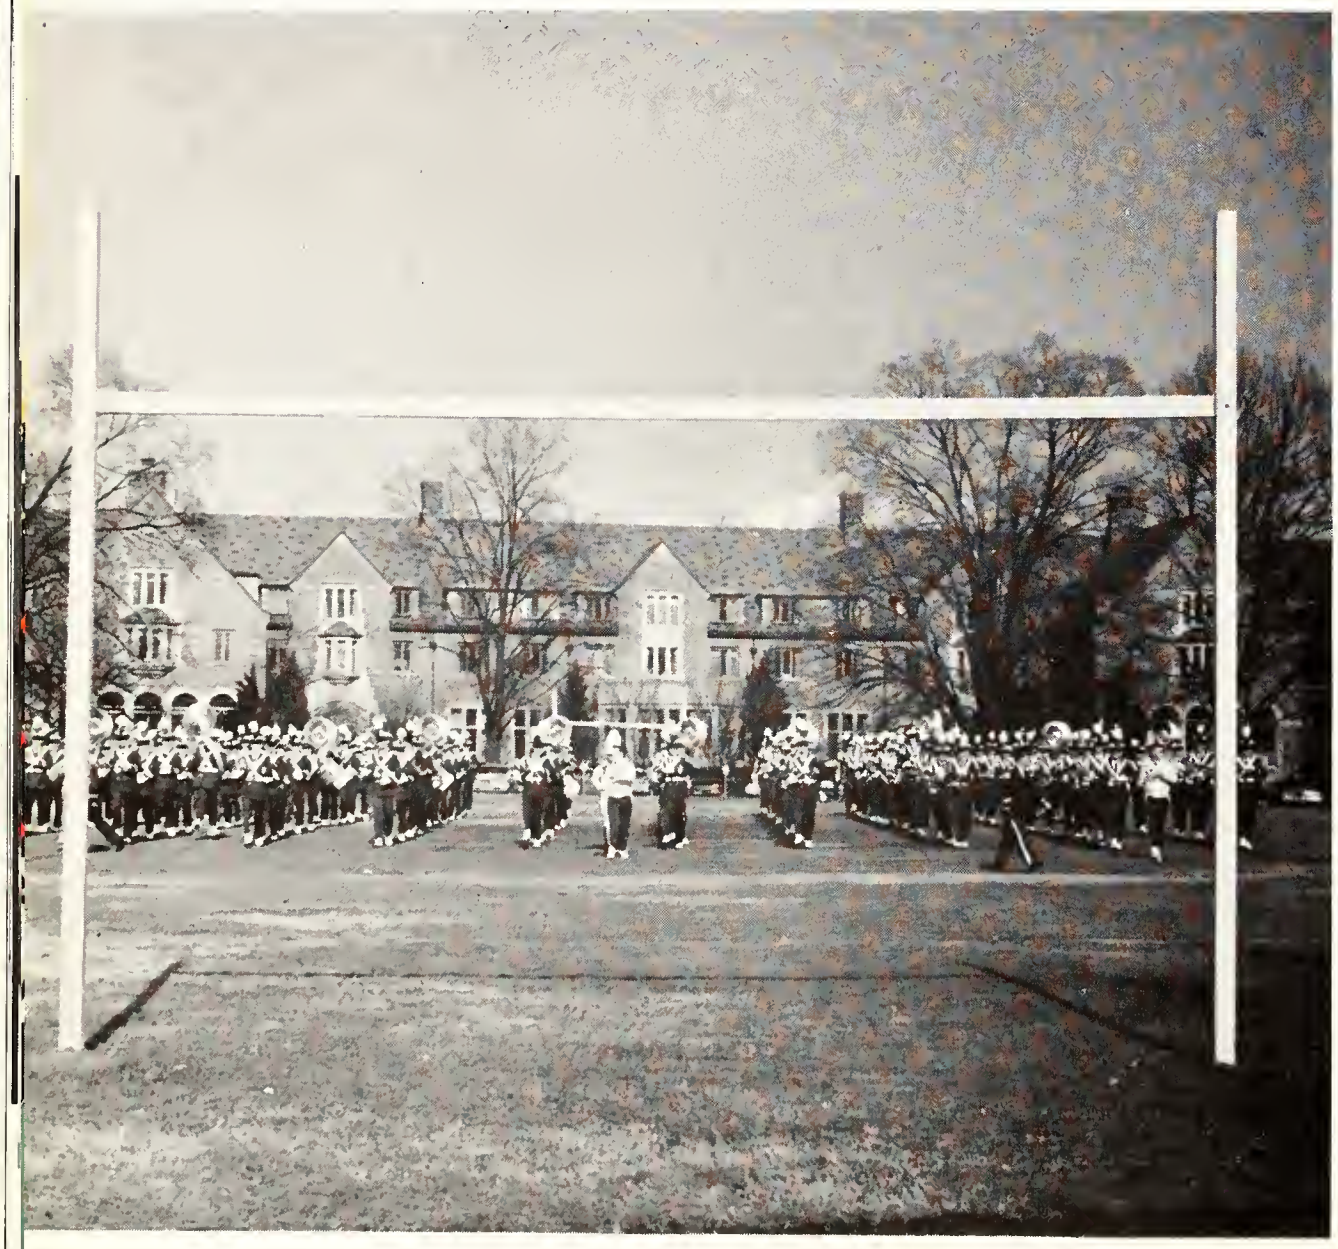
Strength and vitality of a university is often reflected by its athletic program. Michigan State University's growth into a major and important institution has been followed, and often pioneered, by the athletic program.

The same spark igniting Michigan State's post-World War II boom sparked the Spartans to a coveted position in the world of sports. Growth is greatly evident on three levels—intercollegiate, intramural and physical education. Today all are equally important and productive in the school's educational philosophy.

The intercollegiate program, the most extensive among schools in the Big 10, has produced numerous individual and team conference, national and international champions. The 1961 national champion was Norm Young, winner of a NCAA wrestling title.



The MSU Marching Band shatters Saturday-morning peace on West Circle Drive as it struts through precision numbers on the music practice field before marching to Spartan Stadium for pre-game and half-time shows.



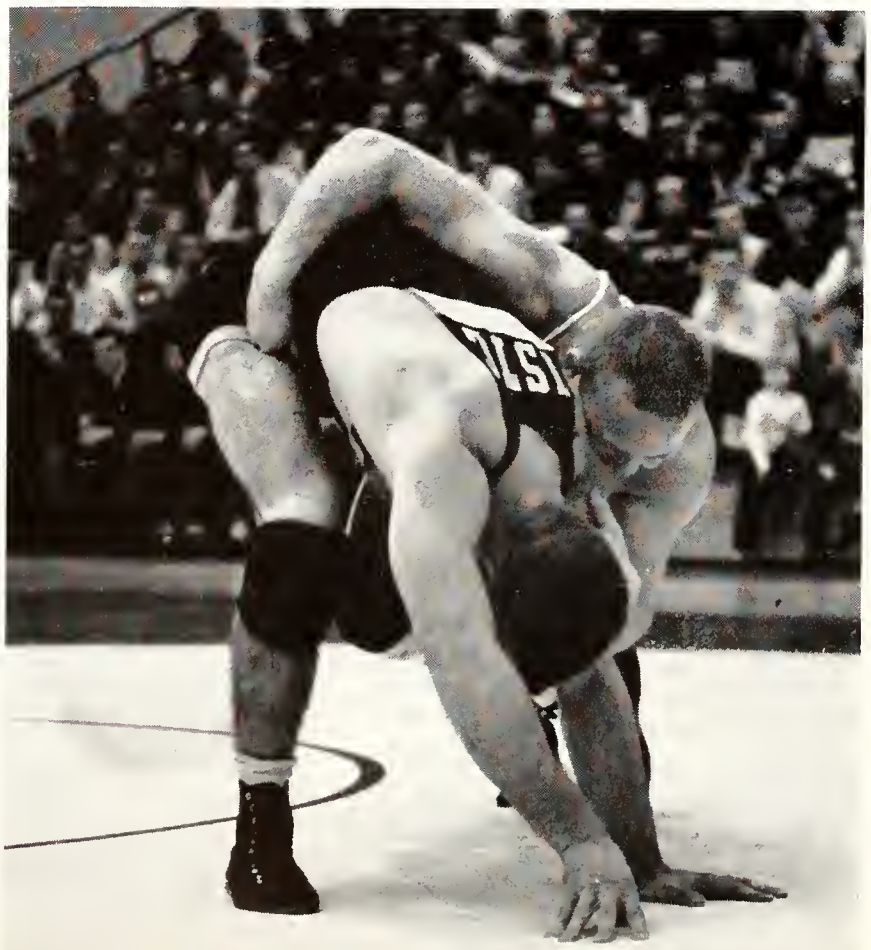
Michigan State's fine athletic facilities such as the beautiful IM pool are available for both competitive and personal enjoyment.

The grace and coordination required in gymnastics is typical of skill involved in all athletic endeavors.

Physical education classes offer a wide range of instruction in both familiar and little-known sports.

The extensive physical education program includes some co-educational courses including folk and social dancing, canoeing, bowling, tennis, hunter safety and swimming.

Michigan State grapplers drew large and interested crowds for their meets on home mats.



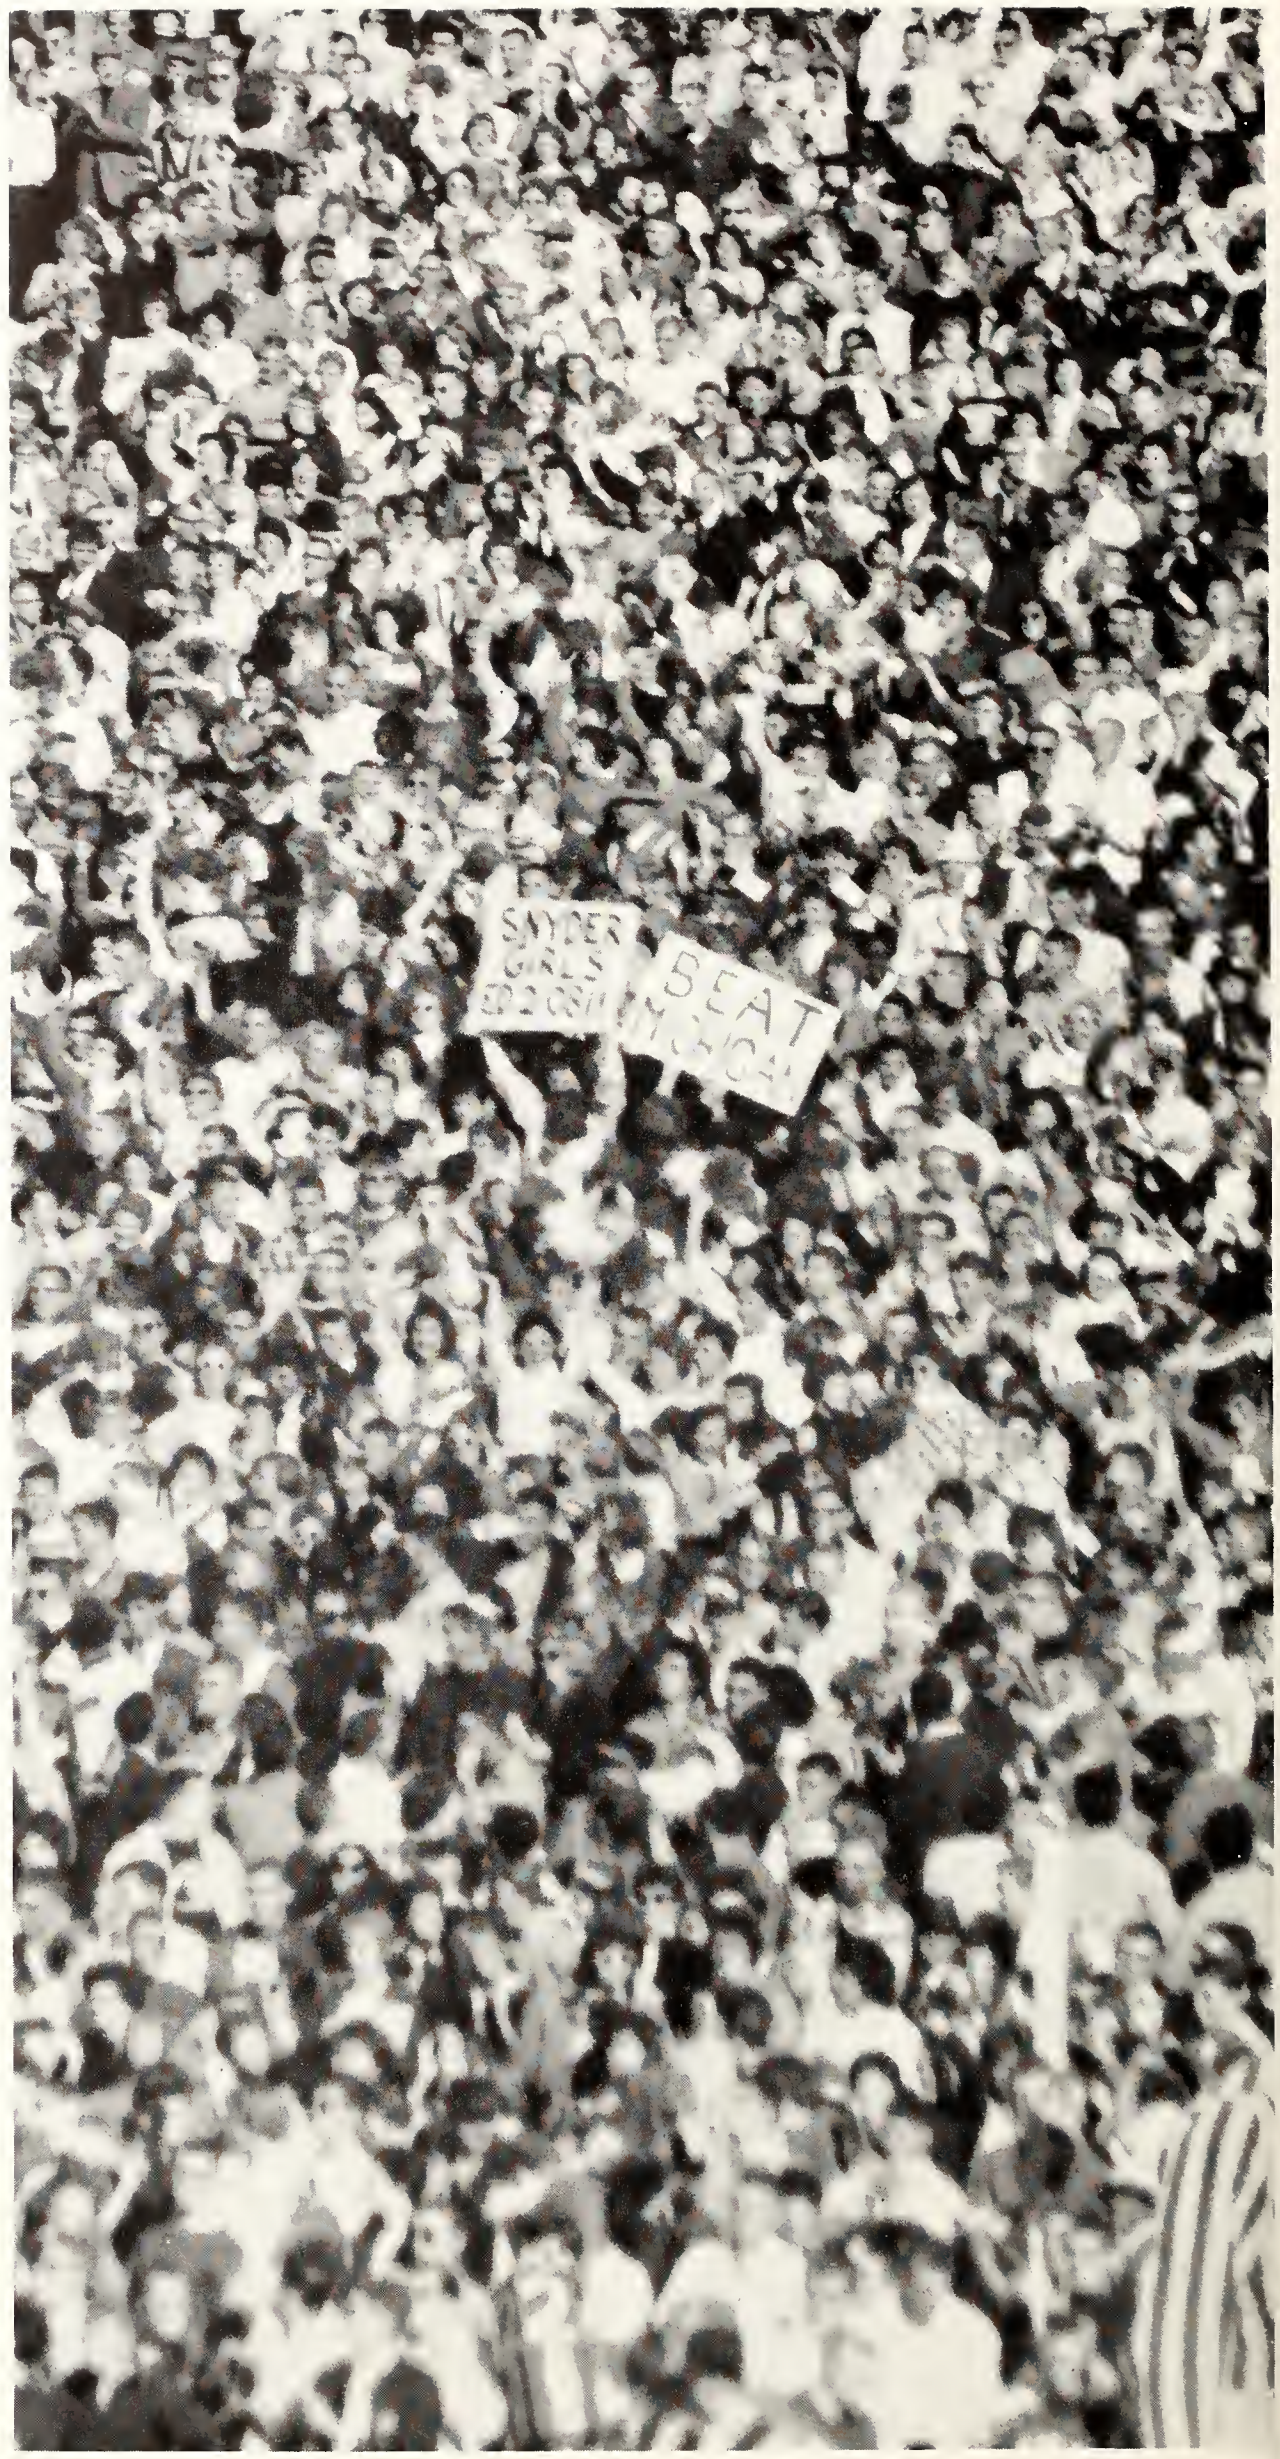
Where intercollegiate sports are suited to athletes with special talents, all students are given equal and ample opportunity to satisfy their competitive desire in one of the most extensive intramural programs offered at any college or university. Male or female can participate in his favorite sport the year-round.

The physical education curriculum is designed to encourage its students to participate in active sports after he graduates and is following his livelihood. Such courses as dancing, canoeing and bowling serve this purpose. The physical education courses also produce top-notch athletic coaches for American schools.

Michigan State athletics are also a vehicle of expression. Students can let off extra energy by supporting Spartans. They can also join booster organizations, like the marching band, which plays at football games.

The working press row in the three-deck pressbox at Spartan Stadium is filled to capacity for each home game by sports writers from all over the country.

MSU's grand old man of sports, Lyman Frimodig, retired in 1960 after 41 years on the athletic staff. He was player, coach, and business manager of athletics.



Enthusiastic Spartan fans find that Spartan spirit can find expression in realms other than the purely athletic.

Senior Cheerleader Kitty Paul sparked the twelve-member co-ed squad throughout football and basketball seasons.

At Michigan State, an indefinable magic known simply as "Spartan Spirit" reaches its most fevered pitch of expression in varsity competition. From the roar of 75,000 voices as the goal is crossed to the hushed expectancy as a vaulter soars over the bar, Spartan Spirit urges on and rewards team efforts. . . .

FOOTBALL

Spirited Michigan State cheerleaders charge onto the football field in front of the battling Spartans prior to another exciting afternoon of Big Ten football.

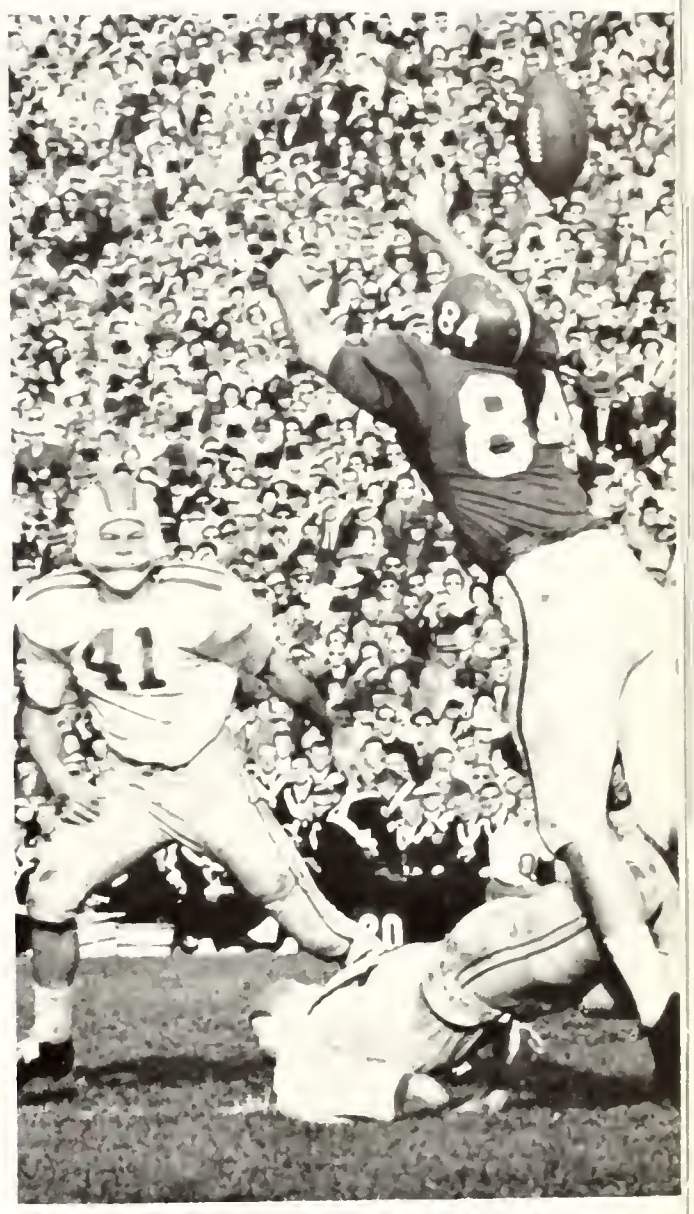
The 1960 season was surely frustrating for the Spartan football team. Its only losses—to Iowa and Ohio State—were enough to knock MSU out of any chance at the Big Ten title and into fourth place. The 6-2-1 record was MSU's best in three years.

The 27-15 defeat at the hands of co-champion Iowa was typical of Spartan frustration and can be termed as heartbreaking. MSU stormed from a two-touchdown halftime deficit to take a 15-14 lead when disaster struck. Senior quarterback Tom Wilson, directing the Spartans to an insurance score with less than three minutes remaining in the contest, lost control of the football on a hand-off. The ball popped into the air only to land in the hands of fleet Iowa fullback Joe Williams, who streaked 67 yards for a game winning touchdown.

The season-opening tie with Pittsburgh was a true warning of frustration in store for the Spartans, who dominated that game throughout, but who could only match the Panthers' seven points.

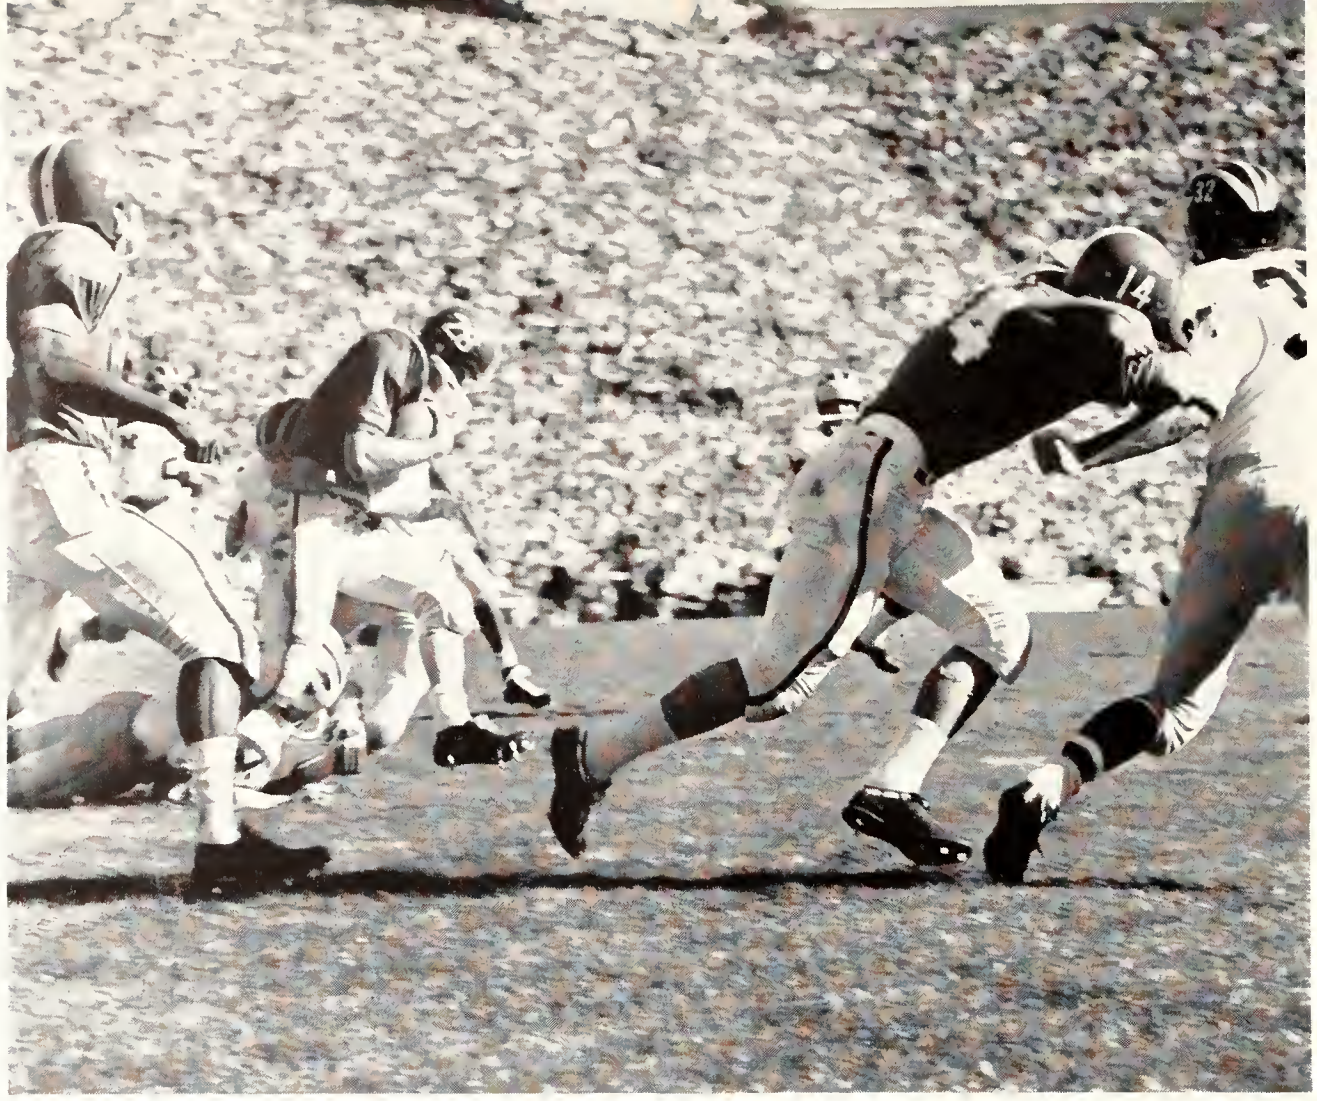
Victories over arch-rivals Michigan and Notre Dame did bring some joy to Spartanland as did the come-from-behind victories at Purdue and Northwestern.

Detroit, here for the season's finale with a seven game win streak, almost caught the Spartans napping. Only a strong second half for MSU prevented an upset.



Fred Arbanas leaps to deflect a pass thrown by Ohio State's all-conference quarterback Tom Matte.

Wayne Fontes (39) stops a Detroit end for a short gain after the Titans completed a pass. Detroit's passing gave MSU an upset scare in the season's last game.



Quarterback Tom Wilson bulls through the Michigan line while Gary Ballman (14) and Herb Adderley (26) block for him.

Despite three elected team captains, the Spartans were void of any team leader, morale or statistic wise. Tri-captains Herb Adderley, Fred Arbanas and Fred Boylen, all good individual performers, failed to provide that certain spark needed to carry a team to championships. But they cannot be criticized for doing top-notch jobs at their positions. Three's a crowd, even in a captain's position.

Adderley, named to the United Press International all-Big Ten team, led the team in passes caught and passing yards gained. The senior halfback's nine catches was three more than any end caught.

Juniors Ron Hatcher, fullback, and Gary Ballman, halfback, were the squad's rushing leaders. Hatcher bulled through the line 59 times for 361 total yards and a 6.1 yards-per-try average. He lost only two yards all year. Ballman romped 295 yards in 51 tries to rank second behind Hatcher with a 5.7 average.

An end, Art Brandstatter, was the top Spartan scorer despite just two touchdowns. As the team's placekicker, he booted 16 extra points, missing two, and kicked three field goals. His point total was 37. Ballman and Carl Charon, junior fullback, each scored the most touchdowns—four. Ballman's catch of a two-point conversion pass made him second behind Brandstatter with 26 points.

Michigan State had the unique set-up in the 1960 season of tri-captains—guard Fred Boylen, halfback Herb Adderley and end Fred Arbanas.

Spartans geared for battle sprint onto the grid-iron amongst cheers of enthusiastic followers.

Carl Charon bursts into the end-zone tying Iowa in a second-half comeback. Later Iowa scored on a freak play to win.

Senior Tommy Wilson, the third and final of a talented string of Wilson brothers from Lapeer to play football at Michigan State, dominated the scene at quarterback and could be given credit as the key player in carrying the team to what success it did enjoy. In the Wilson tradition he developed into one of the Big Ten's finest signal-callers playing more than 200 minutes to earn the team's Governor of Michigan "Most Outstanding Player" award. Wilson completed 46 passes for six touchdowns and 761 yards gained.

In addition to Wilson, Adderley, Arbanas and Boylen, letterwinning Spartan seniors were Ike Grimsley, winner of the "Oil Can Award"; Jason Harness, Mickey Walker and Oscar Hahn.

Halfback Gary Ballman dives through a maze of Michigan defenders. He later scored the second touchdown of the day.

BASKETBALL

Great things were not expected from the 1961 Michigan State basketball team. Of 15 squad members, 12 were sophomores who had not seen a single minute of varsity competition. One senior, Dave Fahs, and two juniors made up the core of experience on the team. Art Schwarm was the only junior to see any considerable action the previous season.

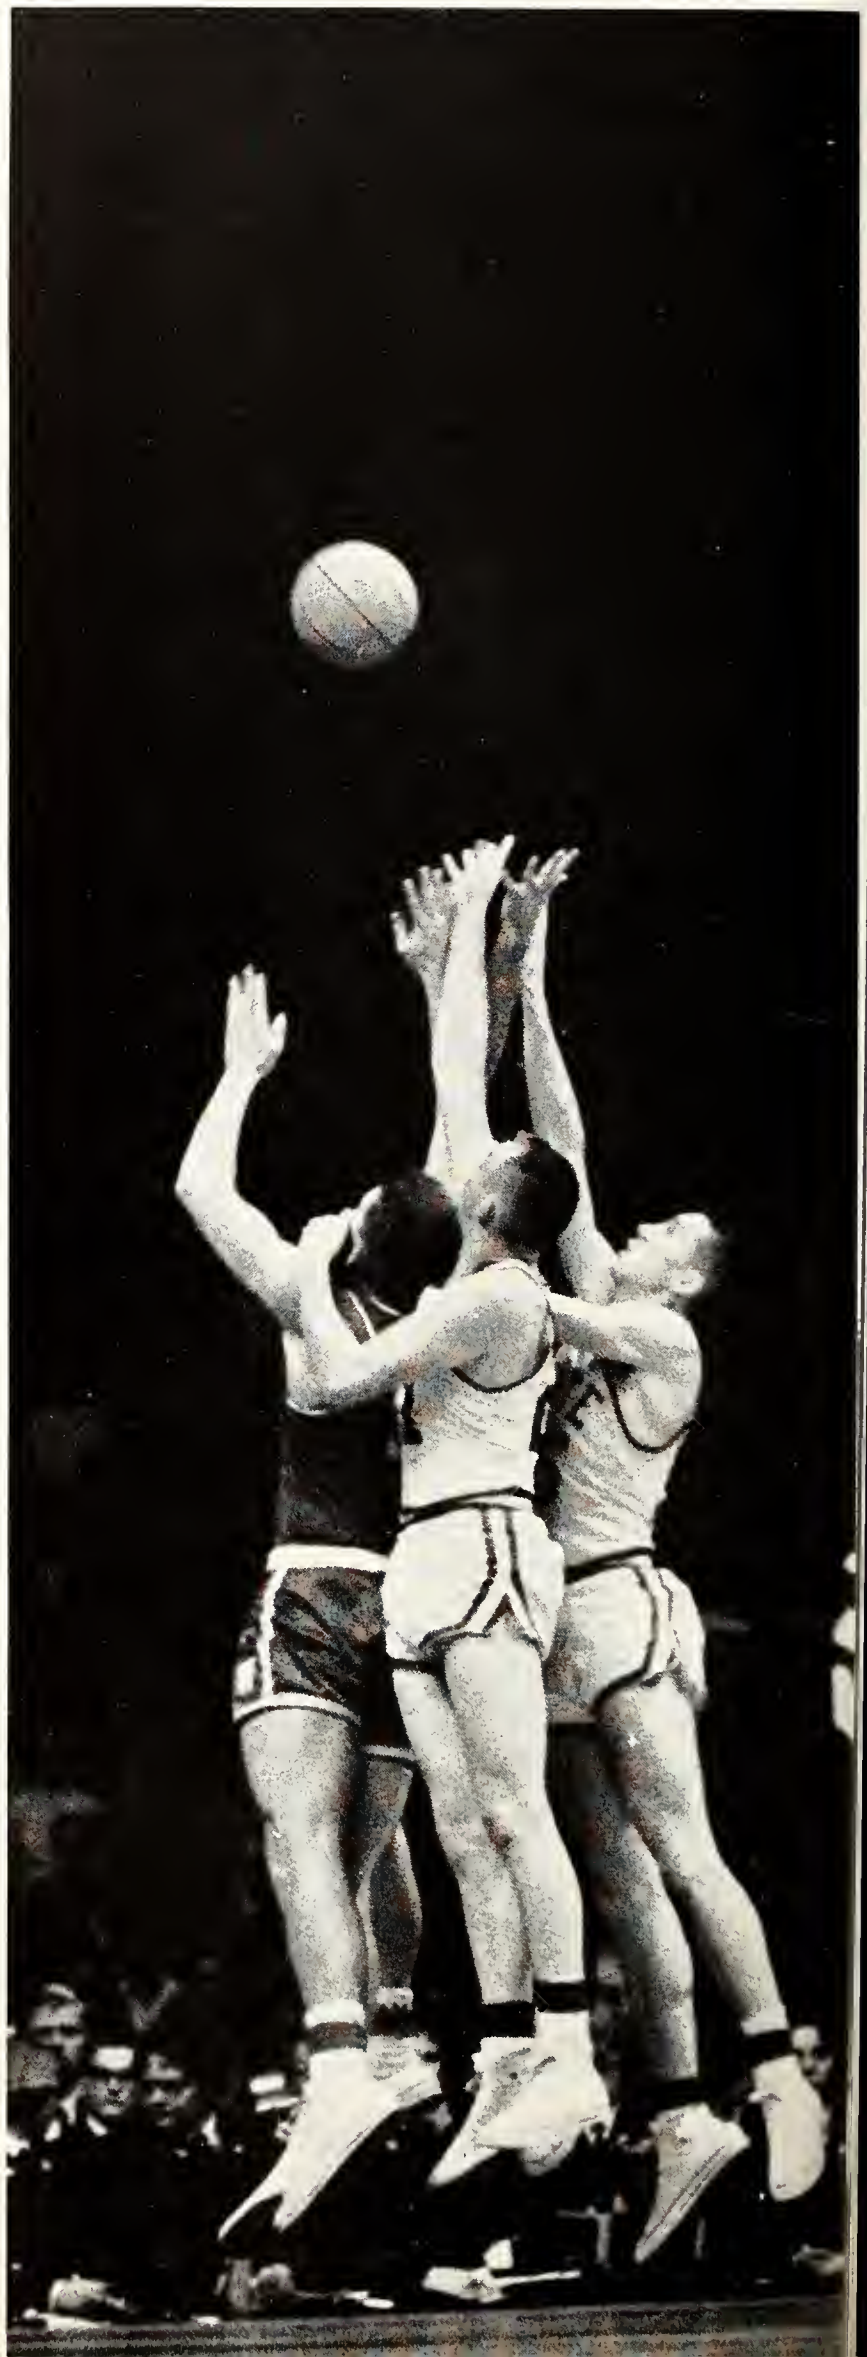
Coach Forddy Anderson faced a rebuilding year, and as a result, Michigan State finished with one of its worst seasons on record and placed ninth in the Big Ten. The season mark included seven wins and ten losses.

The two veteran guards, Fahs and Schwarm, had to help break in and steady sophomores on the squad during the year. This guidance along with sparkling performances helped carry the team to the improvement in the latter part of the season.

Sophomores garnered their share of the post-season honors for their performances. Dick Hall led the team in scoring with 390 points that put him among the ten highest scorers in the conference. Jack Lamers received the team's sportsmanship award.

Spartan cheerleaders Karen Able and Ken Andrews mirror a tense moment on the court during the battle with the Wolverines.

Duane Kilbride and Jack Lamers were two of Michigan State's enthusiastic sophomores. Perhaps they were too enthusiastic here.



Cage coach Forddy Anderson appears to be appealing to his players to brighten up their play in the disappointing (win-loss wise) 1960-1961 season.

Team captain Dave Fahs has been rated one of the best "little men" in Spartan basketball history. The 5'9" guard from Monroe, Wisconsin, was named to an honorable mention spot on the UPI All-American basketball squad his senior year and Little All-American first team his junior year.

Dave's 318 points as a senior was third highest on the squad. Many of his points came on unorthodox shots, the type that left fans gasping at their uncanny accuracy. High arching jump shots, looping overhead shots, hip shots and driving hooks were among his favorites.

The mighty mite utilized a deceptive passing ability that often flustered and confused a defender. Many times a teammate scored on clear shots benefited by Dave's fakes. It was this type of play that helped him earn the team's leadership award at the end of the 1961 season.

Courage was a Fahs attribute. In the Illinois game he accounted for ten direct assists and scored 14 points himself in the first half—all while playing on a badly sprained ankle.

The season did not begin too painfully because of wins over Butler and Bowling Green. But then the young Spartans lost eight of the next nine games, finished last in the Los Angeles Classic and lost the first three conference games.

Kansas State and Kansas gave Michigan State its first spankings—104-82 and 93-69. These defeats were avenged over Iowa State, 92-81.

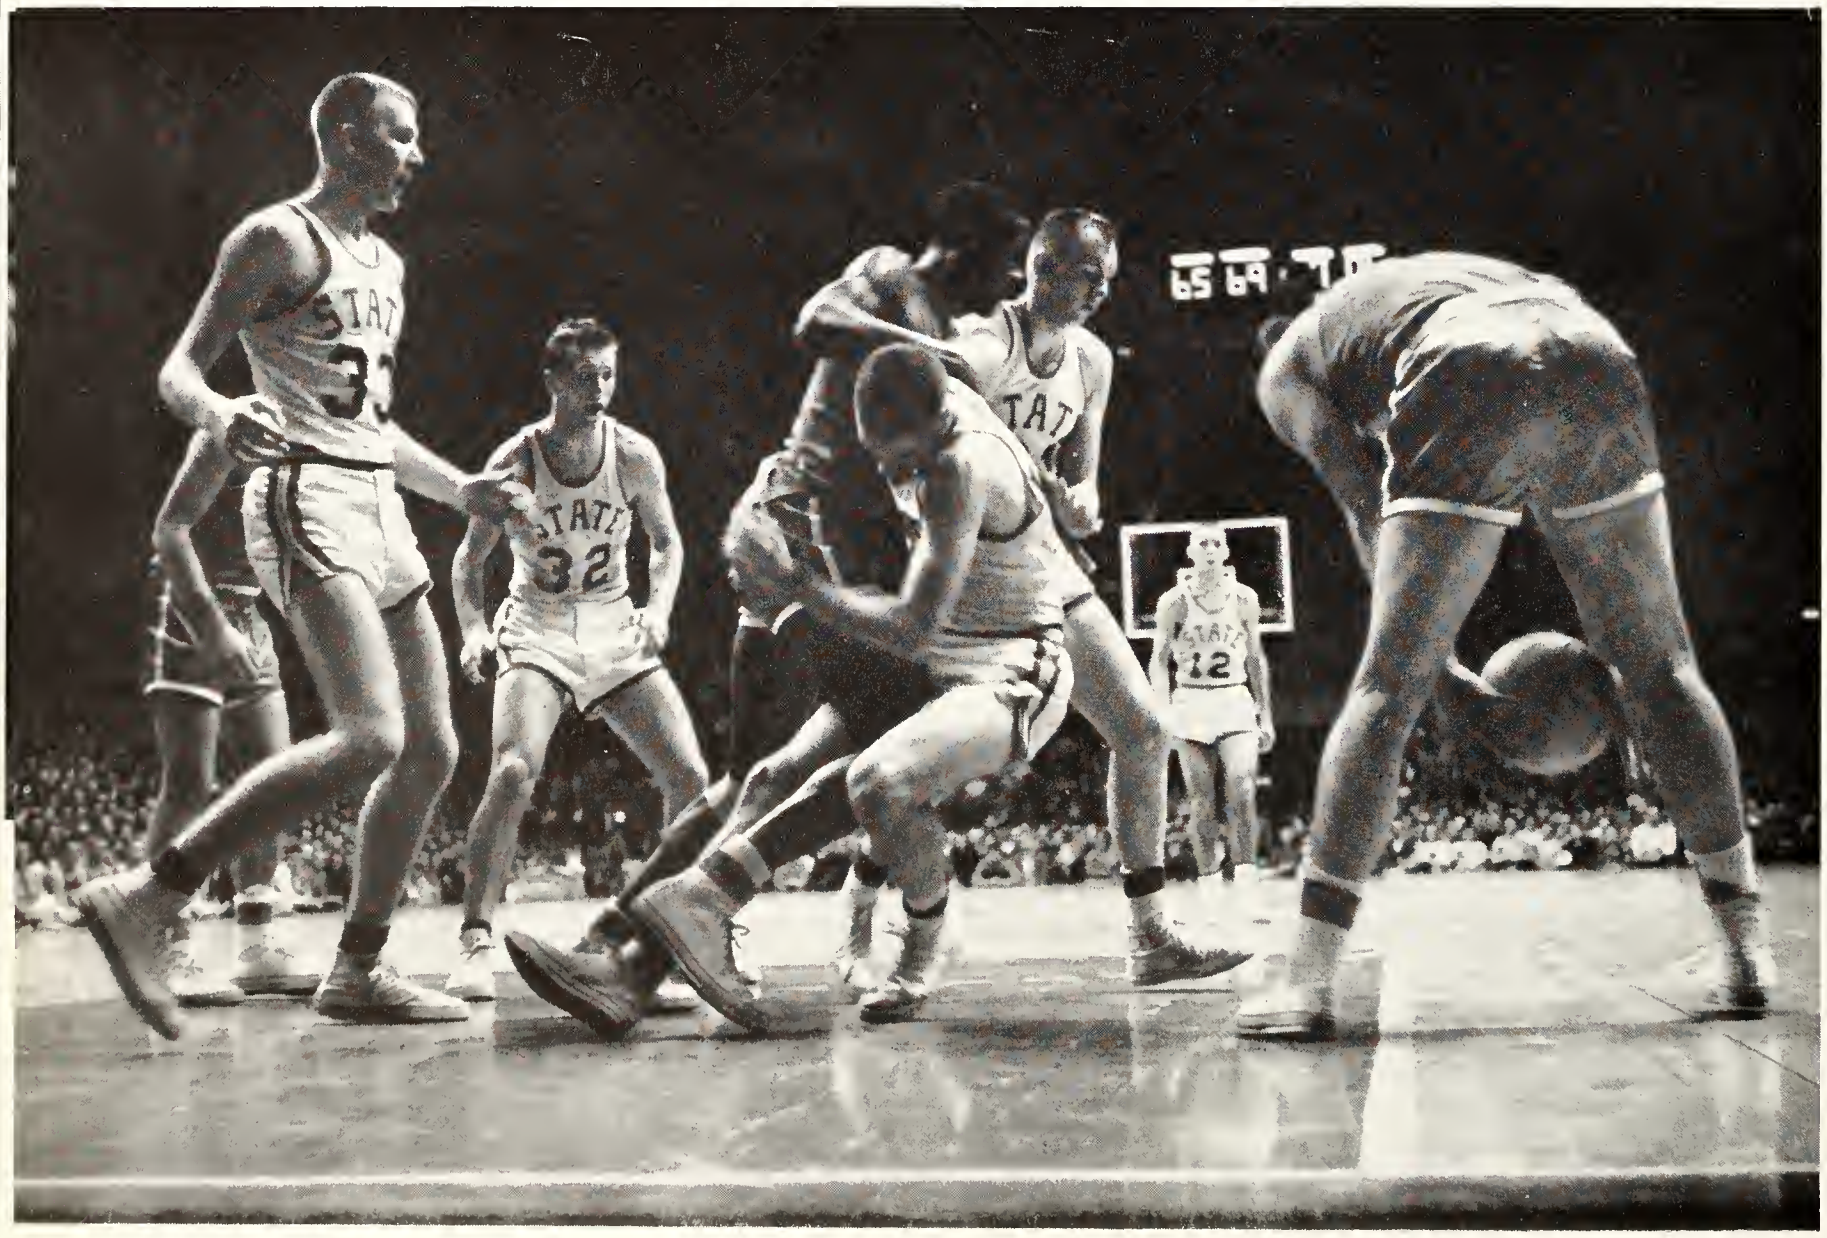
Wisconsin, Indiana and Iowa all walked over State before Dick Hall sparked the Spartans to their first Big Ten victory—an 81-69 walloping of Michigan.

But State followed up with a 77-62 loss to Northwestern because it could hit on but 26% of its shots. Minnesota stopped MSU, 89-70.

Signs of revival were evident as State led Illinois all the way until the final 15 seconds when the Illini stole the ball from Art Schwarm to score a game winning basket.

Dave Fahs, only Spartan senior, inherited the team's leadership role. Here he goes up for a backhanded lay-up against Ohio State.

Four MSU sophomores defend against a Northwestern attack—Ted Williams (33), Dick Hall (32), Jack Lamers (falling) and Duke Kilbride.



Sophomore Ted Williams leaps high, but not soon enough as he loses rebound to Northwestern.

High scorer Dick Hall finds he is fenced in by three Northwestern defenders on this shooting attempt.

Frustration reached a maximum when small college power Northern Michigan conquered Michigan State, 77-71, on its first invasion of the Upper Peninsula. But the team must have been looking ahead to its following encounter at Notre Dame. Behind Hall's 34 point outburst, the Spartans ended the Irish 24-home game win streak with a 89-74 upset.

Then the Spartans turned in one of their finest games. They had to, as it was against Ohio State, considered at the time the super team of America. At the half, the Spartans held a surprising one-point lead. But this was the night Ohio State All-American Jerry Lucas decided to set a conference scoring record. He tallied 48 points that gave OSU its 83-68 win.

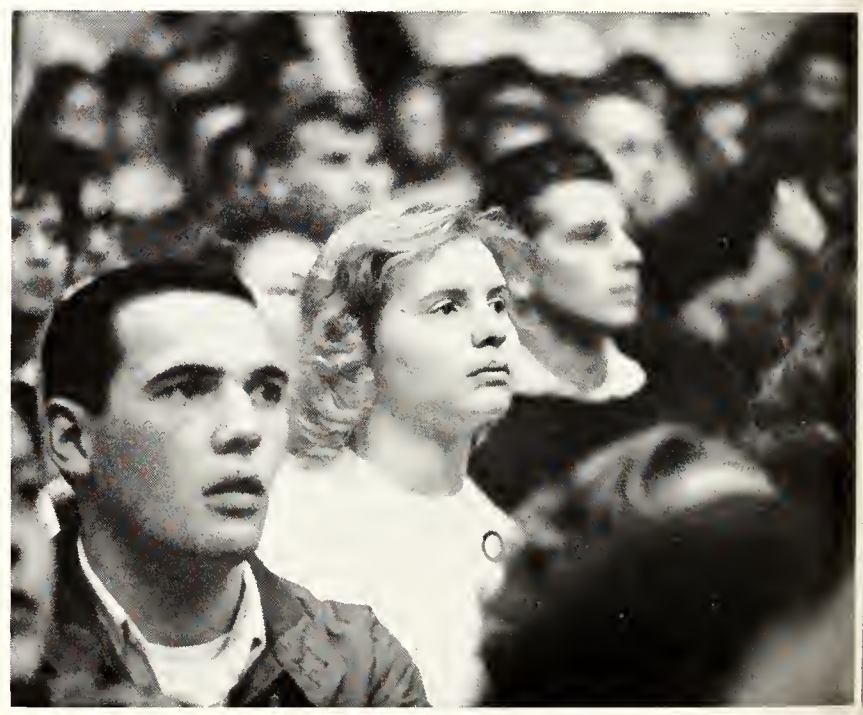
A trip to Ann Arbor was for naught as Michigan won a poorly played game, 78-67. Minnesota followed with its third win of the year over State.

Revenge was gained over Illinois as MSU moved out of the cellar with a 90-80 win paced by Schwarm's 23 points.

Again the conference scoring record was broken against the Spartans. Purdue's Terry Dischinger netted 52 sensational points to stop another MSU upset bid, 85-74.

Hoping to end the year on a winning note, State gave Ohio State another tough time before bowing in the second half after a cold spell. MSU was ahead at the half again, this time by two points. Iowa was the first of the Big Ten's top three teams to succumb to Michigan State, 74-64, to close out the season.

Michigan State was beaten by Minnesota three times during the season because of Gopher aggressiveness like that shown above.



Glum faces in the Jenison Fieldhouse crowd reflect the disappointing season the Spartans suffered in 1961 with seven lonely wins.

Dick Hall uses a hook-shot to go over Northwestern's defense. Hal Brookens (14) primes himself for a possible rebound.

Ninth in the Big Ten
Won 7, Lost 17

Up goes Ohio State's All-American center Jerry Lucas (11) for two more points in his march for the Big Ten single game scoring record set against Michigan State.

BASEBALL

Michigan State's captain-shortstop Dick Golden pulls in a throw from the catcher in time to nail an Illinois runner at second base. Ron Holmes backs up the play.

After a promising spring training trip, the 1960 Spartan baseball team had a rough time in the Big Ten. The Spartans won only four games and lost seven in conference play. The overall record was 17-13.

During the regular season the Spartans split two exhibition games each with Detroit and Notre Dame, both powerful independents.

Blame for the low eighth place Big Ten finish was laid to weak hitting. Bill Schudlich, junior first baseman, was the top hitting regular with a .259 season average. As a team the Spartans hit .223 for the year and .194 in league games, ninth in the Big Ten. Senior John Hendee was the team's top slugger with four home runs, 25 runs batted in and 22 runs scored.

The team was much stronger fielding- and pitching-wise. The pitchers were often victims of poor team hitting. Junior Mickey Sinks was the only pitcher to win more than two games. He won eight and had a 1.64 earned run average. His ERA for league tests was better, 1.35, but his record was only 2.2. Along with Schudlich, Sinks was named to the all-Big Ten team.

Committing only 15 errors, the Spartans led the league in fielding. Senior shortstop John Golden and outfielder Hendee led their departments with no errors. Third baseman Jerry Lumianski made only one bobble in ten league games.

Jerry Lumianski feels right at home sliding into third base in a game against Alma. He was the Spartans' regular third sacker in 1960.

TRACK

During the 1960 outdoor track season, the Spartan thinclads managed a fourth place finish in the Big Ten meet as well as winning a dual meet over Notre Dame and finishing second in a triangular meet with Illinois and Purdue.

In the conference championships held in East Lansing, the MSU squad had to be content with several outstanding individual performances. Mike Kleinhans tied for first in the pole vault. Willie Atterberry was second in the 440-yard run and third in the 220. Other points were picked up by Bill Reynolds and Gerry Young in the two-mile race (Young won the event in the 1961 indoor championship meet); Sonny Akapata in the broad jump and Brian Castle in the 880-yard run.

Kleinhans and Atterberry were champions at the Penn Relays in the pole vault and 400 meter hurdles, respectively.

The indoor track squad last winter was composed mostly of inexperienced sophomores and juniors and was able to finish only as high as sixth in the championship meet. The squad beat Ohio State, 64⅓-61⅔, and Central Michigan, 71½-69½, in dual meets.

HOCKEY

Coach Amo Bessone's Spartan hockey team, still struggling to regain the championship form of 1959 when it won the Big Ten championship and placed second in the NCAA finals, finished sixth in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association in 1961.

The Spartans gathered a 5-15 conference record, which moved them up a notch from the last place finish of last year. The 11-16 overall record was one of their better marks in its history.

For the second straight year, a stellar performance by a MSU goalie helped to offset an anemic scoring punch. Sophomore John Chandik held the opposition to 3.6 goals per game in the Spartan nets.

The season was spiced by a victory over Michigan and a surprise forfeit win over Michigan Tech. In the hard-fought MSU-UM series, three of the four games were decided by a single goal margin. State won its only game of the series when Jim Atack and Ed Ozybko scored key goals late in the game for a 3-2 victory.

The forfeit was awarded to State when Michigan Tech used a suspended player in its line-up against MSU. Tech won the game, 8 to 1, before the Spartans appealed to league officials.

Dick Johnstone lifts the puck over the North Dakota goalie for a Spartan score. Art Thomas helped work the puck into scoring position. The pellet is just left of the goalie's head.

SWIMMING

Michigan State's Varsity swimming team enjoyed another winning season by taking eight of ten dual meets and placing fourth in the Big Ten.

The only losses Coach Charles McCaffree's club suffered were to powerful Indiana and Michigan squads, and only then the Spartans went down after putting up a stubborn battle.

State's 400 yard freestyle relay team of Doug Rowe, Bill Wood, Larry Jones and Mike Wood set a new conference record in the Big Ten meet preliminaries. The quartet placed second in the finals, losing in a photo-finish to Michigan.

The Spartan 400-yard medley relay team and butterflyer Carl Shaar picked up third place medals, while Bill Singleton took fourth in the 100-yard breaststroke and sophomore Jeff Matson placed fifth in the 200-yard backstroke.

Michigan State's third place finish in the Big 10 gymnastics championship was indicative of the team's 1961 year long fortunes. The Spartans finished third behind Michigan and Illinois, the only two teams to pin dual-meet defeats on them. The squad went through 19 meets without a defeat stretching over two seasons before the Illini rocked the boat, 63-49. Conference champ Michigan had a tougher time beating MSU, winning by a three-point spread, 57½-54½.

Larry Bassett claimed the only MSU individual title tying on the parallel bars. Spartans John Daniels and Steve Johnson were second in free exercise and trampoline events.

SOCCER

Sophomores played major roles as Michigan State's 1960 soccer team won eight of nine games.

Nine newcomers crashed into the starting eleven as Capt. Cecil Heron and Gerhard Grentz were the only veterans to retain starting jobs.

Coach Gene Kenney's squad was most impressive in notching one-sided wins over previously unbeaten Ohio University and Indiana Tech while on their way to winning the Eastern Division championship of the Midwest Soccer Conference.

National champion St. Louis was the only team to beat the Spartans. The Billikens playing on their home field, grabbed an early lead to win, 4-0.

In season performances, Mabrico Ventura led the Spartan scoring with 14 goals while Rubens Filozola was the assist leader with seven. Goalkeeper Ted Saunders allowed an average of one goal per game and tied a varsity record by racking up five shutouts.

Halfbacks Ken Graham and Reinier Kemeling were All-Midwest selections and also received honorable mention on All-American teams.

WRESTLING

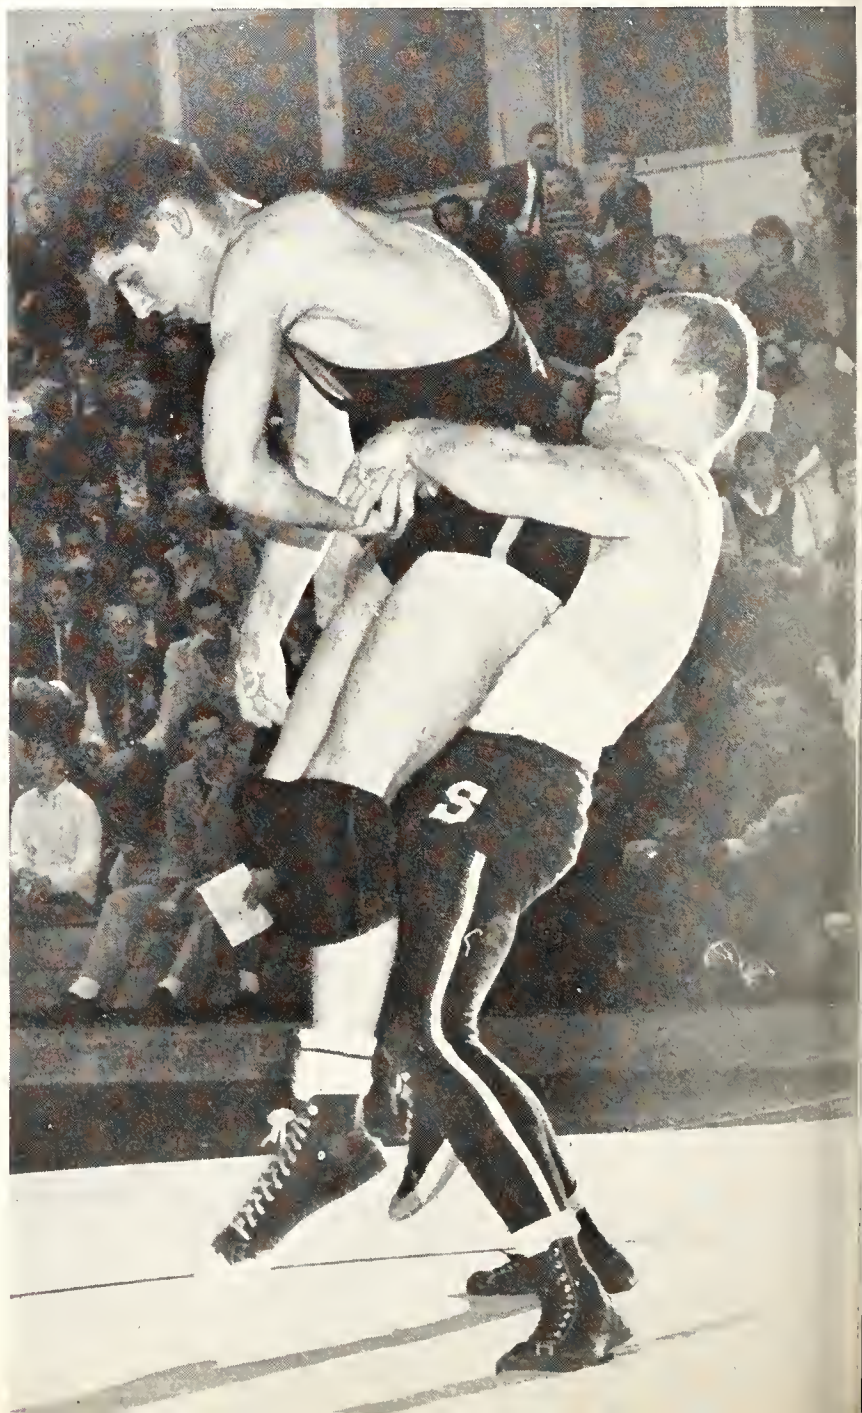
Michigan State won its first conference wrestling championship and upset arch-rival Michigan in doing it. Michigan steamed into the Big Ten tournament as the favorite to take the team championship—which it won the previous year—and at least four individual titles. Prior to the meet Fendley Collins, MSU's veteran coach of 31 years, warned the Wolverines:

"Because of better balance, MSU and Illinois could upset the defending champions. My team has a good chance of having someone among the first four finishers in every weight."

Collins' prediction was missed by one. In nine of ten weight divisions there was a MSU wrestler among the top four finishers. Two of them, Okla Johnson and Norm Young, grabbed championships. George Hobbs and John McCray were runners-up. Merle Prebel and Mike Senzig picked up third place honors and Jerry Hoke, Duane Wohlfert and Bob Schluter were fourth.

During the season the Spartans gave indications that they would be a threat to the Wolverines' title by compiling eight wins and losing once.

Michigan State's Duane Wohlfert seems to have everything under control as he lifts Iowa's Dave Combs off the mat. Wohlfert controlled the match long enough to win 3-2.



The start of the NCAA cross-country championships held at Forest Akers golf course saw 200 athletes from 38 schools competing for the championships.

CROSS COUNTRY

Michigan State's national cross-country domination came to an end in 1960, but the Spartan runners remained the best in the Big Ten.

Houston unseated MSU as the NCAA titleholder and Penn State and Army finished ahead of MSU in the IC4A championships. The Spartans finished 30 points ahead of Iowa to retain the Big Ten crown for the sixth consecutive year.

Loss of prominence wasn't surprising to Coach Fran Dittrich who expected the team to suffer from the graduation of Capt. Forddy Kennedy and three other 1959 lettermen. Only three lettermen returned to carry the team—Capt. Bill Reynolds, a senior, and juniors Jerry Young and Clayton Ward.

Reynolds and Ward were the pacesetters for the Spartans in the dual and three-way meets (which MSU won two out of three) while Young proved to be the better competitor in championship meets. He won the Big Ten individual title and placed third in the IC4A and fourth in the NCAA.

TENNIS

The tennis team rolled to its best season in almost a decade in 1960. It finished third in the Big 10 championships, won 17 matches (including the spring training trip) and lost but three, and boasted its first conference champion since 1955.

The team was rolling to an undefeated season, chalking up wins in its first 16 matches before disaster struck. Michigan, Western Michigan and Notre Dame beat the Spartans in succession. Drobac's netmen recuperated to defeat Ohio State in the season finale.

Senior Ron Mescall was the team's conference champion capturing the No. 5 singles title. He also compiled a 17-3 regular season mark, tops on the team. Brian Eisner, a sophomore holding down the team's tough No. 1 singles slot, reached the Big Ten finals before he lost.

Of all sports, fencing looks the most complicated as this photograph proves. Note all the equipment required for this meet with the University of Detroit.

FENCING

After the first seven meets of the 1961 season the MSU varsity fencers already had surpassed the previous year's win total by winning three of the meets. The fencers won only two of ten in the entire 1960 campaign.

In the initial match of the 1961 season the Spartans lost, 14-13, to Detroit. Sophomores such as Dick Schloemer and Don Johnson paced the team despite the loss.

A three-way meet at Chicago saw the fencers win easily over Chicago, 17-10, but falling before powerful Illinois, 19-6. Chuck Schmitter, Jr., Capt. Dick Lawless and Schloemer paced the Chicago win.

In the next two meets MSU toppled Iowa, 17-10, while losing another one point decision, 14-13, to Wisconsin. Another three-way meet found the fencers reversing the one-point loss trend by beating Notre Dame, 14-13. But Ohio State won 15-12 at the Columbus meet despite impressive performances by Johnson, Schmitter and Schloemer.

Scores of all golfers and teams in the Big Ten Golf championship were channeled to this central scoreboard at the MSU golf course.

GOLF

Well-known amateur golfers such as Jack Nicklaus, Ohio State, and John Konsek, Purdue, attracted large galleries at the Big Ten meet.

Michigan State's golf team soared to second place in the 1960 Big 10 golf meet to climax the sport's finest year on campus. The Spartans lost only one dual-meet.

Purdue was the only team to conquer the MSU golfers. The Boilermakers won the dual-meet, 14-22, and finished a scant 11 strokes ahead of Michigan State in the championship meet at the MSU Forest Akers Golf Course last spring.

C. A. Smith paced the Spartans in the Big 10 meet with a 296 score for a third place finish. He compiled a 7-3 won-loss record in regular season competition. But Ty Caplin and Tim Baldwin turned in the top dual-meet marks with eight wins, one loss and one tie apiece.

In the championships Caplin was ninth with 305 strokes and Baldwin was 12th with 307 strokes. Tad Schmidt and Jack Reynolds were 21st and 23rd.

Three members of the varsity crew await the start of competition during one of its spring regattas.

Practicing daily under the tutelage of student coach Jim Tyler, the crew worked out flaws in style while competing against the freshmen team.

CREW

The coxswain calls the beat and the crewmen strain to keep up the rigorous stroking demanded.

Michigan State's rowing team held the first home regatta on the Grand River west of Lansing in 1960, its third year of competition. The varsity crew lost to Ecorse in a preliminary heat. The freshmen were edged by Ecorse in the finals.

A triangular meet with Culver Military Institute and Purdue turned into a swimming meet when rough water at Culver swamped the Spartan varsity shell. The frosh were able to compete on the stormy waters, though, but lost to Purdue.

MSU's crew, coached by a student, Jim Tyler, practiced daily at the Grand River site. Tyler, a founder of the MSU crew, said the almost mirror perfect waters at the meet site is the "finest in the country".

Rowing is still an intramural sport, but members of the team are striving to gain varsity status. Under IM sponsorship the budget is small, so equipment is limited and the rowers pay travel expenses for away meets.

If rowing became a varsity sport, the crew could arrange an impressive schedule with some of the top collegiate teams in North America.

The striking photo-mural in the foyer of the new Men's Intramural building pays tribute to the thousands of participants in the dozens of sports offered in I.M. competition.

Blasting from a trap on the Forrest Akers university golf course is a familiar predicament for individual and I.M. golfers.

Harris F. Beeman, Director of Intramurals.

More than 10,000 athletically inclined Michigan State students participate in the broad intramural program each year. The fine facilities and vast range of activities for both men and women offer the challenge of competition and team work to Greek, dorm and independent groups. . . .

Women's and IM Sports

Bryan dormitory grabbed the most team titles among teams entered in the Intramural department's 1960 fall program. Bryan was dormitory, football, badminton, paddleball and volleyball champion.

Lambda Chi Alpha and Zeta Beta Tau dominated the fraternities with two titles each. LCA was all-university football champion and fraternity badminton winner. Sigma Nu copped first in regular football standings. ZBT won its titles in bowling and table tennis. West Shaw and Rather were the only dorms to snap Bryan's hold. They won the table tennis tourney and turkey trot respectively.

The independent league champions were Iotaspheres, football, Evans Scholars, paddleball, Campers, table tennis, and Arrows, badminton.

Individual competition, Les Miller and Hermie Miller were champions in football pass and placekick, respectively. Jerry Ehenau, Ken Malich, Okla Johnson, and Dick Beaudry won titles in gymnastics. The wrestling championships produced winners Luke Johnsos, Larry Shipley, Bob Kerr, Lee Montgomery, Harvey Segur and Jack Spaun. Bob Dixon and Terry Brenner won the handball doubles championship; Nels Martin the fencing title; and Dave Haywood archery. Jay Stevens and Gil Reid placed one-two in the turkey trot.

Evans Scholars pitted their skill's against 47 other independent league teams in winter term play. Uncle Tom's Boys captured the first place trophy.

Freshman John A. Lewis snared the foil championship in fencing competition which attracted more than 110 participants in three weapons.

A total of 2,813 men competed in IM touch football play fall term. Twenty-eight fraternity, 39 independent and 68 dormitory teams entered league play.

Lambda Chi Alpha waltzed off with the IM football crown with top-notch play under the lights.

There is beauty in sports. This underwater swimmer in the new IM pool glides through the crystal clear water to give the photographer a "water portrait".

Fast action on the IM building courts marked the spirit of winter term volleyball competition.

A close battle for first place and four meet records helped make the fraternity swimming meet one of the most exciting events in the IM department's winter program.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon edged Phi Delta Theta, 37-36, in the meet that had another tight battle for third place. Psi Upsilon nosed out Sigma Chi, 26-25.

Records were set by Psi U's Jim Carne in the 50 yard butterfly, Theta Chi's Bob Hill in the 50 yard backstroke, Zeta Beta Tau's 200 yard freestyle team, and Phi Delta Theta's Wayne Parsons in the 100 yard individual medley. Parsons won the 50 yard freestyle to be the meet's only double winner.

Jack Slaughter helped Emmons swamp the field in the dormitory swim meet. He won the 50 yard and 100 yard freestyle races and swam a leg on Emmons' first place 200 yard freestyle relay team. Emmons gathered three second places, also, to distance Armstrong by 20 points, 57-37. East Shaw was third with 30 points.

Winter Sports

Swimming championships did not end with team competition. Eight individual events were held, also, with Andy Miller sweeping two—the 50 and 100 freestyle races. Other champs were Jim Hamilton, 50 yard breaststroke; Jack Valentine, 50 yard butterfly; Bob Hill, 50 yard backstroke; and Larry Shipley, diving. In paddleball doubles, Bob Stewart and Larry Savarese were the winners.

Denton Newland was a double winner in the gymnastics tournament. He won the high bar and parallel bar events besides placing second in free exercise. Reginald Gay was the still rings champion and high bar runner-up. Jim Bennett and Ken Andrews won trampoline and free exercise titles, respectively.

No double winners resulted in the weightlifting contest. Winners were Tom Jordan, heavyweight; Steve Chismar, 189-pound class; Dan Murphy, 169-pound; George Gilbert, 149-pound; and Ken Blood, 129 pound.

Championships in nine other sports were offered winter term by the IM department, including basketball, bowling, volleyball, hockey, handball, table tennis, badminton, fencing and wrestling.

Winter term competition among women's groups saw East Yakely top Tri-Delta for the championship of twenty-one teams.

Bailey hall's precincts one and six edged out Emmons hall's squads to capture the winter term dormitory bowling championship.

IM softball tilts in the spring of 1960 brought out a record number of participants.

Spring Sports

Uncle Tom's Boys, winning three championships spring term, bounced into the all-independent 1959-60 throne. Bailey was the all-dormitory champion and Sigma Nu was the fraternity titleholder.

Uncle Tom's Boys finished atop the all-university softball heap after finishing second to Army Blacksox in independent play. Emmons won the dormitory softball championship. Alpha Gamma Rho was No. 1 in the fraternity standings while Packaging took the Ag-Council division.

The other titles for Uncle Tom's came in independent volleyball and golf. West and East Shaw shared the dorm golf trophy. The Greek golf winner was SAE.

ATO ran away with the fraternity track meet honors. East Shaw nudged Bailey for the dormitory track crown.

The Nite Owls and Vets I ran one-two in independent bowling.

The Phi Delts won the fraternity tennis title while the Zebras took first in the independent and Butterfield in the dorm divisions.

Individual competition winners were Lew McDaniel, golf; Dave Gessford, tennis; Phil Koehn and Marguerite Tout, skish; and Fred Fetters and Max Hasse, baseball throw.

Women's softball competition saw spirited play on the parts of Greek and dormitory teams.

The tennis courts south of Spartan Stadium were the scene of busy schedules in both singles and doubles matches.

Junior Gay Firth reached the finals in women's singles competition but lost in a close match.

Here is photographic proof that MSU athletic facilities are utilized by the student body as well as varsity teams.

Women's Sports

The men at Michigan State are not the only ones to enjoy athletics. The women students participate in sports in the Spartan tradition.

Contests with other schools, intramural games and physical education classes are available to the co-eds just as they are to the men.

The best facilities and equipment are available to the women. The new women's intramural building is the center of the co-eds' sports. The facilities include a brand new swimming pool, a large gymnasium, and a dance floor. Outside there is Landon Field, restricted for women's competition. On it are three softball fields and a lacrosse field.

Field hockey, archery and golf are found on Old College Field. Facilities in the men's IM building are used by women for classes and intramural sports, with the outdoor swimming pool attracting the most attention.

In winter sports dormitory girl teams dominated the championship picture over sorority teams..

Both East and West Yakely edged Delta Delta Delta for two championships. In basketball East Yakely was champion and West Yakely in volleyball. Delta Delta Delta was runner-up both times.

Other basketball finalists were Phillips, West Mayo, Alpha Xi Delta, South Campbell and Delta Zeta.

Volleyball finalists were Sigma Kappa, East Landon and South Campbell.

Kappa Kappa Gamma could finish no better than second twice to dormitory teams in bowling and swimming competition.

Phillips was the bowling titlist beating out the Kappa team and North Williams.

In swimming Abbott was the winner over Kappa Kappa Gamma.

Spring and fall activities in Women's IM sports includes such rugged contests as field hockey, often resulting in bruised shins.

Lacrosse, considered one of the fastest sports in the world, is among the sports in which coeds have intercollegiate competition.

Crisp new permanent charters were dutifully framed and hung by all STUDENT GROUPS this year. Interest-area reorganization by the Student Organizations Council lumped together hundreds of honoraries, into workable units....

societies and clubs

Impressive May Morning Sing ceremonies in front of Beaumont Tower brought happy surprise for Marge Anderson as she was called into Tower Guard.

Student Organization Council members, representing each of the club interest areas, met weekly to discuss administrative problems. From left to right they are: Jane Denison, Comm. Arts; Ronald English, Sci. & Arts; Tom Davidson, Eng.; John Barkham, Chrm.; Rodney Tulloch, Agr.; Barbara Durell, Religious groups; Lee Bowen, charter review chrm.; and Lloyd Prestgard, B&PS.

Student Organizations

Charter Circle members tapped outstanding residence hall women into membership during after-hours serenades.

To both leaders and followers, the myriad assortment of Michigan State student activities provides an outlet for creative expression. The hundreds of honorary societies and clubs offer practical experience in group action as well as a training ground for further learning in many different areas of interest. . . .

Rehearsals for State Singers occupied the time and efforts of both men and women throughout the year.

MORTAR BOARD

Mortar Board actives entertained the Lansing-area alumnae at a December dessert at the home of Mrs. John A. Hannah.

Each spring at May Morning Sing, up to 25 excited junior women are tapped for membership in Mortar Board, national senior women's honorary.

After intensive screening, the women are selected on the basis of high scholarship, leadership, and exceptional service to the university.

The members of Mortar Board annually join with Tower Guard and Spartan Women's League in sponsoring Spinster's Spin, the winter term turnabout dance. Along with the other two women's organizations they also honor 50 outstanding senior women at Lantern Night in June.

Mortar Board participates in one all-university project each year. This year they assisted Vice President Gordon Sabine in the Alumni Distinguished Scholarship competition for high school seniors.

The MSU chapter of Mortar Board acted as hostesses for the sectional convention held here in April.

Thirteen outstanding senior men each year wear the blue blazer with the red insignia which identifies them as members of Excalibur, the local honorary for senior men. Of the 13 members, several are tapped in the spring at Water Carnival, and the remaining are tapped the next fall at Homecoming.

The men are selected by the previous year's members, and are chosen on the basis of character, extra-curricular activities, and scholarship. Variety is stressed in the selections – this year's members were outstanding in fields ranging from science to dramatics.

A pleasant service function for Excalibur members is the escorting of the Homecoming Queen and her court, both at the football game and at the Homecoming dance. They also present the queen with her trophy during the public coronation.

Each year Excalibur recognizes one outstanding faculty member and presents him with a plaque. The local chapter holds weekly luncheon and business meetings at a local restaurant.

The "lucky" thirteen Excalibur members meet often, both formally and informally, in a special room reserved for their use at the Coral Gables.

BLUE KEY

The most pleasant chore for the men of Blue Key is the series of rush parties for campus beauties which leads to the selection of Miss MSU.

The qualities required for membership in Blue Key national honor fraternity are junior or senior standing and outstanding achievements in positions of campus leadership and service.

The members are chosen each spring and fall by the already active members. They are announced at winter term J-Hop. The annual long-awaited "duty" of Blue Key is the interviewing of Miss MSU candidates and the selection of the queen, who is also announced at J-Hop.

At Blue Key meetings, many original ideas are discussed which are eventually put into effect by the university. The idea of a campus United Nations was first brought up at Blue Key and was then given to the junior class as a project.

The local chapter of Blue Key was organized in 1927. There are chapters of this men's honorary at many leading universities throughout the nation. Most meetings of the local honorary feature speakers or discussions on topics of local and national interest.

Reading to blind students in the library is the main service project performed by Tower Guard.

Perhaps you have at some time been hopelessly confused in registration. If so, it is likely that a coed with a Tower Guard arm band came to your rescue.

This sophomore women's honorary serves the university in numerous ways. Aside from assisting at registration, the coeds each spend several hours a week reading to the blind. Tower Guard also offers a year-round tutoring service to the student body, and assists new students during orientation week.

The annual tapping of the newly-honored freshman women at May Morning Sing is one of the most beautiful and exciting events of the year. The tapping, accompanied by singing, takes place early in the morning in front of Beaumont Tower. The members are chosen from freshman women on the basis of scholarship, leadership and character.

The pins for Tower Guard members are small replicas of Beaumont Tower. This is the only organization permitted to use the Tower as a meeting place.

Regularly assisting the 35 women of Tower Guard in their registration duties are the 35 men of Green Helmet. The members of this honorary, known by their green arm bands, are always ready and willing to assist new or confused students during registration.

Members of Green Helmet are chosen at the end of their freshman year and are announced at IFC Sing. They are selected by the previous year's members on the basis of leadership, activities and scholarship. A 3.2 all-college average is required for membership.

This sophomore men's honorary serves the university by sponsoring a program of orientation and guidance to freshmen each term and by offering a year-round tutoring service to all students. They also join with other campus honoraries in ushering at commencement.

The meetings of Green Helmet feature speakers and discussions on various aspects of university life and student responsibility. They annually nominate an outstanding faculty member for an all-university award.

Members of Green Helmet regularly look forward to social and service events with Tower Guard, their counterpart for sophomore women.

Green Helmet adviser Dr. Stanley Idzerta keeps close tabs on the members and contributes much to their meetings and projects.

ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA

Alpha Lambda Delta actives annually entertain prospective members at a winter term "Smarty Party."

A continuous search and pursuit of high scholarship is signified in the tiny replica of a candle worn by members of Alpha Lambda Delta, freshmen women's honorary.

Perhaps it represents the burning of the midnight oil in quest of the 3.5 all-university grade point average necessary for membership.

This scholarship average must be attained and maintained by the members for two out of three terms of their freshman year.

But academics is not the sole interest of these coeds. On their social calendar each year is a "Smarty Party" which is given winter term for freshmen women with a 3.3 – or better – grade point average.

Social functions with the members of Phi Eta Sigma also find a place on their busy agenda.

This year the members also assisted other campus honoraries with a tutoring service for students needing assistance with university college subjects.

Their spring term initiation banquet revealed the Senior Award which is given to the senior member with the highest grade point average.

CIRCLE

The purpose of newly-organized Circle honorary is to recognize residence hall women who have excelled in leadership, citizenship and service.

Tapping takes place after closing hours when Circle members go into the residence halls and sing outside the doors of the newly-selected members.

The MSU Circle honorary was assisted in its formation by the University of Michigan organization. The members hope that the women's honorary will become a Big 10 organization in the near future.

PHI ETA SIGMA

Constant academic striving and achievement – the lofty aim of Phi Eta Sigma – is carried out by the majority of its members in the three years of college following their initiation.

And it's not strange that the members of this freshman men's honorary attain high scholastic heights. A 3.5 all-university at the end of two terms is required for admittance into Phi Eta Sigma.

Service and socializing also rank high in the interests of this group of men. They annually distribute pamphlets on "How to Study," sponsor well-known speakers on campus, and hold a banquet and picnic with the counterpart women's honorary, Alpha Lambda Delta.

Agriculture

AGRICULTURE COUNCIL

The annual Ox Roast, a feast with food enough to satisfy the hungriest male in the crowd, is sponsored each spring by the Agricultural Council.

This council, made up of an elected representative from every agricultural organization on campus, coordinates agricultural activities at MSU and promotes the general interest and welfare of the College of Agriculture.

Meetings are held weekly for the discussion of problems and the planning of activities.

AGRONOMY CLUB

A more complete understanding of farm crops and soil science is the aim of Agronomy Club. This organization, open to any interested student, attempts to bring students and faculty members together for an exchange of ideas in soil science and related fields.

Agronomy club's soil judging team won a first place in the regional collegiate soil judging contest last spring and a second place in the fall contest. An award is given to the club's outstanding member at the Ag Honors banquet each winter term.

ALPHA ZETA

The top forty percent of the sophomore males in the College of Agriculture are eligible for membership in Alpha Zeta. The purpose of this sophomore men's honorary is to encourage scholarship and leadership and to promote the profession of agriculture through lectures and service projects.

Outstanding scholarship is recognized by the honorary through the awarding of certificates to deserving freshmen and sophomores and the presentation of the Alpha Zeta award to the sophomore with the highest point average in agriculture.

A.S.A.E.

During Farmers' Week the American Society of Agricultural Engineers is busier than any other campus organization. The crowds really keep the fellows hopping as they serve lunch to all the visitors.

Plenty of energy seems to be a basic requirement for membership in this active group. In addition to Farmers' Week, it participates in Activities Carnival and the Engineering Exposition.

The calendar is completed with guest speakers in agriculture and with field trips both inside and outside the state.

FLORICULTURE FORUM

The Floriculture Forum's purpose is to promote a general interest in floriculture by presenting current developments in the field and developing contacts with prominent men in the industry.

The group participated in the flower show and were awarded a second place in fall term's Activities Carnival. Each year forum members tour greenhouses and flowershops in other states with the money earned from selling mums during football games.

BLOCK AND BRIDLE

Careful judging in all classes is the primary purpose in the Block and Bridle show.

Choosing a "little queen" is one of the many and varied activities of the Block and Bridle club.

If not the "littlest" queen chosen, this queen is certainly the youngest. She is chosen by the members from a group of girls between the ages of two to six years and her reign lasts through the annual Horse Show.

In their varied program, the members promote all phases of animal husbandry and bring together students that are interested in beef, hogs, sheep and horses.

In 1960 they received the top sheep award at Kansas City American Royal Livestock meet.

Michigan State's chapter has always ranked among the top in the nation. It sends livestock teams to the national college judging meets and has promotion booths at special events on campus.

Three awards are presented by the group: Hoof and Hook award, Harry Moxley scholarship and the merit trophy award.

Guests speakers are scheduled for their meetings. A representative of Swift and Company met with them this year.

Throw out your razors, don't buy any new blades, and inform your girl that you're going to look like a Forester!

These instructions might have been given to the members of the Forestry Club during winter term as they prepared for their annual Foresters' Shindig, which is held in February.

This annual dance sets the stage for awards of the beards, goatees, mustaches, long sideburns and some peach fuzz which were the resulting achievements.

Other activities of the forestry members include a Field Day banquet with foresters from the University of Michigan.

Outstanding work in the department of Forestry is recognized each year by an award to the senior member contributing the greatest achievement.

Eligibility for membership is based upon enrollment in the forestry curriculum.

Stronger bonds of friendship between the students and faculty is proposed by the group. They also aim to provide a program of educational and social value.

Highlighting the annual Foresters' Shindig is the shedding of beards sprouted for the occasion.

DAIRY CLUB

The Dairy club has a two-fold purpose. One is to develop and promote the general knowledge of dairy students; the other is to open opportunities in dairying for the members of the club. The only requirement for membership is interest.

The organization participated in Activities Carnival, Farmers' Week, and the State Fair where they sponsored a booth to explain and promote dairying. They sponsor a dairy judging contest on campus each year, and take regular field trips.

POMOLER CLUB

"An apple a day keeps the doctor away" is the motto of the members of Pomoler Club. And these students practice what they preach. They are responsible for the year-round operation of the apple vending machine in the Horticulture Building.

The operation of the machine, aside from keeping the club's treasury stocked, gives the members valuable insight into consumer buying habits.

The purpose of Pomoler Club is to further the interests of fruit and vegetable production. The members take part in current activities in the field of horticulture.

SIGMA LAMBDA CHI

Juniors and seniors with a 2.6 point average majoring in residential building and lumber merchandising are eligible for membership in Sigma Lambda Chi. Members of this honorary strive to set high scholastic standards in their field.

Sigma Lambda Chi participates in the Lansing Home Show each year, and sponsors a loan fund which is available to all men in the department. At the annual spring banquet, the members present awards to seniors outstanding in scholastics and achievements.

HOME BUILDERS

Blueprints and plans ready for a new dream home? Students in the National Association of Home Builders, MSU Student Chapter, are preparing to make these dreams come true.

Junior and senior members in the residential building curriculum organized the group in 1958. Meeting night plans include talks by men in the profession. This year Robert Schmidt of Berea, Ohio, was guest speaker.

Chapter members also participated in the Activities Carnival.

2x4 CLUB

Members of this honorary do not confine their interests to 2 x 4s. They are interested in all types and kinds of wood and what can be done with it.

Pursuing these interests, the members participate in the Lansing Home Show, and sponsor booths at the National Retail Lumber Dealers Convention and various state conventions.

Majors in the fields of lumber merchandising or wood technology are eligible for membership in Two by Four.

XI SIGMA PI

The purpose of Xi Sigma Pi, national forestry honorary, is to promote a high caliber of scholastic achievement within the forestry department. In keeping with this aim, the members annually honor the sophomore with the highest point average in the department.

Membership in Xi Sigma Pi is open to junior and senior forestry students with a 2.8 point average. Each winter term the organization holds a banquet to honor new members.

Business and Public Service

BETA BETA BETA

The MSU Chapter of Beta Beta Beta is an honorary society for those majoring or planning to major in the various biological sciences.

Junior status or 20 credits in one of the above fields along with a 2.7 average is necessary for membership.

The purpose of the Zeta Chapter is to recognize superior work in the biological sciences, to promote interest in research, and to provide aid and encouragement to those planning a biological career.

BETA ALPHA PSI

Members of Beta Alpha Psi, accounting honorary, were hosts to G. Gordon Cook, assistant controller of Ford Motor Co., when he appeared as one of their guest speakers this year.

The group presents an annual scholarship award and sponsors an accounting department mixer.

Organized as the Alpha Omicron Chapter on this campus in 1954, membership requirements include a "B" average.

DELTA PHI EPSILON

As the world becomes smaller due to jet flights and rapid means of communication, people become interested in world affairs, foreign service and foreign trade.

This interest has become the main purpose of Delta Phi Epsilon, which was organized here in 1955. The group hopes to promote interest in this area and further the spread of information concerning it.

The social calendar this year included participation on the International Festival.

Guests at the annual Les Gourmets dinner-dance marveled at the elaborate buffet tables set up by the members.

Merrymaking students were welcomed with a "A Twelfth-Night Revel" this year as the members of Les Gourmets met for their annual dinner dance.

In addition to this Tudor England party, the group met in Chicago this spring to attend the National Restaurant Association Convention, in which they participated by showing the curriculum and continuing education of hotel, restaurant, and institutional management at MSU.

The meeting agendas feature guest speakers. This year Miss Kathryn Bruce, Educational Director of the National Restaurant Association, met with the group.

As part of their service functions they sponsor a Christmas party for underprivileged children each year.

The group presents an award to the outstanding senior and freshman member majoring in restaurant management. The senior chosen receives the Fred Simonson award and the freshman, the Larry Magmer award.

MSU HOTEL ASSOCIATION

Potential hotel administrators find a valuable supplement to classroom education in the activities of the MSU Hotel Association.

The group integrates its members into the hotel industry through the maintaining of contacts in the field and through projects related to hotel work.

Last fall the Hotel Association presented its annual dinner dance, Hotel Holiday, which was a sellout.

PACKAGING SOCIETY

Students with a desire to learn something about packaging in addition to the regular curriculum gain insight into this phase of industry through trips to the American Management Association show and Packaging Machinery Manufacturers Institute.

They supplement their trips and discussions by having men prominent in the field deliver addresses to the group at their meetings.

PHI GAMMA NU

"It's a Woman's World," according to the popular song, and according to the members of Phi Gamma Nu, this statement is true. This "woman's world" is composed of coeds who are majoring in commerce and business.

The group was organized in 1950 as the Omieron chapter here at MSU. The members aim for closer friendship and high scholarship.

Highlighting sorority meetings, which bring together the students and professional business graduates, is presentation of the Ruth VanDerJagt scholarship cup.

SOCIAL WORK CLUB

A problem of concern in today's world is that of the socially abused person. Students who are interested in helping needy persons to help themselves find their services are needed by the Social Work Club.

Meetings of this club are devoted to discussion of social work problems and opportunities in the field of social work. Guest speakers, usually well-known social workers, provide authoritative material for discussions.

Pres. Hannah honored Gottlieb Duttweiler, world famous Swiss Executive, with the first M.S.U. International Marketing Award at a PSE dinner.

PI SIGMA EPSILON

A shopping basket, grocery list and a member of Pi Sigma Epsilon is a combination which would solve the shopping problems of any Spartan wife.

Dedicated to the purpose of linking work and study, the group is open to students majoring in food marketing and is composed mostly of students who have left managerial positions in the business world to enroll at MSU, many on scholarships provided by their companies.

PSE was organized in 1957 on the MSU campus as the first group of its kind in the country. It now has fraternal chapters at Cornell University and the University of Southern California.

High points of the chapter meetings have included guest speakers H. V. McNamara, President of National Tea, R. L. Treuenfels, Executive Vice President of National Wholesale Grocer's Association and C. W. Cook, Executive Vice President of General Foods.

ALPHA EPSILON RHO

A voice signals "Thirty seconds till show time," and the members of Alpha Epsilon Rho take their places for the TV program produced by the honorary each term.

The purpose of this national radio-television honorary is to promote high standards in the broadcasting industry. Qualifications for membership are a 2.0 all college and a 3.0 average in major courses.

Each year, in addition to term TV productions, Alpha Epsilon Rho sponsors workshops, prominent speakers in the broadcasting field, and an annual field trip.

FORENSICS UNION

If you have a flair for effective speaking the MSU Forensic Union has a place for you. This very active group, organized on our campus in 1956, competes annually with schools across the country in debates. Organized by students, members strive to improve their ability in public speaking, discussion, and debate.

The top-notch speakers in this group serve as pledges for Delta Sigma Rho, the National Honorary Forensic Society.

KAPPA ALPHA MU

Creativity with a camera is the phrase distinguishing the members of Kappa Alpha Mu, photo-journalism honorary. Each individual member exhibits his skill in photography by his published works. Also members must be sophomores with a 2.0 all-college average.

Annually Kappa Alpha Mu takes the responsibility of co-sponsoring Homecoming with the senior class. Additional services to the university include photographing all special events, and also individual photography work for organizations.

MSU PLAYERS

Students with a flair for dramatics find their niche in campus activities in the Michigan State University Players. In order to become a member a student must not only be star-struck but also must have earned four points in work on dramatic productions.

The highly favorable sale of University Theatre coupon books testifies to the success of the group in encouraging the support of the student body.

The Players sponsors theatre trips to Detroit and maintains the Green Room, scene of receptions for visitors.

SIGMA ALPHA ETA

The importance of communication through speech is fully recognized by the members of Sigma Alpha Eta, the newly organized speech honorary. Speech and hearing rehabilitation are given primary emphasis.

Sigma Alpha Eta provides learning experiences not offered in the formal course work. It also carries on correspondence with organizations interested in the field of speech and hearing. Fellowship among the faculty and the students is encouraged to advance the esteem of the profession.

SIGMA DELTA CHI

Sophomore and upper class men with above average scholarship who are planning to go into some field of journalism are eligible for membership in Sigma Delta Chi, journalism honorary for men.

The purpose of the honorary is to promote good ethics in journalism, and to study and uphold freedom of the press. The regular meetings of the organization feature speakers in the newspaper and magazine fields and discussions on current trends in journalism.

THETA ALPHA PHI

The lure of the footlights has captured the talents of the members of Theta Alpha Phi, national dramatics honorary. Membership is achieved through earning points for work on campus dramatic productions.

The creativity for which the theatre is known is promoted by the group. It produces its own three-act play as well as contributing to other dramatic events.

Theta Alpha Phi presents the Achievement Award to the outstanding senior of the year. Also the unique "Sparty" awards are presented to the best actors and actresses of the year.

THETA SIGMA PHI

Budding women journalists find an outlet and atmosphere for additional professional training in Theta Sigma Phi, the national professional fraternity for women in journalism.

Capping the year's activities by the group is the annual Matrix Table luncheon for women in the field of communications throughout the state. An award is presented at this time to the most outstanding woman graduate of the school of journalism.

Membership in Theta Sig is limited to women in the departments of journalism, radio-television and general communication arts with high academic achievement.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION

A professional attitude toward the teaching of vocational agriculture is sought by the members of the Agricultural Education club. These future teachers also participate in many events and projects which they feel will promote student-faculty relationships.

The Ag Education club sponsors an intercollege student exchange program, maintains a display at Career Carnival, and regularly sends delegates to the National Future Farmer's convention.

DELTA PSI KAPPA

Providing freshmen physical education majors with handbooks of the curriculum and special tutoring in physical education are the functions of Delta Psi Kappa, professional physical education honorary for women.

Since 1948, when the group was organized on campus, the membership has selected girls with a 2.3 all-university grade point average for the purpose of developing interest and promoting fellowship in this field.

A national award is given bi-annually to women engaged in research work.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION CLUB

The first order of business this fall for the Industrial Education Club was a complete reorganization of the club and election of officers.

From there, the club went into action by having Mr. Peterson of the Placement Bureau speak to the members at their next meeting. The members also attended a lecture of the Michigan Education Association.

The club didn't neglect the social aspect of its organization for they had a social evening at the forestry cabin in the fall.

KAPPA DELTA PI

Underpriviledged children in Manila are given the opportunity to attend a kindergarten class under the sponsoring service of Kappa Delta Pi, education honorary.

Another function of the group is the anual tea for faculty of the college of education, a student-faculty event.

Junior standing, an all-university grade point average in the upper fifth of the class, interest in the field of education and leadership potential are the requirements of membership.

Engineering

ENGINEERING COUNCIL

Coordination is the key word in the operation of the Engineering Council, as the assembled group represents all the engineering organizations on campus.

The popularity of the Engineering Exposition can be attributed to the efforts of the Council which sponsors the event. It presents a Service Award to the organization contributing the most to the Exposition.

Other widely publicized events undertaken by the Council include an all-university dance and the midget auto race each year.

ASM - AFS

Metals, precious and otherwise, attract the attention of members of the American Society for Metals and the American Foundrymen's Society. Persons interested in metallurgy and its applications as well as majors in the field are part of the organization.

Participation in the Engineering Council and the Engineering Exposition are only part of the activities of the ASM-AFS. Guest speakers in the metallurgical engineering profession as well as other special programs are scheduled throughout the year.

AIChE

The chemical engineers can claim the honor of winning the midget auto race last year. As if that wasn't enough honor, they also won the Dean's Award for the group contributing most to the Engineering Exposition.

The American Institute of Chemical Engineers is open to all chemical engineering students. It exists to promote a better understanding of the profession.

As well as participating in activities within the College of Engineering, members of the AICE make up teams for intramural basketball and bowling.

AIEE-IRE

The American Institute of Electrical Engineers and Institute of Radio Engineers has the distinction of the longest name among the campus engineering organizations. It claims electrical engineering students as members.

Promotion of interest in the profession is accomplished through guest speakers, special movies, and field trips. Also technical literature is made available to the members for their use.

Each year a special award is given to the outstanding senior in the field of electrical engineering.

ASCE

Time for socializing as well as learning is provided for all civil engineers by the American Society of Civil Engineers. Members have the opportunity to become acquainted with fellow students and the engineering faculty as well as associating with the professional senior society.

Key activities include the Engineering Exposition and a spring term picnic. Also the civil engineers hold a joint banquet with the chapter of the ASCE from the University of Michigan.

CHI EPSILON

Chi Epsilon, the national civil engineering honorary, strives to help its members understand the civil engineer's place in today's society and to further develop his abilities.

The primary purpose of this club is to honor any outstanding students enrolled in civil engineering. Eligibility standards require a student to be in the upper one-third of his junior or senior engineering class.

Chi Epsilon was organized on MSU's campus in 1952.

PI TAU SIGMA

Mechanical engineers in the top third of the junior and senior classes may become members of Pi Tau Sigma.

Each year the group gives the L. C. Miller Award to the outstanding sophomore engineering student, and last year it received the Engineering Exposition award for the best body design in a midget auto.

The MSU chapter also sponsors refresher courses for mechanical engineers preparing for the Michigan Registration Examination.

SIGMA PHI DELTA

Engineering, whether it is mechanical, chemical, or electrical, has some characteristics common in all its applied fields. These charateristics bind all engineering students together in Sigma Phi Delta.

The organization schedules well-known guest speakers throughout the year. It also publicizes the Spartan Engineer, the journal for engineering students.

Outside the realm of engineering members participate in intramural football and softball.

TAU BETA PI

Scholastic achievement in engineering is recognized by membership in Tau Beta Pi, engineering honorary. Engineering majors in the top fifth of the senior class and the top eighth of the junior class are eligible.

Like the other engineering organizations, Tau Beta Pi plans and executes an exhibit for the annual Engineering Exposition. It also presents a special award in the form of a slide rule to the outstanding freshman in the field of engineering.

HOME ECONOMICS COUNCIL

A trip during winter term highlights the activities of the members of the home economics council. This year the group traveled to Chicago in February to attend a province workshop.

Other activities of the group include the child care center and catering service.

Presidents of the professional home economics clubs make up the membership of the group.

They participated in activities carnival and in "Who's Who and What's What" this year.

OMICRON NU

This spring Omicron Nu, the home economics honorary, celebrated its 51st anniversary on campus at MSU.

Juniors and seniors majoring in home economics, graduate students with a 3.5 all-university grade point average and faculty members are eligible for admission.

Recognition of scholarship, and leadership and research in the field of home economics is the object of the group.

INDIAN STUDENT ASSOC.

The promotion of better understanding among students from different parts of the world is one of the prime aims of the Indian Students Association. Originally intended as a social organization for Indian students, this club has extended its membership and activities to include any interested student.

INDONESIAN STUDENT CLUB

For students whose homes are halfway around the globe, home can be brought a little closer through membership in the Indonesian Students Association. Meeting with others from their homeland, discussing political problems of the area and working together on projects seems to ease the distance for students from Indonesia.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB

People from the four corners of the earth are brought companionably together through International Club. This organization welcomes anybody into its membership, whether American or foreign student, and provides its members with the opportunity for a stimulating exchange of ideas and customs.

A constant line of projects and activities keeps members busy. The club sponors an annual international talent show, an international dinner, the exciting International festival, and the Cosmopolitan ball.

KOREAN CLUB

What is the postage to Korea? A member of the Korean club, whose letters home must travel half way around the world, would be able to tell you.

They would also be willing to discuss any questions of international reference, as their charter proposes improving international understanding and promoting fellowship among Korean students.

The group received the first place award in the Variety show in 1959. They also participate in the International festival each year.

AMERICAN GUILD OF ORGANISTS

There are two requirements for membership in the American Guild of Organists: The ability to play the organ, and a sincere interest in church music. Those who meet the requirements reap great esthetic rewards from their membership in this organization.

The goals of the group are clearly formulated: to advance the cause of worthy sacred music, and to provide their members with an opportunity to discuss the professional aspects of their interest.

Members obtain experience through annual recitals.

MSU SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The MSU Symphony Orchestra, under the able direction of Dr. Hans Lampl, is dedicated to bringing the pleasures of good symphonic music to students and faculty of Michigan State.

A good understanding and appreciation of music, as well as proficiency in an instrument, is required for membership in the orchestra, determined by audition. The orchestra gives regular concerts in the Music auditorium and performs for numerous special campus events.

The highlights of the year for members of the symphony are the frequent field trips to schools and cities throughout the state. The orchestra also presents an annual all-university Christmas program.

Glee club members spend hours in rehearsal each week to polish their numbers for performance.

The Michigan State University Men's Glee club was organized in order to offer a place for its members to "sing for the sheer joy of singing" and to develop in its members and in its audiences a greater appreciation for music in its various aspects.

The Glee Club has sung for many conferences on our campus, including an appearance at State's first pep rally this fall. They have also made various tours about the state and country, this year travelling to New York and the upper peninsula of Michigan. These tours have earned the club a reputation for outstanding talent.

In addition to two free concerts each year for the student body, the Men's Glee club entertains at other University functions.

Selected on the basis of auditions, the Men's Glee Club is under the direction of Mr. Gordon Flood.

MSU WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB

A blending of 60 voices in beautiful melody – Women's Glee Club. The women in this organization are primarily concerned with expression through the medium of music, and with educational experience in group singing.

Women's Glee Club has many opportunities for public performance each year. The first performance takes place during fall term orientation week, when they sing at the annual AWS orientation program for new students.

They follow this up with a ceremonious Christmas Vespers Service in Alumni Chapel, where they present both instrumental and choral numbers.

The annual spring concert of Women's Glee Club features a musical format ranging from popular to strictly classical pieces. Shortly after the concert, the glee club leaves the campus for several days for a musical tour of Michigan cities and high schools.

The most enjoyable event of the year for the musical coeds is the annual spring visit to the Boys' Vocational School, where they present a short concert and then invite the boys to join them in singing rounds of music.

Musically talented women find expression by singing with the Women's Glee club.

SPANISH CLUB

An "Operation Friendship" committee to foster the unity between the Americas is one of the activities of the MSU Spanish Club. The members aim at increased understanding through an exchange of language, ideas, and customs.

Displaying enthusiasm in international activities, the Spanish club took the third place award in the 1960 International Festival. The club also participated in the Spanish Poetry Contest.

PI MU EPSILON

According to the members of Pi Mu Epsilon, the intricacies of numbers are not only fascinating but also challenging. Encouraging this interest and also rewarding high scholarship in the area of mathematics are the purposes of this honorary society.

Membership is determined by the individual's all university average and his average within the mathematics department. A 3.0 average in math courses is required. Enrollment in a 300-level math course is also a prerequisite for membership.

RUSSIAN CLUB

Nyet! You do not have to speak Russian to be a member of the MSU Russian Club. All that is required is a desire for international understanding and an interest in the Russian culture.

The formation of Russian Club was indicative of the new emphasis on foreign language at MSU this year. A record number of students signed up for beginning Russian classes fall term.

The meetings of the club featured the works of such well-known figures as Tolstoy, Pavlov, and Pasternak.

TAU SIGMA

Tau Sigma honorary was organized on campus in 1923 for juniors in the colleges of Business and Public Service and Science and Arts carrying a 3.4 all-college average.

Tau Sigma awards a plaque to one freshman student from each of the two colleges represented. The award is based upon the highest point standing in the class.

Initiation takes place during a formal banquet meeting each spring term.

ALPHA DELTA THETA

Alpha Delta Theta was organized to unite women preparing for careers in medical technology and to achieve definite standards in this field. Raising the prestige of the medical technology students and inspiring members to individual effort are among its goals.

The group participates in activities of social and professional interest, including Activities Carnival, field trips, and service projects for Giltner Hall.

Alpha Delta Theta presents a service award each year to the member who has best served the organization.

PRE-MED SOCIETY

The members of the Pre-Medical Society are all united in their common goal, that of one day becoming M.D.'s. Open to both pre-med and pre-dent students, the club strives to acquaint the members with the principles of medicine and the medical profession.

One feature of the club is that they provide volunteer services to both the community as well as the campus in order to gain more practical experience in the field. Physicians and surgeons are often invited to speak.

AVMA

The American Veterinary Medical Association claims a membership roll of ninety-five percent of the students enrolled in the college of Veterinary Medicine. This large membership provides the many students with more extensive material in their particular field.

This year the club sent a student representative to the American Veterinary Medical Association convention. The varied activities of this organization also include social functions. They sponsored a Medical Ball in conjunction with Alpha Delta Theta, the professional organization for women in medical technology.

ARNOLD AIR SOCIETY

Arnold Air Society tries to offer advanced Air Force cadets an opportunity to learn more about officer leadership training.

Each year they sponsor the Coronation Ball, a highlight dance of the fall season on campus. In the spring Arnold Air Society gives another dance, this time for the seniors and the newly commissioned officers.

This group also has charge of the election of AFROTC sponsors. These coeds serve the corps and are hostesses at official functions.

MSU RIFLE CLUB

The promotion of civilian marksmanship is the aim of the MSU Rifle club. The members feel that many civilians, both men and women, can benefit from knowledge of the safe use of firearms.

In keeping with this aim, the Rifle club presents two awards yearly: one each to the top man and woman sharpshooters in the club.

The Rifle club, which separated from pistol club and formed a separate organization in 1953, holds target shooting practice in Demonstration hall.

PERSHING RIFLES

Acting as a receiving group for all visiting ROTC inspectors is one function of the Pershing Rifles. It is also their duty to act as an honor guard at the presentation of the corps sponsors at the Coronation Ball in the fall, at various spring parades and at commencement.

The members, who belong to the National Society of Pershing Rifles, Company L-3 must have an ROTC three point average for membership. This drill team can be seen in halftime shows at basketball games.

SCABBARD AND BLADE

Scabbard and Blade, the national military society, was organized to promote better relations between the military service and the civilian population. They try to give accurate information about the military requirements of the United States.

This group actively participates in the rifle league and national rifle and pistol matches. The members can be seen assisting each term in campus blood drives.

GREEN SPLASH

The annual lavish water show is produced by members of MSU's mermaid group, Green Splash. Cries of "Westward H_2O" set theme for last year's show.

A senior life saving certificate, an all-college 2.0, and a high degree of skill in the water are requirements for admission to Green Splash. The women who attain membership then take part in intercollegiate synchronized swimming meets, intramural competition, and the annual water show. Badges, pins, and a trophy are given to each year's outstanding members.

SAILING CLUB

During spring term registration, you undoubtedly noticed a big boat sitting in the middle of the hall. If you happened to be on or about Lake Lansing spring term, you might also have noticed that same boat skimming over the waves, with the proud and exuberant members of Sailing Club manning the craft.

The MSU Sailing Club represents MSU in all sailing regattas in the Big 10. The club owns property and boats on Lake Lansing, to which the members flock during spare moments. Anyone interested is welcome to join the club and learn and enjoy the sport of sailing.

PROMENADERS

"Swing your partner," sings the caller, and the Promenaders begin another gay evening of dance.

The only requirements for membership in Promenaders are an interest and an average ability in folk dancing. The group has a lot of fun, and in the process preserves and promotes square and folk dancing. The group also promotes good public relations for the university through demonstrations.

WAA BOARD

For the sports-minded coed, participation in the Women's Athletic Association is a must. This group plans a full program of activities for women, including volleyball, swimming, bowling, tennis and golf.

These activities are sponsored and directed by the WAA Board. Board members are chosen by the previous year's members on the basis of petitions submitted.

The Board awards letters on a point basis to individuals excelling in sports.

Religion

Student religious groups, such as the Baptist Student Fellowship, often hold study meetings and religious presentations.

Weekly meetings featuring discussions, lectures, dramatic worship and music highlighted the activities of the American Baptist Student Fellowship. This active religious group is dedicated to providing MSU with opportunities for Christian fellowship, training and service.

This spring the Baptist Student Center was opened to provide lounge, dining and recreational facilities for the group. The new center allowed a considerable diversification of activities for the Baptist students on campus.

B'NAI B'RITH

The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation is devoted to cultural, religious, social and counseling activities among Jewish university students. The regular Hillel program includes religious services on the Sabbath and holidays, as well as forums, discussion and study groups.

Famous Biblical and historical events are celebrated through such ceremonies as the Passover Seder and the Purim "Hillel'z-a-Poppin" affair.

Hillel also sponsors the interfaith supper, athletic tournaments, folk dance groups and the Film Festival.

CANTERBURY CLUB

Members of Canterbury Club for Episcopalian students were kept busy this year with everything from religious retreats to a pancake supper on Shrove Tuesday.

In November the group traveled to Wesley Woods for their fall retreat. Later they participated in the State Canterbury Club conference at Saline Valley Farms.

The group's program for the year included regular discussions and visiting speakers. The Right Reverend Robert DeWitt, Suffragan Bishop of Michigan, was the featured speaker of the year.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE ORGANIZATION

Uniting Christian Scientists at MSU and correcting erroneous impressions concerning the ideas of the Christian Science religion are the man purposes of the Chrstan Science Organization.

To promote this purpose, the group holds weekly testimonial meetings, and sponsors two lectures a year by well known Christian Science leaders of the U. S.

CHRISTIAN STUDENT FOUNDATION

Protestants of any denomination are eligible for membership in the Christian Student Foundation. This group has as its purpose the furthering of Christian principles among all students on campus.

On each term's agenda is a religious retreat, as well as regular weekly programs which consist of lectures, discussions and worship services.

DISCIPLE STUDENT FELLOWSHIP

The purpose of Disciple Student Fellowship, an interdenominational student group, is to unite Christian students in spiritual growth and to provide them a contact with other off-campus Christian organizations.

The aims of the religious group are carried out through regular study, worship and discussion meetings, as well as informal social activities.

GAMMA DELTA

A religious organization for Lutheran students, Gamma Delta is active in many worthwhile service and religious activities. One of the group's main projects is to raise money for international Lutheran missionaries.

Gamma Delta annually sends delegates to a Lutheran winter camp, and annually the delegates return with honors and awards given to the group for their activities.

Regular discussions, vesper services, retreats and parties keep the members busy.

PAN-ORTHODOX ASSOCIATION

The strengthening of religious, social and educational maturity among Eastern Orthodox students is the prime purpose of the Pan-Orthodox Association. Open to all members of the Eastern Orthodox church, the religious club sponsors retreats, services, concerts and lectures.

An important activity of the group is assisting students from foreign nations in becoming oriented to American social and religious customs.

SPARTAN CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

A non-denominational religious organization, Spartan Christian Fellowship attempts to forward Christian principles through prayer, Bible studies and discussions.

Social activities of the group center around Bethel Manor, Christian living unit, where discussions, banquets and informal social gatherings are held.

CATHOLIC STUDENT ORGANIZATION

The purpose of the Catholic Student Organization is to mold Catholic students into a common united group through social, academic and religious activities.

In keeping with this aim, the CSO held non-credit religion classes and daily religious services for its members at the Catholic Student Center.

Friday night movies and Saturday nght dances were a regular part of the schedules for CSO members, and few missed the annual semi-formal Cardinal Ball.

"Operation Understanding," a winter term project of CSO, brought various campus religious groups together with the purpose of increasing understanding.

The group centers its activities around the modern new center, located centrally on M.A.C. avenue. Daily and Sunday services are held for Roman Catholic students in St. John's church, and the adjoining student center is available for social and informal religious activities.

Three priests are in residence at St. John's to assist students at any time.

Informal coffee hours bring CSO members together for discussion and socializing.

TRINITY COLLEGIATE FELLOWSHIP

Regular Bible study and prayer meetings are sponsored by the Trinity Collegiate Fellowship with the purpose of strengthening the spiritual life of students.

This non-denominational Christian group meets in the Trinity church every Sunday evening for buffet supper, devotional services, and various social activities such as films, group sings and discussions.

WESLEY FOUNDATION

Methodist students on campus find the activities of the Wesley Foundation interesting, informative and educational. Most of the group's activities are held at the new and modern center on Harrison road.

A spring term field trip to Washington D.C. was the high point of the year for 31 Wesley members. The members were also kept busy with Wednesday morning communion breakfasts and forum meetings every Sunday.

Service groups specialize in serving the university in many ways. Alpha Phi Omega places signs such as these on campus lawns each spring.

Social and Service

"Let's beat the champs," was the slogan of Alpha Phi Omega during the fall term blood drive which they sponsored. Their goal was to meet the challenge set them by the inmates of Jackson Prison, the world's champion blood donors. Although MSU fell short of the goal, the blood drive was highly successful, due to the famous hard work and spirit of Alpha Phi Omega.

This men's service organization, consisting of former Boy Scouts, also assists during registration, ushers at campus activities, acts as guides for visitors and new students, and works with Boy Scout troops.

MSU VETERANS' ASSOCIATION

The Two Point Dinner begun by the MSU Veterans Association several years ago seems on its way to becoming an established tradition at State. At this dinner, open to all students with a 2.0 average or better, an outstanding faculty member and student are presented with a certificate of honor. Gov. John B. Swainson spoke at the spring affair.

If you attended any football games last fall, you could not have missed the huge white sheet raised over the heads of a group in the stands. The sheet carried the picture of the infamous duck, symbol of the MSU Vets. Most likely this was also the section from which the loudest cheers were issuing.

The Veterans' Association annually throws a Santa Claus party for its members. With the usual enthusiasm of these campus doers, they join little league baseball players in an annual car wash.

SPARTAN WIVES

For the wives of married students, Spartan Wives is just the ticket. It provides recreation and education for its members through talks, discussions and lessons in bridge and various sports. This year Mrs. G. Mennen Williams was one of the group's speakers.

The wives help the Ingham county TB society with TB chest X-rays. They also sponsor a Christmas party for underprivileged children.

SPARTAN WOMEN'S LEAGUE

A friendly welcome to campus is extended to new faculty members by the teams of Spartan Hi-Wagon, sponsored and organized by Spartan Women's League.

This women's service organization also joins with other women's groups in sponsoring Spinster Spin, and with Alpha Phi Omega service honorary in sponsoring the spring term blood drive.

Spartan Women's League aids transfer students by presenting Koffee Kapers for the new students.

Room 338 of Student Services is the familiar location of all women's service groups.

Spartan governing and coordinating groups serve widely diversified areas of student life. Elected and appointed student leaders in many groups, ranging from those of campus-wide influence to those with more specialized control, share a common interest in being of service to fellow students. . . .

BOARD OF PUBLICATIONS

The main decision making body regarding supervision of student publications is the MSU Board of Student Publications. The board is made up of publications editors, the director of publications, one AUSG representative and various administrative officials.

The board selects and formally appoints the editors and business managers of the student newspaper and yearbook, and the special interest magazines.

STATE NEWS EDITORIAL

A willingness to brave any and all dangers to get a story characterizes the editorial staff of the Michigan State News. This trait brings both commendations and condemnations from readers.

Only staffers actually realize the effort that goes into each daily issue of the State News. Confusion reigns supreme as the paper is slowly but surely fitted together. Circles under the eyes are a common characteristic of all the night editors.

TATE NEWS ADVERTISING

At times the necessity for money overwhelms the ate News. Outside of the paper's printing its own olding currency", the advertising staff manages the fi-ncial apparatus.

Staff members convince local businesses of the ad-ntages of placing ads in the newspaper. Also they cure advertisements from national businesses and or-nize the campus classified section. All these adver-ements are arranged and proofread before being inted in the paper.

STATE NEWS CIRCULATION

The unsung heroes of the Michigan State News are the individuals comprising the circulation staff. The buzz of the alarm clock at 5:30 a.m. starts them off every morning as they deliver the newspaper to living units and campus buildings and offices.

In addition to circulating 19,100 papers daily, the staff mails copies to subscribers and advertisers. Another function of circulation is to keep the files of back issues of the State News up-to-date.

WOLVERINE EDITORIAL STAFF

Wolverine staffers discovered this year that a "year" book actually requires more than fourteen months of concentrated effort to make beginning dreams a hard-covered reality.

Beginning in April, 1960, feverish efforts to cover the campus in words and pictures got under way.

By June, 1961, frazzled nerves and worn typewriter ribbons were all that remained as a tribute to the final press deadline that had wonderously been met.

WOLVERINE BUSINESS STAFF

The queer-looking bird appearing all over campus proclaimed the motto of the 1961 Wolverine business staff: "Hudda! Buy your Wolverine."

Promoting sales of the yearbook is a significant part of the responsibilities facing the business manager and his staff. Also keeping the books straight, ordering supplies, and signing picture contracts manage to create a continual buzz of activity in the office.

The MSU Veterinarian moved into new offices this ear on Pub Row. They took up new and more spacious iarters in the former Spartan office.

From this new station, they published three issues of eterinary news designed to keep all vet. med. students vare of recent developments in the field. All staff embers are students in good standing in the College of eterinary Medicine and members of the American Vet- inary Medical Association.

Aside from this serious duty, staffers spent time polish- g up their Oilcan Award which they retired perma- ently after winning it for the third consecutive year. ne award is presented to the publication presenting the ost clever and original skit at the Publications Banquet May.

Co-editors Edward Williams, James O'Brien and George Padgett of the MSU Veterinarian poured over material submitted to them for each issue.

SPARTAN ENGINEER

Those engineering students who feel a need to express themselves find their outlet in the Spartan Engineer magazine.

Journalistic efforts dealing with general contemporary developments in engineering as well as technical and specialized subjects are accepted.

Awards in the form of plaques or keys are given to members of the staff for outstanding contributions to the magazine. The awards are presented annually at the Publications Banquet.

PUBLICATIONS DARKROOM

Being afraid of the dark doesn't secure anyone a position on the darkroom staff. All students interested in the many aspects of photography are welcome to join the organization.

The darkroom enjoys the distinction of being located on Pub Row. It is fully equipped to supply all the photographs requested by the various student publications. These include human interest pictures for the Wolverine and photographs of local news and feature events for the State News.

AUSG EXECUTIVE

The Executive branch of All-University Student Govrnment handles an array of services for the student ody. Student loans and insurance, free mimeographing ervices, an orientation program and academic benefits re all part of the services of AUSG to the student.

Heading the Executive branch, the president of AUSG arefully appoints the cabinet members, subject to the pproval of Student Congress. AUSG Executive branch orks closely with Congress, putting Congressional bills nd decisions into action.

STUDENT CONGRESS

Student Congress, the legislative branch of AUSG, answered student demands with several new programs and changes this year. A select Congress committee drafted an extensive report on ROTC during the summer, which was largely responsible for changes made in the program.

Congress members are elected each spring from living units and representative student groups. Congress meets each Wednesday night to discuss problems and to attempt to remedy those problems with bills, ordinances and suggestions in the form of resolutions.

ALL-UNIVERSITY JUDICIARY

Most cases of student discipline are brought before All-University Student Judiciary for primary consideration. This group of students selected from each class for a term of one year is empowered to decide the facts of each case and recommend disciplinary action.

The decisions of Judiciary are subject to approval by the office of the dean, but it is a testimony to the court's good judgment that only two reversals have been made in the court's history.

Aside from appellate jurisdiction over individual cases, the court has the power to review the constitutionality of acts of Congress or the president of AUSG.

The Student Traffic Appeal Court is empowered by All-University Student Government to dismiss any fines imposed by the Campus Police for campus driving or parking violations.

Organized in 1956 along with All-University Student Judiciary, the Student Traffic Appeal Court holds a similar record of lasting decisions. No decision of the seven-member court has ever been reversed.

Members of the court are selected by the chief justice and the president of AUSG on the basis of interviews and petitions.

NION BOARD

The Student Union building is home to the students n campus in general and to the members of Union oard in particular. The second-floor office is a hubbub confusion and excitement as Union Board organizes ne of the largest programs of university activities.

The talents of Union Board members are fully exbited during Union Board Week. Each evening a pecial event is featured — a jazz festival, a variety show, fashion show, or an art display.

Publicizing and promoting student use of the Union's facilities occupies most of Union Board's time. Weekly dances and tournaments in bridge, bowling, chess, and billiards are organized for the self-professed "experts," and instruction in bridge and dancing are provided for the novices. Students lacking funds to "follow the team" in person do so through movies of away football games. The forum lectures introduce prominent speakers discussing contemporary and controversial subjects.

The Senior Council is dedicated to increasing that unique aura of prestige enjoyed by students in their last year at MSU. It attempts to make every class activity more significant—the last Homecoming as Students, the last Water Carnival.

The Council, headed by the elected officers of the senior class, recognizes outstanding seniors through selecting and announcing seniors of the week and members of the '61 Club.

The last week of spring term is Senior Council's glory, completely planned and executed by the members. Excitement and anticipation reigns as the Council announces members of the '61 club, begins the "swing" in Senior Swingout and makes last-minute preparations for long-awaited commencement.

Members are chosen on the basis of petition and interview by the four elected officers. Each member is in charge of one of the many council activities. Unified efforts of all council members are the push behind all class activities.

Weekly meetings of senior council are held to guide the graduating class through its last year.

JUNIOR COUNCIL

Council members gathered often to deliberate class policy and mulate plans.

A flurry of activity highlighted the work of Junior council this year. Block "S" cheering section, arranged on a competitive basis, produced noteworthy turnout.

Southern warmth and hospitality invaded the snow-bound campus under the theme of "Tara," the money-making winter term J-Hop. 1500 couples danced to the music of Buddy Morrow in a setting resembling the lawn of a southern plantation.

Preceding the dance, the couples engaged in a festive dinner at the Albert Pick, arranged for them by the J-Hop Executive Board. Gift certificates were awarded to lucky ticket winners, and memorable favors were presented to all the coeds.

Spring term the Council turned its attention to honoring deserving members of the class. Outstanding Junior awards were presented to the juniors who devoted a vast amount of their time and interest to the university and their class during their past year. The awards were presented at Sorority Sing.

Finding an elusive needle in several bales of hay perplexed members of the classes of '63 and '64 during the fall term Frosh-Soph Daze sponsored by the Council.

Huge appetites for pizza are typical of Frosh-Soph council members, who manage to spread this appreciation for their favorite food all over campus during Pizza Week. This winter term feature is the major money-making project for the Council.

Divided into the economic, social, and cultural and service committees, the Council enters many fields in order to effectively serve both the freshman and sophomore classes. It welcomes freshmen during Frosh-Soph Daze, aids confused students in planning their class schedules during registration, plans Parents Weekend to introduce the university to the parents, and even invades politics with a pre-election rally to acquaint the student body with the campus various candidates.

To further aid students who are still confused at the end of the term, Frosh-Soph Council innovated review sessions of the basic colleges courses, emphasizing the important and meaningful elements presented throughout the year.

PANHELLENIC COUNCIL

Sign-up for spring rush takes place in the Student Services office which PanHel shares with other women's service groups.

Rush has more than one meaning for PanHellenic council. Guiding the activities of twenty individual sororities as well as making sorority life attractive to new coeds during rush activities require the time and the effort of all members.

In addition to its coordinating activities, Pan-Hel promotes scholarship through awarding trophies for the highest grade point average and the most improvement in average among the sororities. It encourages service to others through sponsoring a foreign student. It also honors new sorority housemothers at a fall tea.

Collaborating together, PanHel and its fellow Greek organization, Inter-Fraternity council, earned a trophy for their display in the Big 10 IFC-PanHel Conference at the University of Minnesota last spring term.

PanHel and IFC also co-sponsored "Blue Angel," the annual Greek dance, and Greek Week, that special time for all affiliates.

Bound together by a common spirit within their dividual fraternities, Greek men are also united in the operative efforts of the Inter-Fraternity Council. In dition to planning all-inclusive projects, the members the council perform legislative, executive, and judicial nctions within the Greek realm.

In the tradition of Fraternus, its own beloved symbol, C encourages the well-rounded fraternity spirit. It esents awards for imagination in homecoming displays, holarship in the academic field, and well-tuned voices Inter-Fraternity sing.

It also organizes the Community Project program in nich each fraternity aids a civic or social welfare ganization in the area.

This year a new system of rush was initiated by the aternities. Rush in the fall allowed men students ner than first-term freshmen to visit and to pledge the uses. Introductory smokers gave freshmen the opportunity to become more acquainted with the fraternity stem before winter rush began.

IFC Executive Board members Tom Finch, Frank Girardin and John Hirsch interviewed many applicants for each of the Council chairmanships.

WOMEN'S INTER-RESIDENCE COUNCIL

Appropriately called WIC, the Women's Inter-residence Council is the light of active cooperation among the women's residence halls. The residents of each hall elect a representative to the Council.

Alleviating the bewilderment of new women students when they first arrive on campus is accomplished through WIC's orientation program in the residence halls.

The highlight of the year came spring term as WIC and MHA entertained the university representatives to the Big 10 Residence Hall conference held on campus.

PRESIDENTS' COUNCIL

White tablecloths on a few tables in the dining room mean that the Presidents' Council is visiting that particular residence hall. Twice a month the presidents of the women's residence halls meet to have dinner and to hold business meetings.

Discussion of mutual problems in the living units is the main order of business. Also the possibility of communal projects is examined.

The Presidents' Council works closely with WIC in coordinating residence hall activity. It represents the viewpoint of coeds at Spartan Roundtable meetings.

MEN'S HALLS ASSOCIATION

"It's a man's world" aptly applies to the area of operaıs of the Men's Halls Association. This coordinating dy is made up of elected general officers and the presiıts of the male living units on campus.

In addition to formulating the general policy for the en's residence halls, MHA sponsors social activities. ll-length motion pictures are featured every week. ınces in the lounges provide opportunities to socialize th the opposite sex.

The spirit of friendly competition is encouraged dur- homecoming with the halls vying for the display phies. Intramural sports divide the residence halls o opposing sides as teams compete for championship cognition.

Spring term MHA co-sponsored the Big 10 Residence all Conference along with its sister organization, the omen's Inter-residence Council. Cooperation among g 10 schools was enlisted, and topics of mutual concern ere discussed by the representatives.

President Bob Gustavson called frequent meetings of MHA to coordinate the activities among men's halls and to plan for the Big 10 Conference.

CAREER CARNIVAL

"Success in the Sixties" was the theme of the Career Carnival presented fall term by the university Placement Bureau. Approximately seventy leading organizations in business, industry, education and government participated in the carnival.

The carnival has grown from twenty-three organizations in 1949 to its present size. It is the largest vocational service of its kind on any campus. In 1959 the Career Carnival received national recognition by the Wall Street Journal in front page coverage.

J-HOP EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

A sellout crowd of 1500 couples danced to the music of Buddy Morrow at the winter term J-Hop. The tremendous success of the annually festive dance was largely the result of the efforts and enthusiasm of the J-Hop Executive Council, chosen by Junior Council.

This year's committee faced from the beginning the additional handicap of last year's J-Hop having operated at a loss. But for this year's dance, the committee handled much of the work themselves rather than hiring outside help, and made a noteworthy profit on the dance.

HEERLEADERS

Admiration and response characterize the spectators they watch the cheerleaders tumble, jump and literally through the air at football and basketball games.

Their secret lies in a basic agility coupled with hard ork, exercise and practice, practice, practice. They are ected by audition each spring.

The cheerleaders became pseudo "Peter Pans" as they rformed cheers on individual trampolines before owds. Onlookers were amazed at the ability of the eerleaders to stay on their feet.

VARSITY CLUB

Any undergraduate in good scholastic standing who has won a varsity letter is eligible for active membership in the MSU Varsity Club.

Each spring the Varsity Club sponsors the Varsity-Alumni game, and then presents an outstanding player award to the deserving Alumni athlete.

The club also presents a scholarship award to its outstanding junior member, and a senior award to the graduating senior who has done the most for the club.

Behind the heavy doors and ivied walls of the LIVING UNITS, life was lively but cramped.
Most beds were bunked
in the DORMITORIES and closet space shrank.
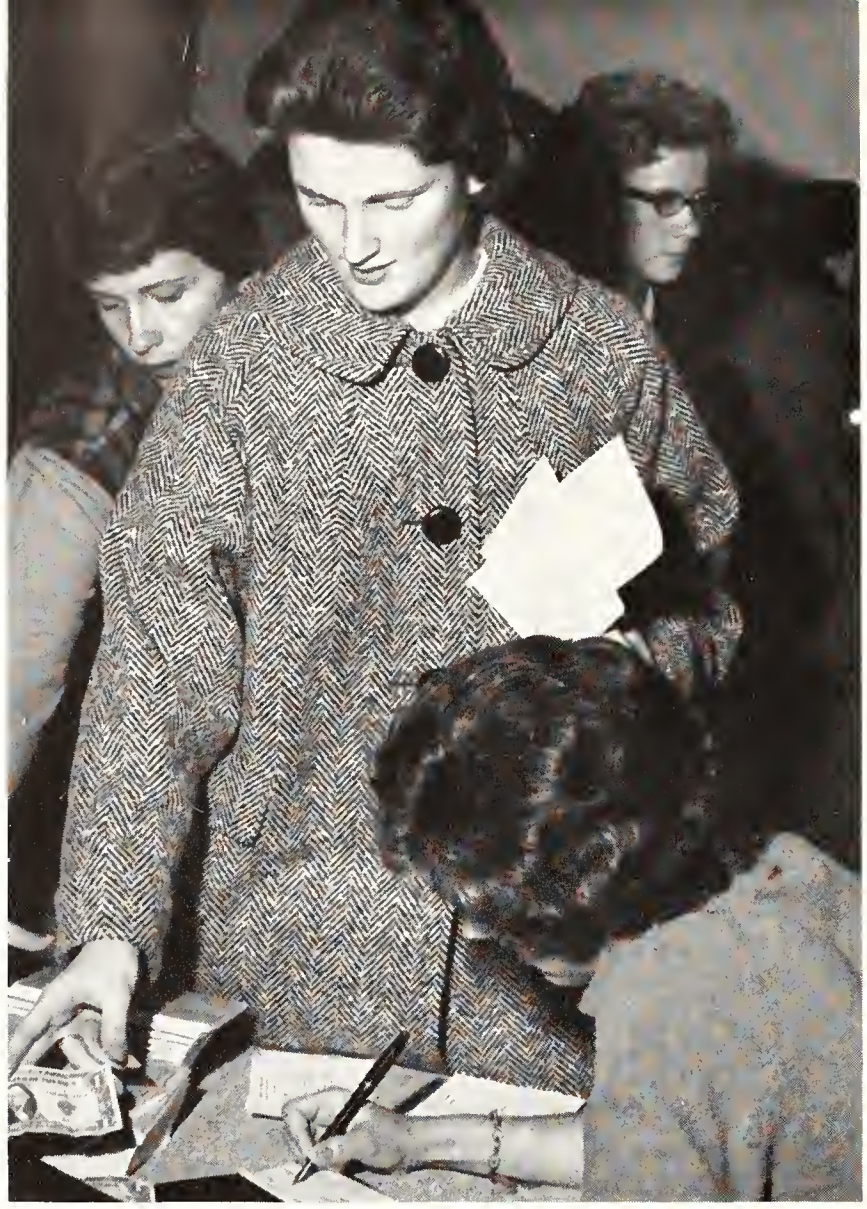
As the dorm-ers suffered,
GREEKS and CO-OPS.
But that was life...

too, felt the big squeeze.



A dollar down and a form filled out is the beginning of the long rush procedure for interested coeds.

Spartan Greeks of both sexes packed Lansing's Civic Center for the annual IFC-PanHel Ball fall term.

he IFC office in the Student Services building is the hub of all ıter-fraternity activities.

The anxious and hectic flurry of rush, the routine pleasure of the pledging period, and the flushed satisfaction of formal initiation are just the beginnings of the yearly metamorphis of becoming Greek. To most fraternity and sorority members, the fulfillment and realization of the challenge and responsibility of wearing the badge of membership comes only with the continual association with those of similar interests, values and tastes. . . .

Greeks

ıigh-flying Phi Psis promoted and staged a successful Home-ɔming pep rally, "Bacchanalia."

Members of Theta Chi, Phi Kappa Psi and Delta Zeta pitched in to decorate for their Abbott Road Triad dance.

The story of the Greeks at MSU may never make the pages of an epic poem, and activities in the houses from Harrison Road to Hagadorn Road may not be quite the same as were those between Athens and Sparta, but there are some big Greek events worth noting every year.

The two Greek Weekends, the highlight of sorority-fraternity life, feature Sorority Sing, Inter-Fraternity Sing, the Greek Olympics, the Junior 500 and Greek Feast.

Always a busy life, and often one of sustained frenzy, the graduating Greek often wonders how he ever found time to do it all—and he didn't without an occasional glance at the panic button. The worry and joy of rush is barely over before he finds himself in the chaos surrounding the house participation in Homecoming, Water Carnival, serenades and deserts.

But more important than the race for glory and trophies, is the friendship and unity, fostered through rush meetings, song practice, study table, and parties, all that makes a Spartan a Greek.

A candle-light serenade for a newly-pinned coed such as Theta Nancy Stevens is one of the highlights of her Greek life.

The hula-hoop contest at Greek Olympics drew heavy participation from sororities. Alpha Phi swung off with the first place trophy.

Tiring and exciting rounds of rush parties attracted more than 1,000 women to parties such as this one at the Pi Beta Phi house.

Excitement ran literally high at Lambda Chi Alpha's "Junior 500" race 'round Circle drive.

To every student who chooses to become a Greek, the wearing of a fraternity or sorority badge has a different meaning. But one thing remains the same to all, the combination of comradeship, enthusiasm, and pride, expressed in many different ways, that makes each house something special to all of its members.

The graduating Greek has many things to remember about his college days, not the least of which are the hammer and saws of his display building days. The display may not always win first place, but if it even stands up or floats the pride of accomplishment is there.

There are parties, too, full dress dinner parties and parties using every theme imaginable. There are deserts, parties for children, Christmas caroling, springtime serenades, and picnics. All of these are part of the collegiate magic that make up life on MSU Olympus.

The beginning of a sorority heat at the "Junior 500" matched masculine muscle and feminine driving skill.

Crowded, smoke-filled rooms are familiar scenes for all fraternity men as they plunge into rush each term. Here the men of Delta Upsilon host a smoker.

ΑΧΩ

The Alpha Chi's piano is a popular meeting place at all times.

Aside from their enthusiastic participation in such all university activities as Water Carnival, Sorority Sing and Greek Week, the women of Alpha Chi Omega are active in service work.

Each year the sorority sponsors a party for children in the Lansing area afflicted with cerebral palsy, playing games and providing entertainment for the children.

During the summer, several members of Alpha Chi Omega traveled to DePauw university in Greencastle, Indiana, to celebrate the sorority's festive and long-awaited Diamond Jubilee.

ALPHA DELTA PI

Big plans for a big new house were foremost in the minds of the Alpha Delta Pis this year. They plan to move into their new house on Harrison Road during winter term of next year.

Yearly football games with their next-door neighbors, Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity, highlight the fall season for the A D Pis. The games are usually victorious for the coeds, although the Phi Kaps claim they use unfair feminine tactics.

The service project for Alpha Delta Pi is contributing to the National Society for Crippled Childen and Adults. They also pay the nursery school tuition of a crippled child each term.

Last year the A D Pis displayed their musical ability by taking a 4th place in Sorority Sing. They also sponsored a delegation to the Campus UN Conference.

When spring term rolls 'round, the bike rack at the A D Pi house is always loaded with handy transportation.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

Again this year, outstanding grades were the key word at the Alpha Epsilon Phi house. The winter term pledge class ranked first in scholarship among all the sororities. The coeds managed, however, to leave the books long enough to take a first among sororities in the fall term blood drive.

Each year, in service to the community, the A E Phi's sponsor the Dolls for Democracy project. They give demonstrations to children's groups, showing them how to make handmade dolls of famous Americans, and stressing the American principle of equality.

A yearly event for the sorority is the Seder dinner, held at the beginning of Passover.

A E Phi's prepare posters for a car wash.

Helping hands are always found among the sisters for bothersome chores such as hemming.

Music plays an important part in the lives of the Alpha Gamma Deltas. For the third year in a row, the sorority has won a first place in Sorority Sing. The music minded coeds joined voices with the Theta Chis for Christmas vesper services in Alumni Chapel.

Water Carnival and Homecoming occupied the labors and time of the Alpha Gams, as did the Jr. 500 in which they won a second place trophy.

The interest and effort of the coeds in service projects was expressed through their work with cerebral palsied and physically handicapped children.

AKA

The women of AKA devote part of meeting time each week to just plain fun.

Coke dates in the Union grill are a favorite form of entertainment for the coeds of AKA.

The Alpha Kappa Alphas started the year off with a bang when they took a first place in the Leap Frog contest during Greek Olympics.

The actives furthered their purpose of community service by working with the students from the Michigan School for the Blind, and by sending CARE packages. They also contributed to the Council on Human Rights, to aid the organization in its service projects.

Each year the Alphas sponsor their "Can Can Party", a charity dance for the benefit of needy families. Admission to the dance, strangely enough, is a can of food from each coed and her date.

The local chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha is one of the newer sororities on campus, founded here in 1954.

A unique service project for the women of Alpha Omicron Pi is baby sitting for Sparty, the Sigma Phi Epslon Spartan head, at football games. This worthwhile effort prevents Sig Eps from the opposing school from stealing the treasured item.

Also in the line of service, the A O Pis have adopted a needy Lansing family, for whom they give a Christmas and Easter party, complete wth presents.

Active in campus activities, the coeds took a second place award for their Homecoming display, and participated in intramural sports and Water Carnival.

ALPHA PHI

Championship form with hula hoops was demonstrated by the Phis in Greek Olympics—and kept by daily practice.

Few coeds go through rush without being impressed by the beautiful winding staircase in the Alpha Phi house, which plays a large part in the rush ceremony.

The display judges for Homecoming must also have been impressed by the elaborate display in front of the Alpha Phi house, for they awarded the sorority a third place trophy for its work.

Intramural sports are important to the coeds, and their interest and ability in this field won them the intramural sports trophy for sororities.

The annual Dad's Day is long awaited by the coeds. They treat their deserving dads to lunch, and then escort them to an afternoon football game. Also awaited by the Phi's is the traditional spring bermuda party.

"Alpha Xi" said rapidly comes out sounding like "fuzzy," and thus the coeds carry the national title of the "fuzzy girls." In keeping with this nickname, the Alpha Xi Delta actives present incoming pledges with stuffed sock "fuzzy" dolls.

Alpha Xi Delta stresses individual academic and service activity in its members. The scholarship ring is given yearly to the active with the highest three-year point average; and each week the member who has made outstanding civic or social contributions to the university is recognized by the sorority.

The Alpha Xis participate in all university and Greek events, and aid the cause of eliminating juvenile delinquency as a service project.

Music makers among the Alpha Xis brighten both their own days and those of their sisters.

The proper application of her make-up is something that can distinguish a lady. The Chi Os help each other with this delicate chore.

A colorful replica of their sorority pin in flowers won a first place for the Chi Omegas in the fall term Floriculture Forum Show.

In the line of extracurriculur activities, the coeds participated as a group in almost all campus events, and were extremely active as individuals in campus clubs and student government.

The Chi Omegas attempt to confine their service projects to the local level, where they can directly participate. This year they gave a big Christmas party, with presents and games, for a local orphanage.

Each year the Chi Os promote academic excellence by awarding a social science scholarship to an outstanding woman majoring in this field. The sorority has received national recognition for its National Achievement Award given to well-known and deserving women.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

The sad tale of the modern student prince won for the Tri Delts, working with Phi Delta Theta fraternity, a fourth place in Water Carnival. Traveling from the days of princes back to the days of emperors, the coeds proved their all-around ability by taking a first place in the fall term Greek Olympics.

The big house on MAC boasts many campus leaders, and it has been rumored that the Hudda Bird, symbol of the 1961 Wolverine, originated among the Tri Delts.

Academic achievement is not overlooked by Delta Delta Delta. They award graduate and undergraduate scholarships to outstanding MSU women.

Hallowe'en time brought out talented pumpkin carvers from among the Tri-Delts.

DELTA GAMMA

Mugs of Coke and a deck of cards are all that DGs need for occasional breaks from the books.

"Definitely next year" seems to have been the philosophy at the Delta Gamma house this fall, as the DG's again lost to their neighboring sorority, Gamma Phi Beta, in the annual Powder Puff Bowl.

But this defeat did not seem to dampen the spirits of the coeds. Mustering the academic forces, they again ranked among the top sororities in academic average for all three terms.

The Delta Gammas enjoyed many interesting and informative hours talking with the foreign student who lived in their house this year. In the line of service the coeds read to blind students on campus.

The Delta Gammas were proud to claim among their sorority sisters this year Arlyn Griefendorf, Miss MSU for 1961.

Last-minute preparations for a big date are a favorite activity.

ΔZ

DELTA ZETA

The Delta Zetas were the proud holders of a first place trophy in last spring's Jr. 500, and rumor has it that the coeds are already getting in condition for next year's pusheart race.

The DZs also utilize their energy in worthwhile service projects. They contribute to the Gallaudet college for deaf students, assist at a Lansing nursing home, and throw a Christmas party for underprivileged children.

Lucky indeed is the man who wins the title of "Delta Zeta Man," and lucky is the coed who is given the outstanding senior award by the national organization.

When Dad's Day rolled around this year, the fathers of the Gamma Phis had good reason to be proud of their daughters. Once again, the Gamma Phis demonstrated their "All American" prowess by trouncing the Delta Gammas in the annual Powder Puff Bowl.

After the game, the coeds entertained their Dads at a luncheon, and then escorted them to the football game.

Bed-making in the dormer is a familiar morning chore in the Kappa Delta house.

Service and Kappa Delta are almost synonymous. Football season the members welcomed shivering Greeks to their annual open house. Also in the fall the coeds entertained their deserving fathers at a luncheon as a part of Fathers' Weekend.

Later the Kappa Deltas filled a desperate need for those sorority and fraternity members obsessed with the game of bridge. Greeks from all houses were invited to participate in the Kappa Delta bridge tournament.

The sorority women brought laughter to the children of the Michigan School for the Blind through sponsoring several parties at the school.

Kappa Delta voices blended in harmony to bring pleasure to others at Sorority Sing. The coeds sang themselves to a third place in the competition.

For their hard work in university activities, the Kappas captured second place in Water Carnival and Sorority Sing and a third place for their Homecoming display.

Despite their many activities, the Kappas always seem to find time to help out at the rehabilitation Center in Okemos every Saturday.

The Kappas' spacious dining room provides study and socializing as well as dining space.

Heralding the end of a term are vacation sign-out sheets—and Phi Mus line up to complete the pleasant task.

Also during the holidays the coeds saluted their busboys for "exceptional service beyond the call of duty."

The Phi Mu women literally gave of themselves during the winter term blood drive. They drained a total which won them second place in the drive.

In the spring the coeds honored their mothers at a special Mothers' Ceremony held during Parents' weekend.

Aside from participating in most local activities, the MSU chapter of Phi Mu received several awards at the sorority's national convention last year.

PI BETA PHI

The women of Pi Beta Phi herald the arrival of Christmas with music again this year. In keeping with tradition, they joined caroling voices with the Delta Tau Deltas in the annual tree lighting ceremony.

Another tradition signifying inter-Greek spirit was the annual Monmouth Duo, where the Pi Phis joined with the Kappa Kappa Gammas in honoring Monmouth college where both sororities were founded.

The women of Pi Beta Phi founded and continue to maintain a settlement school in Gallinburg, Tennessee, which provides education for the mountain people.

Warm spring and fall afternoons very often find Pi Phis enjoying the sun and each other.

SIGMA KAPPA

The impressive hi-fi in the Sigma Kappa living room is a popular gathering place for these musical coeds.

Sports are a main activity for the active women of Sigma Kappa. They took part in intramural volleyball, softball, swimming and bowling contests, and placed high among sororities in intramural standings.

Interested in maintaining Greek unity, the Sigma Kappa coeds took part in Greek Week and on PanHellenic council, as well as holding numerous coffee hours and picnics with neighboring fraternities.

The philanthropic project of the sorority is gerontology, which they further locally by visiting nursing homes in the Lansing area.

ZTA

Snazzy door decorations always brighten up the house as well as perking up group spirit.

ZETA TAU ALPHA

Service to the community brings its own awards, as the women of Zeta Tau Alpha so discovered. In cooperation with some of the fraternities, they arranged several parties for handicapped children in the area. Working with the men of Theta Chi they gave a Halloween party for the children, complete with songs, games, and treats.

Winning a first place award for their original Homecoming display last year, the members gave it the old college try again this year in hopes that they could capture another trophy. The girls were also busy participating in Water Carnival and Junior 500.

Social Fraternities

Rare and relaxing moments with the brothers are what instill brotherhood into a fraternity.

The successful quest for a Saturday night date is very seldom a private matter for proud AEPis.

Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity is becoming notorious for unique displays and floats in campus activities. They designed the most humorous float in the Junior 500 last spring.

Sports-minded members practiced earnestly to win the fraternity handball championship. Those who had social interests, in other words the whole fraternity, participated in numerous exchange dinners and desserts with sororities.

The fraternity claims the president of B'nai B'rith-Hillel Foundation in its membership. It is well represented throughout campus activities.

A snappy game of cards is often the best way to while away the long minutes preceding the dinner bell for hungry AGRs.

The process of combining agriculture with the Greek letters Alpha Gamma Rho produces a well-known social fraternity. The College of Agriculture claims most of the members of the house.

Known for their own high scholarship, the members of Alpha Gamma Rho also sponsor a trophy which is awarded to the fraternity with the highest grade point average.

The talents of the men in softball earned them the fraternity championship last spring.

Last summer the fraternity played host to its brother chapters throughout the nation at the 36th national convention of Alpha Gamma Rho, held in Kellogg Center.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Even Tar, their husky Labrador retriever, agrees that the men of Alpha Sigma Phi have become a true part of the campus. Receiving their charter just five years ago, the men have since participated enthusiastically in many campus functions, such as the Inter-Fraternity Council Sing, Water Carnival, and Homecoming.

In the spring of last year, the Alpha Sigs took first place in the women's division of the Junior 500.

The men of Alpha Sigma Phi went all out for the University this year by being some of the more prominent donors in the annual Blood Drive. Rating high in the field of bravery, the Alpha Sigs also gave their time in assisting the Inter-Fraternity Council in their clean-up campaign.

Trusty Tar is always a willing kibitzer for any Alpha Sigma Phi functions—formal or informal.

Football practice in the front hall may be shattering to the housemother's nerves, but the men of ATO kept in shape for I.M. tilts.

The ATOs initiated a new activity on campus as they changed 'Hell Week' to 'Help Week' this year. The fraternity members spent the traditional week of pledge agony with the Department of Public Works, picking litter from the streets and byways of East Lansing.

Athletic abilities won the ATOs an impressive list of firsts in intramural track, basketball, handball, golf and table tennis. The fraternity took third place in the 1960 Greek Olympics, and the Turkey Trot. Their prize in the latter was a live goose. The house was runner-up in the block fraternity football games.

When the Royal Ballet came to campus last fall, the fraternity 'got cultured' as they entertained dancers from the famous troupe at dinner in the ATO house before the performance.

A stereo system soothes the ears of exhausted Beta men nowadays. The stereo was offered as first prize in a Marlboro cigarette contest to that fraternity collecting the greatest number of cigarette packages of the brands made by the Marlboro company. The Betas combed campus to find cigarette smokers.

They raided trash barrels, policed the streets, tore through the stadium at the end of football games, and searched their dates' purses for the coveted containers.

Without a doubt they were helped by their mascot, H. H. Herman, the sad-eyed basset who follows his men everywhere. Herman has possibly attended more classes than any other student on campus, without a sick day, even. He is a regular visitor in the State News office. The floppy-eared dog has been on campus for eight years, and was joined by his look-alike son, Stanley, in February.

DELTA CHI

Lazing and munching are always favorite avocations among the men of Delta Chi.

Delta Chi found a big slice taken off its side lawn this fall when the highway department decided to do some remodeling on Grand River Avenue. The parking lot looked a little raw, too, as the house made plans to enlarge the area.

Members donned togas and returned to the days of old Rome at a fall term party. The philosophy of "doing as the Romans did" prevailed.

Delta Chi men discovered a hidden talent when they placed third in the all-university floral display.

Intramurally the fraternity claimed the runner-up slot in bowling. They also won the championship of their block in football last year.

The Delt Sig billiards table is a popular gathering spot for talented—and lucky—brothers.

DELTA SIGMA PHI

The members of Delta Sigma Phi were crushed this fall when their homecoming display suffered a similar fate. The colorful witches from Macbeth were destroyed at the last minute by an untimely blast of wind.

Continuing their community project with the St. Vincent's Orphanage of Lansing, the men took the children to the MSU-U of Detroit football game.

Delta Sigma Phi rounded out a full social calendar with its formal term party, the Carnation Ball, and the traditional spring term Sailor's Ball.

Snacks and solitaire provide the winning combination for a study-break at the Delt house.

Winning trophies seems to be the main pastime of Delta Tau Delta. The fraternity placed in homecoming, Water Carnival, and the Junior 500. It also boasted of victories in intramural football and bowling. In addition, the house claimed the highest accolade of all, the championship in the 1960 Greek Olympics.

The talents of Delt members also extend to tuneful harmony, particularly with their sisters of Pi Beta Phi sorority. Together they present the musical setting for the annual Christmas Tree lighting ceremony.

All members of Delta Tau Delta appreciate the special preview of the homecoming queen candidates, available through the dinner sponsored by the fraternity.

Service to the community is included in activities as the men work with the YMCA.

Competitive indoor sports capture the attention of DU men.

The familiar DU bell, "Big Bill," spent some painful months in Ann Arbor last year, but was returned, painted blue and gold, for the U of M—MSU football game. Its original color restored, the big bell tolled once again the points for all home football games.

A favorite pastime at the DU house is gathering about the piano each evening after dinner to sing and be entertained by talented brothers.

The winter the fraternity held its twelfth annual Birthday Ball, the high point in the social season. Another interesting dance was a Backwards Party, for which all guests had to wear their clothes turned around.

FARMHOUSE

The new, modern house on Bogue provides a cheerful atmosphere for rush, parties, or brotherly chats for members of Farmhouse.

Members of Farmhouse are not just ten o'clock scholars but students all the time. Reminders of this point encouraged them to win the winter and spring trophies for the highest grade average last year.

The modern living quarters on Bogue Street provide a home-away-from-home for Farmhouse actives. Members are selected from those interested in agriculture, regardless of their majors.

The brothers participated in the blood drive, scoring high percentages, and in Water Carnival, earning an honorable mention. Their float was a huge model of Sophie Tucker, complete with smile, waving arm and a big white handkerchief.

KAPPA SIGMA

Combining both interests in leadership and scholarship, the men of Kappa Sigma got their teeth into many campus activities. Several members claimed positions on the committees which start the ball rolling on such events as Water Carnival and Homecoming.

On the scholastic side, the Kappa Sigs saw to it that a deserving and hardworking member was the recipient of their scholarship award, presented each term for outstanding achievement.

The Kappa Sigs are looking forward to the time when they will have a new house. With the early stages of the planning out of the way, only the results remain to be seen. Considering the amount of planning that went into its construction, the house will be a dream come true as far as the men are concerned.

Following the sale of their house, the Kappa Sigs held most of their chapter functions in the Union.

A friendly rumpus with Thor, the Lambda Chi's rambunctious mascot, is a favorite activity of all the brothers.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Each year Lambda Chi Alpha turns West Circle Drive into a replica of the Indianapolis speedway for its own Junior 500, complete with a parade as well as the separate heats. Living units cheer their teams to victory, the winners receiving trophies.

An appreciation of beauty is shown by the fraternity's eager willingness to select queens to rein over the Junior 500 and the Crescent Ball.

In athletics the house placed second in football, basketball, and softball. Their winning streak for last year was completed with an honorable mention in Inter-Fraternity Sing.

The chapter hosted the regional Lambda Chi Alpha conclave last spring, calling on campus coeds to aid in entertaining the visitors.

PHI DELTA THETA

The label of the grand old fraternity is proudly carried by Phi Delta Theta. The big house on Cowley is the stage for many outstanding activities – academic, social and athletic.

The Phi Delts have their share of campus workers, boasting five Blue Keys, two Excaliburs and the president of Green Helmet in their membership.

The Phi Delts and the Tri Delts made a poetic and successful team in Water Carnival last spring. Their modern version of "The Student Prince" brought them a fourth place trophy.

The men also found time to brush up on bridge, being rewarded with a first place in the IFC tournament.

Bridge whizzes in the Phi Delt house sharpen up their championship form by constant practice.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

The Fiji scrapbook is a valuable asset during rush, as well as a running record of the many Phi Gam activities.

A "Cable from the Cannibal Isle" greets every coed who receives an invitation to the Fiji Island party, famed social event of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. Members free their imaginations as they recreate the South Seas.

Another social occasion, the Norris Pig Dinner, is strictly stag. The university faculty, Fiji alums, and members of the Greater Lansing Graduate Association are invited to enjoy a delicious pig, a tradition originated in California.

Full participation in university activities is encouraged among the members. The house has been consistently at the top of the percentages in campus blood drives, winning first place last spring with 100 per cent.

The Phi Psi torch-bearer led the "Bacchanalia" parade to kick off the successful Homecoming rally.

"Bacchanalia" was the secret word around campus for weeks preceding Homecoming activities. It was finally revealed by its originators, the men of Phi Kappa Psi, as the theme for the annual Homecoming pep rally. The Phi Psis arranged the entertainment, the "torch-lit" marathon, and the blazing bonfire.

Their enthusiasm for activities has made the Phi Kappa Psis an "old hand" in university projects. The men were supporters of several university functions such as the Junior 500, Water Carnival and Campus Chest.

The men of the skull helped to refurbish their house by assisting in reupholstering.

Excitement ran high in the Phi Kap House fall term as the Alumni Board undertook the job of remodeling the living room during Christmas vacation.

Improvements doubled the size of the living room and provided new furniture and carpeting. Enthusiasm over the improvements led many members to redecorate their own rooms in the house.

Participating in activities such as IM sports, I.F.C. sing, Water Carnival and Junior 500, the fraternity took honors in the 1960 Greek Olympics. The men climaxed their social year with their formal term party, the Black and Gold Ball.

Four members of the fraternity were delegates to the national fraternity convention, held last summer at French Lick, Indiana.

Phi Kappa Tau's wide front lawn provided a practice field for intramural sports which netted a successful record for the year.

A Christmas party for the orphans of Lansing was as entertaining for the fraternity as for the children.

Spring term, members got into condition for the annual "Phi Tau-Delt Sig Day", highlighted by a drenching tug-of-war across the Red Cedar River.

PHI SIGMA KAPPA

The "idiot box" often claims the undivided attention of Phi Sigs.

Phi Sigma Kappa has good reason to claim virtual ownership of the trophy for the fall term blood drive after winning it for the second consecutive time. This fall they bled, rather uniquely, 109 per cent of their members.

This "young" fraternity celebrated its first birthday on campus last October.

In service to others, the Phi Sigma Kappa members entertained underprivileged children at their house.

One member of the fraternity delights in disappearing on campus, to the consternation of the others who must search for him. Socrates, the boxer mascot of Phi Sigma Kappa, is addicted to wandering into strange places where no one can find him.

PI KAPPA PHI

The men of Pi Kappa Phi literally "ran away" with top honors in Water Carnival last year, and they are going all out to capture a first place again this year.

They enthusiastically represented their fraternity in several I.M. sports and Homecoming. Besides paying a great deal of attention to all-university activities, the Pi Kaps placed a large amount of emphasis on scholastic achievement. Each term an award was presented to the outstanding pledge and scholar. At the end of the year, they recognized a senior member who they feel has earned the honor.

In service to the community, the Pi Kaps participated in a community project each spring in conjunction with the I.F.C. - Panhellenic Councils.

A rinky-tink piano and a collection of week-end trophies dominate the Pi Kap recreation room.

Lazy afternoons in the Psi U house often find the brothers lounging to the beat of bongo drums and conversation.

The third place award was captured by the men of Psi Upsilon in the fraternity IM swimming championship winter term. The Psi Us are threatening to make an even stronger showing next year and take first place.

The majestic house on the hill is noted for the unbelievable interest and boundless energy of its occupants in social pursuits. The members are also noted for their Homecoming display which appears in front of their house each fall: a huge sheet of cardboard proclaiming simply "Rah!"

After three weeks of intense campaigning, the Psi Upsilon men were proud to claim among their membership this spring Larry Campbell, 1961-62 president of All-University Student Government.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

The SAE's 210 pounds of fun—in the shape of Brandy, their St. Bernard mascot—had the assistance of the entire fraternity in celebrating his eighth birthday this year.

This year the SAE's sparkled in many all-university functions. Last year they captured first place awards in the Junior 500, and swimming and golf intramurals. With their avid interest in extra curricular activities, the men also participated in Homecoming, I.M. Sports, and Water Carnival.

Having developed quite a reputation as the "singing fraternity," the SAE's were out again this year to win the victor's cup in the annual I.F.C. Sing.

Members got out the brooms and dust pans, and rolled up their sleeves, as their project for the year was cleaning up Urbandale for Greek Week.

Large and lumbering Brandy is both mascot and brother to the men of SAE.

SIGMA ALPHA MU

Songfests at any hour of the day or night give both study diversion and house unity to the Sammies.

The Sigma Alpha Mus are one of the newest fraternities on campus, receiving their national charter early in 1960.

The men of Sigma Alpha Mu participate actively in all intramural sports on campus. Last spring the men put in a lot of "blood, sweat and toil" while working on their Water Carnival float. Their Homecoming display this year depicted a lighthouse. After the game they hosted their alumni at a party in the house.

This year the men received the Community Service award from the Mu Chi chapter of Sigma Alpha Mu, and fourth place fall term in inter-fraternity scholarship.

A familiar morning chore brought a mad scramble for basins and showers in the dash for eight-o'clocks.

"I thought I saw a red fire-engine!" a Berkey hall-bound student exclaimed as he crossed Grand River Ave. last fall — "but there were Sigma Chis driving it!"

And so it was this year as Sigma Chi members sought to spread Spartan Spirit for the homecoming game with Ohio State. A transportation and socializing vehicle, the red fire-engine was seen at the pep rally, the parade and the game.

Also during football season the Sigma Chis entertained their fathers for "Dad's Day." Winter term activities included basketball and volleyball and spring term a new Sweetheart was chosen.

Portable television sets are welcome possessions for lucky Sigma Nu owners.

The men of Sigma Nu kept their calendar full of events this year. Besides participating in all-university events such as Homecoming and Water Carnival, they also sponsored popular house activities.

Among these were the annual White Rose Formal dance held in the spring and the Blackfoot-Whitefoot Ball co-hosted with the men of Alpha Tau Omega at Christmastime. They also put on a full-scale football bonfire and pep rally.

Always athletically inclined, the Snakes took part in almost every intramural activity.

Study time at the Sig Ep house often means utilizing floor space.

If you have attended any of MSU's football games, you have noticed the "Sparty head" on the sidelines. The head is carried by a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon. Winter term "Sparty's head" journeyed to the Republican convention in Detroit.

The Homecoming display this year was a large sphinx with the caption "Sparty's Sphinx, Buckeye's Jinx." The atmosphere of the Sig Ep's winter term party featured hearts all over the room, carrying out the theme "Queen of Hearts."

Sigma Phi Epsilon is MSU's newest fraternity, being chartered spring term of 1960.

THETA CHI

An absorbing game of chess provides a welcome form of after-dinner relaxation for two Theta Chis.

The Theta Chis were busy election day, when they babysat for voters in the Lansing - East Lansing area, and drove motorless citizens to the polls.

Famous for their musical abilities, the Theta Chis won I.F.C. sing for the seventh straight season last spring. As a result they were chosen to conduct Christmas Vesper Services in the chapel with the Alpha Gamma Deltas, who won Sorority Sing.

History was made last fall when the Theta Chi jazz band conducted a Sunday afternoon session on their front porch. Other Theta Chis are active in the marching band and the men's glee club.

TRIANGLE

Triangle fraternity provides the men of the campus with an opportunity to share their common interests in the spirit of friendship. Being primarily interested in engineering, the members actively participated in the Engineering Exposition and the Engineering Council.

They also found time for many other diversified activities. The men of Triangle joined in Water Carnival, Homecoming, Greek Week, and various phases of the intramural program.

Organized on Michigan State's campus on January 8, 1955, the fraternity has since become an enthusiastic and active organization, combining the interest of engineering with traditions of State.

The intricacies of sliderules and computers are often the main study problems for members of Triangle.

ZBT

Hi-fi bugs in the Zebe house keep tuned to all the latest sounds.

For their project this year, the Greeks of Zeta Beta Tau have appropriately adopted a child from Greece. They are the only fraternity in the country to do this.

Zeta Beta Tau men show their athletic prowess in I.M. competition. Last year they claimed the position of fraternity champs in ping-pong and bowling. This year the men have copped second place in inter-fraternity ping-pong.

Water Carnival is another field in which the ZBTs excel. Working with the Kappa Kappa Gamma women, they spent many nights in the house and on the river to capture second place in the 1960 Water Carnival. The float showed Peter Pan and the children learning to fly.

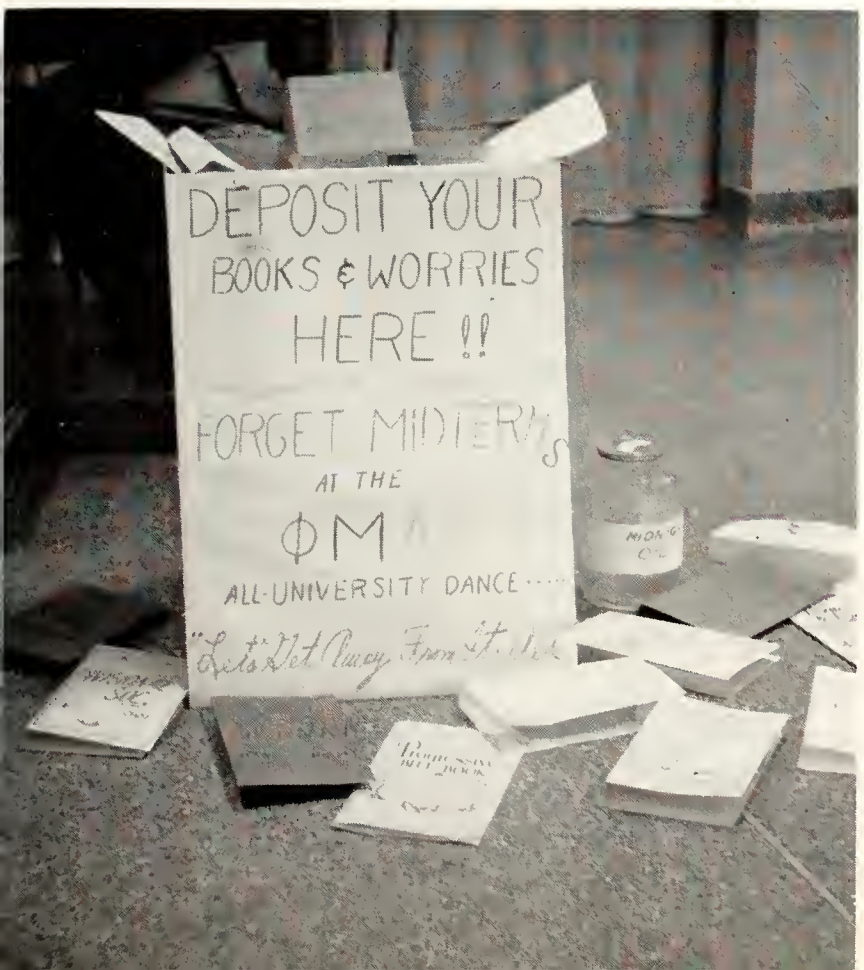
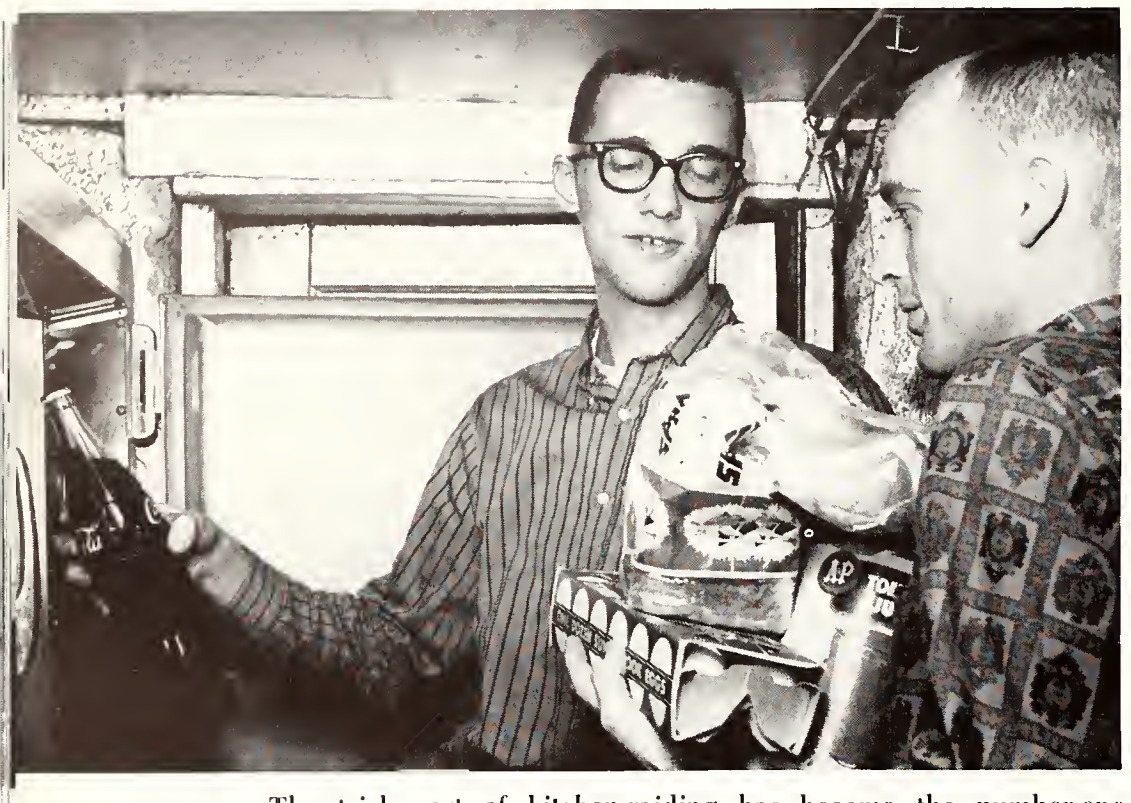
Professional fraternities offer an opportunity for those involved in similar studies to live and work together.

Professional Fraternities



All-university activities sponsored by professional fraternities such as Phi Mu Alpha offer students a chance to view the benefits of this aspect of Greek living.

AXΣ



The tricky art of kitchen-raiding has become the number-one hobby of the hungry men of Alpha Chi Sigma.

When the men of Alpha Chi Sigma manage to escape their books, they take great pleasure in the fraternal life. But for the most part, the minds of the members are happily occupied with elements and experiments. Five terms of chemistry is required for membership in Alpha Chi Sigma fraternty.

It seems that the emphasis on the books has paid off for the members. For nine terms in a row this fraternity has taken the IFC scholarship cup.

The meetings of the fraternity are often highlighted by speeches and discussions. Linus Pauling, Nobel Prize winner in biochemistry, is a member of Alpha Chi Sigma.

ALPHA KAPPA PSI

Alpha Kappa Psi is noted for tending to business quite literally, for the members are majors in the College of Business and Public Service. They boast in their honorary membership such outstanding figures as Richard Nixon, MSU President John Hannah, and C. S. Mott, Flint industrialist and retired faculty member of the College of Business and Public Service.

Annually the fraternity meets Delta Sigma Pi in the "Business Bowl." Last year Alpha Kappa Psi beat its rival in both baseball and football to win the coveted trophy.

Studies and business are temporarily abandoned spring term as members attend the annual dinner-dance.

The male senior with the highest grade point in the College of Business and Public Service is awarded a scholarship key by the fraternity.

Sometimes a "brother" can be more of a nuisance than a help when term paper deadlines loom large.

DELTA SIGMA PI

The musical talents of the men of Delta Sigma Pi are always utilized to the fullest by appreciative brothers.

The "Business Bowl" ranks higher in the affections of Delta Sigma Pi members than any other bowl game. After being the victims of Alpha Kappa Psi in both baseball and football, Delta Sigma Pi vowed to practice more for the next year.

A professional aptitude for business and an extra-curricular interest in intramural sports, particularly football, bowling, and hockey, characterize the members.

Scholarship is also encouraged through the awarding of a scholarship key to the highest graduating senior in the College of Business and Public Service. The fraternity as a whole received a special scholarship award.

Phi Mu Alpha's "housemother" is a frequent participant in house unctions, including informal musical entertainment.

ΦMA

The members of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, National Professional Music Fraternity, participate in Fine Arts Week, band concerts both in and out of East Lansing as a part of Cap and Gown, and the Annual Jazz Show.

To advance the cause of music in America and to provide a fellowship for students of music is the purpose of the group. Members usually belong to one of the musical groups on campus.

This organization has its own wind ensemble for concerts, several dance combos and a chorus which serenades during spring term.

The glistening steel and glass of the Brody group of men's halls have become the symbol of modern MSU living.

Well-equipped kitchenettes in women's residences were graced this year by the addition of professional pay hair dryers which whirred in ten- and thirty-minute cycles.

Overflowing ashtrays, stacks of notes, perpetual Coke cups and "reserved" notes on study room tables mark exam time in women's halls.

Community living with others of similar and vastly different backgrounds provides a continuing challenge in Michigan State's residence halls; it is a period of growth. . . .

Residence Halls

Cluttered rooms become the mode during exams as sleep is eluded and beds become merely resting spots for a term's work.

Male callers in women's dorms often have the long moments between the buzz and the grand entrance lightened by friendly receptionists.

Bunks nudged their ways into most women's halls and most coeds found that three plus a friend or two really is a crowd.

Friendly poker games among the men provide a welcome relief from study and roommate problems.

Television tubes burned late on election night as whole dorms gathered to sweat out the results.

Dormitory life is a hectic one—from the frantic scurries to showers before 8 a.m. classes and 8 p.m. dates to milling fire drills and seemingly endless dinner lines. Yet out of it all come the major and minor friendships and animosities and the important intangible of dorm spirit.

While the dorms grew no larger this year, their populations did, and many Spartans were crammed three to two-student rooms. Dull buzzes and falling buzzer caps were replaced by jingling telephone bells as preliminary installation was completed on the new campus 'phone system. By fall, the tiny telephone booths will become a thing of the past as each dormitory room will come equipped with a private line.

Seasonal fevers accompanying football, Homecoming and Water Carnival caught fire in all halls and fanned dorm spirit to fierce competition. At Christmastime, most dorms participated in projects designed to help others less fortunate—parties for orphans or Christmas food baskets for the needy.

And at all times dorm spirit was the spirit of people living together through crises and triumph and just plain day-in-day-out life.

Bridge fanatics in all halls can be found huddling over hands day and night—usually on the floor.

VAN HOOSEN HALL

A different form of dormitory living is shown in Van Hoosen hall, for its women live in apartments housing from four to six coeds. "Who burned the dinner tonight?" was a frequent cry from these girls, but in time practice paid off.

Scholarship might well be the big word around this dorm for it has received the women's residence Scholarship trophy for three consecutive years. Residents of this dorm are chosen on the basis of scholarship and character.

Receiving the nearly undivided attention of the coeds of Abbot Hall at the beginning of the year was the Homecoming display. Many hours of hard labor went into the work that captured the third place trophy. It now sits on their shelves with their many records of previous successes.

The cold chilly winds didn't force these coeds inside when there was work to be done on the Snow Sculpture. Their bravery in cold weather netted the Abbot women first place in the Snow Sculpture contest to the tune of yet another trophy.

In addition to their many activities these women take time out at Christmas to make Christmas baskets.

Academics are not forgotten, however, as one can see, because Abbot Hall holds the claim to the Outstanding freshman award, an award which gives an indication of things to come in future years.

The after-dinner rush of calls in Abbott is handled efficiently at the busy central switchboard.

ABBOT HALL

Enthusiasm ran high this year as North Campbell coeds put all their energy into their Homecoming display which depicted a large squirrel shoveling up the Buckeyes. Their efforts were not wasted as the second place trophy on display in their hall testifies.

After Homecoming these coeds divided their time between studies and activities such as dorm chorus, intramural athletics, Water Carnival and their special Christmas project.

These busy coeds feel that Christmas is the time when they can share with others the joy and cheer they feel, and they do this each year by "adopting" a needy family.

A busy dorm life is one aspect of college life that these coeds are not likely to forget, especially when it includes tubbings for the lucky girl and serenades by men's living units at Christmas.

The few after-dinner moments of relaxation are often spent around the piano in North Campbell.

SOUTH CAMPBELL HALL

Hard work on projects seemed to be the foremost activity for the women of South Campbell as the coeds living there worked hard on Homecoming, Snow Sculpture and Water Carnival.

Their extra effort on the Water Carnival float led them to capture the first place trophy with a display to the theme of "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round."

Outside of working on the display projects, the women of this dormitory engaged in many intramural activities, with their specialties in volleyball and swimming.

EAST LANDON HALL

"The dormitory with the heart to give" could well be a description of the women of East Landon Hall as these coeds organized together to have the highest percentage of blood donors fall term and were determined to hold that title throughout the year. Cries of, "I didn't faint at all," urged other girls to give to the blood drive.

Sounds of music issued forth from the walls of this dormitory as the coeds practiced for the Inter-residence sing, an event in which they sang their way to second place last year. Spirit in their singing had these girls continuing a serenade begun last year: that of Pumpkin Caroling around Circle Drive. This novel event promises to become a traditional annual tribute to the Great Pumpkin.

Sweet sounds of music could be said to float from the doors and windows of West Landon Hall, for the women of this dormitory have placed first in the Inter-residence sing for three consecutive years.

Though these coeds may sing for their dinner or while they work, when it is time for study quiet hours prevail. High scholarship ranking seems to be another of their attributes, for West Landon coeds also rank first in scholarship for living units under 300 girls for the previous 2 years and are aiming for more firsts in this area in the years to come.

Even hard-working West Landon co-eds are occasionally mesmerized by the hall's T.V. set.

MASON HALL

Typifying the industrious coed spirit are Mason hall women. They began work on Homecoming early this year, working with Armstrong hall. Their Homecoming display showed Linus, of "Peanuts" fame, telling the Buckeyes they were going to fall. They again showed spirit by cheering wildly with the men of Armstrong at the Homecoming game.

Mason coeds didn't stop there. The Water Carnival, Snow Sculpture, Junior 500, and Inter-residence sing took much of their time also. No one can say these girls are lacking in talent.

Study has its place, too, and Mason women are not ones to overlook its importance. They hold the scholarship award for dorms over 400 women.

Hoping to build up even more spirit this year, Mason started early on their Christmas project to provide food and gifts for a needy family.

EAST MAYO HALL

"Getting into the swing of things" could well be the motto of the East Mary Mayo hall women. Last year East Mayo was a graduate dormitory, and consequently these coeds "started from scratch." They began by building the enthusiastic spirit which carried them through the many events of the year.

One of the first things on the agenda in East Mayo was the election of dormitory officers to correlate the lives and activities of coeds living there. Floor meetings served an important function in getting these coeds organized.

"Energy plus" is going to be the key word around this dorm, because the Mayo women must lay down a foundation upon which to build a strong future.

WEST MAYO HALL

After having spent a year housing graduate students, West Mary Mayo has returned to its former place as an undergraduate dormitory. The residents rapidly fell back into the swing of things and their enthusiasm spread throughout the year.

Living in a more traditional atmosphere than other coeds is one claim Mayo coeds can make because their dorm is the oldest women's dorm on campus.

The West Mayo women learned that the days of two-in-a-room were going, giving way to triples. This is a problem plaguing many of the dorms this year, but the West Mayo women adjusted rapidly to this situation.

GILCHRIST HALL

A haywagon pulled by a tractor spouting steam captured the first place Homecoming display trophy for the women of Gilchrist for a third consecutive year. Their hard work and planning paid off in the form of a beautifully executed project.

Snow sculpture is another area in which these women excel, for they also brought the trophy for second place in the Snow Sculpture Contest to their dorm.

PHILLIPS HALL

The women of Phillips hall don't have to sing for their supper exactly, but these coeds are known for their song festivals with the men's dorms each throughout the year.

The dorm council of Phillips rounds up coeds to participate in all intramural sports, and other activities, such as Homecoming display, Snow Sculpture, and Inter-residence sing keeps these women busy all year long.

"Pep" was the keynote of Snyder Hall this year, judging from the hectic pace set by these women. They took part in almost all campus activities in which they were eligible to participate.

Braving the icy blasts which brought cold hands and feet and red noses, Snyder coeds coupled energy and enthusiasm to capture a second place in the 1960 Snow Sculpture contest.

Another trophy for their case was the third place they netted in the Junior 500, climaxing weeks of working out by running around Circle Drive in carts at any hour of the day or night.

The Christmas holiday received special attention, as the coeds collected food and clothing from their homes to sponsor a needy family.

The heaviest traffic in Snyder's halls comes around the busy telephone booths.

SNYDER HALL

Some of the most all-around sports-minded coeds can claim to live in North Williams Hall, for the women there have a virtual monopoly on the all-sports trophy for women's residence halls. They have captured it for five straight years.

These women don't let sports dominate their every thought however, for they plan and execute annual parties for many events and seasons each year. Although they are said to hold an advantage in social circles by their close location to the Brody group of men's residence halls, these coeds claim that their popularity is due to individual personal attributes.

The dormitory life of this residence is typical of State's women's residence halls. Exchange dinners with men's halls are one form of entertainment they engage in, especially at the beginning of fall term.

Busy study schedules occupy North Williams women.

NORTH WILLIAMS HALL

An exciting 'phone call is very often everybody's business.

Special dates always require extra roommate efforts.

South Williams women try to practice what they preach, for their aim is to help each coed adapt to college life in the way best suited for her, and to encourage the use of individual talents.

They are able to do this in many and varied ways for South Williams takes part in almost all campus activities. Their Homecoming, Snow Sculpture and Water Carnival displays show that they use the talents and abilities of all their women to the fullest.

Christmas was a special time to these coeds, for they took time out from the hectic studying for finals to collect money and food to give to a needy family in the Lansing area.

Swimming was their forte when it came to intramural sports activities, and these coeds proved to be a threat to all contenders.

EAST YAKELEY HALL

Many and varied activities claimed much of the spare time of the women of East Yakeley Hall, but that time was willingly donated and usually paid off. The Yakeley coeds captured a first place in the 1960 Snow Sculpture contest.

Intramural sports activities also took their share of time from these women, as they were well-known for their powess in volleyball and bowling.

In addition to this, they took part in the Homecoming display contest, Water Carnival, and the Junior 500.

Besides finding the women of West Yakeley Hall working on projects for Homecoming and Water Carnival, one can find them regularly participating in intramural sports. This year they were out on the volleyball courts practicing to get the trophy for the second straight year.

Christmas projects received a large portion of time from these coeds. Even finals couldn't keep them from planning a party for underprivileged children from the Lansing area, co-sponsored with the men of Emmons Hall. They also invited Lansing families for dinners.

West Yakeley practiced this year for the Inter-residence Sing in hopes of capturing one of the trophies for a display.

The labor of those Yakeley coeds who maintained a 3.0 average was duly rewarded with a scholarship dinner held in their honor.

Fourths—and even fifths—for bridge are always handy in West Yakeley.

WEST YAKELEY HALL

Brody Hall serves as a central location for dining and recreation facilities for the men of Bailey, Bryan, Butterfield, Emmons and Rather halls.

Last-minute cramming for an important exam is sometimes a necessary evil to the men of Armstrong.

A remarkable innovation in the field of social life marked Armstrong's first year as an undergraduate residence hall.

For their spring term dance, the men rented a bus to pick up coeds. They report that this is the first dance in history at which women outnumbered the men.

In the sports arena, the Armstrong men demonstrated their ability by taking a second place in the IM swimming meet. Spectator sports also played a part, as was indicated by the enthusiastic turnout for "Block A" at the fall football games.

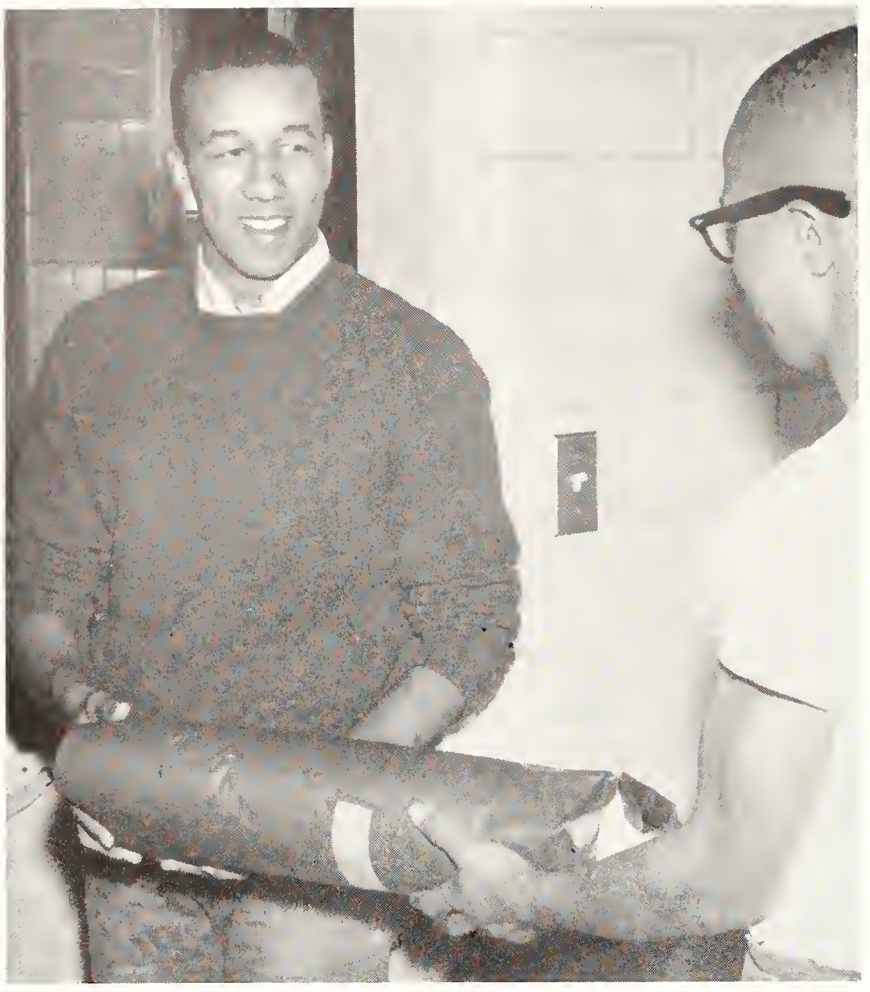
ARMSTRONG HALL



A weekly linen service for all residents of MSU dormitories was instituted this year. Distribution in Bailey brought smiles and a relief from added laundry problems.

Being a "Bailey man" has a certain prestige, at least among the residents of Bailey Hall. The big dorm is unified by this spirited loyalty to its name.

This year the men added to the traditions of Bailey by introducing an original "Alma Mater."

The men are willing to try anything to bring out unique hidden talents. They discover skill in sports through participation in intramurals. Also they reveal originality and artistic ability in Homecoming and Water Carnival displays. The men even find almost unlimited reservoirs of blood to donate in the various campus blood drive competition.

The residents' spirit and skill in well-balanced proportions earned them the highly coveted all-university sports trophy last year.

Christmas is "giving" time for Bailey. The residents plan a party for underprivileged children, never to be forgotten by either the children or the men.

Spring term Bailey men really go social with their annual big term party. Other parties and special events occupy a large part of the calendar.

Selection as The "Bailey man" is the secret desire of every resident. The "Man of the Year" award is based on outstanding contributions to residence hall unity, spirit, and activities.

This year the men of Bryan took to green instead of gold in their hat colors, but they still stood out at football games. Something new was the "human tunnel" the men formed for the grand entrance of the Spartans.

The "Block Bryan" generated mass enthusiasm in Block S as well as within its own ranks. Needless to say, the dorm walked off with the Spartan Spirit trophy for the second consecutive year. It also claimed the trophy for the dorm with the highest number of participants in Block S.

Bryan's enthusiasm for football wasn't limited to cheering for others. The men took to the field themselves, winning the dorm football title.

In its overall program, Bryan has three other S's in addition to sports — scholarship, service, and social activities.

During the Christmas holidays the motorists on Michigan avenue are treated to a special art show – the ingeniously decorated windows of Butterfield hall. The men enter into spirited competition for the top awards given for the most clever and beautifully decorated Christmas windows.

Together the residents aim for first places in intramural sports. Last year they could claim that they lived in the same hall which housed the dorm weight-lifting champion and the victors in tennis doubles competition. The men also exhibited their spirit by forming blocks for football and basketball contests.

The outstanding men in Butterfield annually share the honor of wearing the hall's pin, shaped as their crest.

Constant activity seemed to be the keynote for the men of Emmons Hall this year. They participated in every possible university event, including Homecoming, Water Carnival, Jr. 500 and intramural sports.

The united efforts of the Emmons men were not in vain. They won a first place certificate in the fall term blood drive, and walked away with the IM dormitory swimming championship.

In keeping with tradition, the men of Emmons brought underprivileged children to campus for a Christmas party. This annual event featured gifts and games for the children, and entertainment by the residents of the hall to brighten the youngsters' Christmas.

The often long wait for one of the dorm's irons and boards is the price to pay for the coveted "Joe College" look.

Rather's recreation room is one of the most popular spots in the hall for watching television or just plain relaxing.

The nerve center of the dorm is the busy "switch," where all communications are channeled to residents.

The residents of Rather Hall have a unique and sometimes a fun problem. They frequently find it necessary to correct non-residents' pronunciation of their hall's name. — "No, it's Raather, like the 'a' in 'rate'."

Earning trophies is commonplace for the men of Rather. Last year they put their winning energy to use in intramural sports. The tall men of Rather took first place in inter-dormitory basketball and second place in all-university basketball.

Last spring the men built a "car" which would stay together long enough to participate in the Junior 500. Extra-fast legpower plus endurance and practice aided the dorm in winning second place.

EAST SHAW HALL

East Shaw claims a pleasant location for its residents. It is the male dormitory closest to a female living unit, Van Hoosen Hall.

The hall is governed and guided by the general council, an elective body of dorm officers and precinct representatives.

The array of trophies and awards in East Shaw's showcase is ample evidence of the residents' enthusiastic participation in all-university and inter-dorm activities. These include Homecoming, Water Carnival, Junior 500, intramural sports, and campus blood drives.

Players and kibitzers alike abound in West Shaw whenever a deck of cards and a table are available.

One of the largest residence halls in the nation, West Shaw also boasts large amounts of enthusiasm, ability and brains in its members.

A first place in the fall Homecoming display has become an annual honor for the hard-working men of Shaw, as have numerous awards in athletics. Last year, Shaw took the IM men's halls all-sports trophy for the 4th consecutive year.

Scholastic pursuits also play a large part in the lives of the Shaw residents, and they have claimed the MHA Scholastic Award frequently.

The men of Shaw are kept informed on events in the dormitory by a weekly newsletter.

WEST SHAW HALL

Evening 'phone duty is one of the more cheerful chores undertaken by the women of Asher House.

Even co-op living offers time to be alone for study or leisurely reading.

Religious and Co-op Units

Home-cooked meals are the chief reward for cooperative effort in each of the thirteen religious and co-op units.

The opportunity to work and share household responsibilities with congenial persons is offered in Michigan State's cooperative houses. To some, the lessened living expense is an incentive to join; to others, the desire to participate in an experiment in group living. . . .

Close companionship is the prevailing spirit for co-op residents in both work and play activities.

The co-operative houses of Michigan State serve as home for almost 300 students. Membership in any of the seven co-ops for men is open to any male student who fills out an application and is accepted by the members. The only requirement is a 2.2 all-university grade point average.

The average cost of living in the co-ops is $150 per term plus four and one-half hours of work a week. For this members receive both room and board. In some instances kitchen privileges are also granted. All co-op members take an active part in the social and extra-curricular life on campus.

The women of Asher House gallantly set about household chores scheduled weekly among all the coeds.

Spring cleaning is accomplished with a minimum of effort when the whole house pitches in to shine up.

Pre- and post-meal duties are shared by co-op men to lighten the financial load.

Bethel Manor is an interdenominational religious living unit whose basic purpose is to couple Christian fellowship with cooperative living and inexpensive housing. The house serves as a meeting place and student center for Spartan Christian Fellowship.

Although Bethel Manor is primarily a religious living unit and takes part in few university events, the members participate in many independent activities. Groups of Bethel men regularly speak or provide entertainment for various local churches.

Gracious surroundings are the mark of Bethel Manor. The house is always open to interested students.

BETHEL MANOR

A strong and deep understanding of the principles of the Christian Scientist faith is sought by the women of Asher House. The 23 women have elected cooperative living with others of their faith as a means of strengthening this understanding.

The group places strong emphasis on academic achievement and on constructive service activities. Although they are new on campus and are not yet active as a group in campus activities, individual members are encouraged to take part in as many valuable activities as possible.

ASHER STUDENT FOUNDATION FOR WOMEN

Asher women always enjoy leafing through their full scrapbook.

It was an active year for the members of the Asher Student Foundation for Men judging by their filled calendar.

The fall term highlight was a talk given by the president of the Jam-Handy Co. at their annual progress report dinner. The company is concerned with the production of educational films. President Jamison Handy gave the talk.

During spring term progress awards are presented at a spring dinner dance. At this time a scholarship is awarded to encourage academic progress.

All MSU Christian Science students are invited to a picnic which is co-sponsored with the members of the Asher Student Foundation for Women.

The group was founded in 1946 to provide housing for students who are members of the Church of Christ Scientist.

ASHER STUDENT FOUNDATION FOR MEN

Membership qualifications for the campus' youngest co-op are very unusual. All members must have caddied at a Western Golf Association club for at least two years as the requirement for membership in Evans Scholars. Of the seven Evans Scholar living units in the Big Ten, the MSU duffers are the current golf champions.

Members of the house show varied interests in other significant areas other than golf. In ICC competition in intramural sports, the scholars placed second in all-university hockey and first in ICC basketball.

In the activity field the Scholars' floats for Homecoming, Spartacade, and Water Carnival are considered among the best.

For social activity they plan desserts with womens' residence halls and a few parties during the term.

BOWER HOUSE

Shared experiences in work and leisure activities spell cooperative living for the men of Bower House. These men find that cooperation in daily work brings rewards in the form of good fellowship and a lightened financial burden.

Social activities are not absent from the lives of the Bower men. Regular exchange dinners and an annual term party are the main social events.

ELSWORTH HOUSE

The past year was one of continuing and establishing traditions for the men of Elsworth House. They retained the ICC Scholarship trophy for an astounding thirteenth consecutive term and earned a record 2.93 average which topped all other undergraduate living units.

Athletically, they took ICC championships in basketball and softball and second in independent volleyball.

HEDRICK HOUSE

Highlights of the autum activities at Hedrick House were placing first in the co-op football league and second in the independent league. Winter brought an increased grade point in the house while the men of Hedrick challenged for the co-op scholarship trophy.

Hedrick members represented their house in varsity sports, mens' glee club, and concert and marching bands.

HOWLAND HOUSE

Goals of the Howland Co-operative house are to provide economical living for students and to promote fellowship and leadership to develop the capacities of its members.

On campus the Howland men participated in many events, but found their forte to be bowling. Their skill in this sport brought them the co-op bowling trophy.

MOTTS HOUSE

Through their mutual efforts the men of Motts provide a suitable residence and promote the development of their capacities for self-help.

To emphasize scholarship they present a "Man of the Year" award to the most outstanding member in the house. Social activities include an annual spring picnic and several informal term parties. For recreation the men participate actively in intramural sports.

ULREY HOUSE

Ulrey Co-operative house was instituted in 1949 to furnish inexpensive living to men students who are willing to work and share household responsibilities. A 2.0 All-college average in addition to the majority vote of all members is needed to gain admittance to Ulrey House.

Although the men of Ulrey spend a great deal of time in maintaining their home away from home, they take time out to participate fully in the intramural program.

Early training in homemaking skills is usually more fun than work for little girls when the result is edible.

Married Housing

The Michigan State married student enjoys both greater freedom and greater responsibilities than his single counterpart. Juggling class and work schedules, textbooks and baby bottles, mid-terms and budget problems are chores which bring both added headaches and rewards. Maturity is a necessity. . . .

For many couples, the close and comfortable married housing apartments are a first—and most memorable—home.

Many Spartan toddlers try out new mediums on campus soon after their first steps.

The universal fascination of children for dirt is no different in married housing—usually to the general consternation of their working mothers.

A red brick home with a large picture window in the livingroom. Scooters, roller skates, and wagons cluttering the small front lawn. A Ford parked at the curb, just arrived from the daily struggle with the 5 o'clock traffic. This may well be a perfect description of Suburbia, USA, however in this case it happens to be an everyday scene at Married Housing, MSU.

The conditions surrounding C. W. Mills' "white collar" worker and MSU's married student are surprisingly the same—a young married couple with a growing family, a small home in a residential neighborhood away from the city, traffic to fight in the morning and at night, and the many problems that concern all newly married couples.

Those who reside in the MSU version of Suburbia however, have a special problem that is shared by all college students, wherever they live. This problem is characterized by textbooks and exams, and is commonly known as "grades".

The fully-equipped laundry centers in the married housing units solve one of the Spartan wives' biggest problems—and also provides a perfect setting for the exchange of neighborhood gossip.

The thrill of Christmas morning is as big for Spartan tikes as for any lively youngster.

When commencement is over, the discouraging and chaotic task of breaking up and moving faces MSU's married students.

The first stop for the usual student husband is dropping off his working wife with a hasty goodbye on his way to class.

Inexpensive family recreational activities for struggling married students are provided in many fields—especially in art exhibits.

MSU Suburbia, whether it goes under the name of Spartan Village, Cherry Lane apartments, or University Village, is the hometown of almost 2,000 children and their parents. These well-furnished red brick apartments, and the more than 6,000 people living in them, have become a very special kind of community.

Like others living in small communities everywhere, MSU married students are concerned with the health and welfare of their family, the upkeep of their home, the condition of their car, and the elasticity of their budget. But, unlike other communities, when Dad rushes to his car in the morning it is not because he is late getting to the office, but because he is late for his 8 o'clock at Berkey.

Like other college students, the nearly 2,300 married students are concerned with instructors, term papers, and projects. They enjoy football games, university dances, bridge, and watching TV. But unlike unmarried students, they are also concerned with formulas, fixing broken tricycles, and with what the wife is going to have for dinner that night.

Team members and ingenuity in stringing up a net are all that are needed in married housing for a rousing game of volleyball.

The facilities to entertain both single and married friends are among the blessings of having one's own home.

Although each of the furnished apartments follows the same basic floor pattern, and although each comes complete with wall-to-wall carpeting and a fully equipped kitchen, the similarity between apartments ends at the front door.

Every apartment soon becomes an expression of the occupant's personality and individuality . . . personality seen in an elaborate hi-fi outfit, in personal paintings decorating the walls, or a living room filled with bookcases. The idea of conformity currently being tagged to the concept of American suburbia seemingly has little chance of catching on at Michigan State married housing.

Married students at MSU find that leading a full social life is all too easy. Between those activities offered by the university and those so readily available in their own community it is often hard to concentrate on schoolwork.

MSU can indeed be proud not only of the living facilities it provides for its married students, but of the opportunity it gives these same students to experience true community living while earning college degrees.

The long step from the altar in June to married housing in September involves trailer-loads of paraphernalia.

The first Christmas of married life is a time for new traditions and new closeness.

Even Daddy is prone to study interuptions — but of a more pleasant sort than those of his single eohorts.

Long, black, tasseled lines of GRADUATES filed into commencement in December, March and June. There had been so much so fast, and then Senior Week was here. For the class of '61, it was Swingout and then but sad. We were proud...

t was over. It was good

Frantic preparations for Water Carnival heightened the excitement surrounding Senior Week for underclassmen as well as June graduates.

Mortar Board President Gigi Gammon and Excalibur President Bill Steuart were among the first seniors sizing up caps and growns in the Union Bookstore for Senior Week activities.

An appointment for a yearbook portrait marks the first realization for most seniors that the last lap is finally here.

The emotional impact of Senior Week activities is heightened by the sudden realization that all too soon a diploma will signify the end of years of study. Yet the seniors' final fling of Spartan days sends them off in a style which will long be remembered as a week of triumph and reward, of goodbyes and hellos. . . .

Senior Week

Commencement committee members John Laetz, Bob Gustavson, Cecil Nickle and James Denison are responsible for completing the complex arrangements for commencement each term.

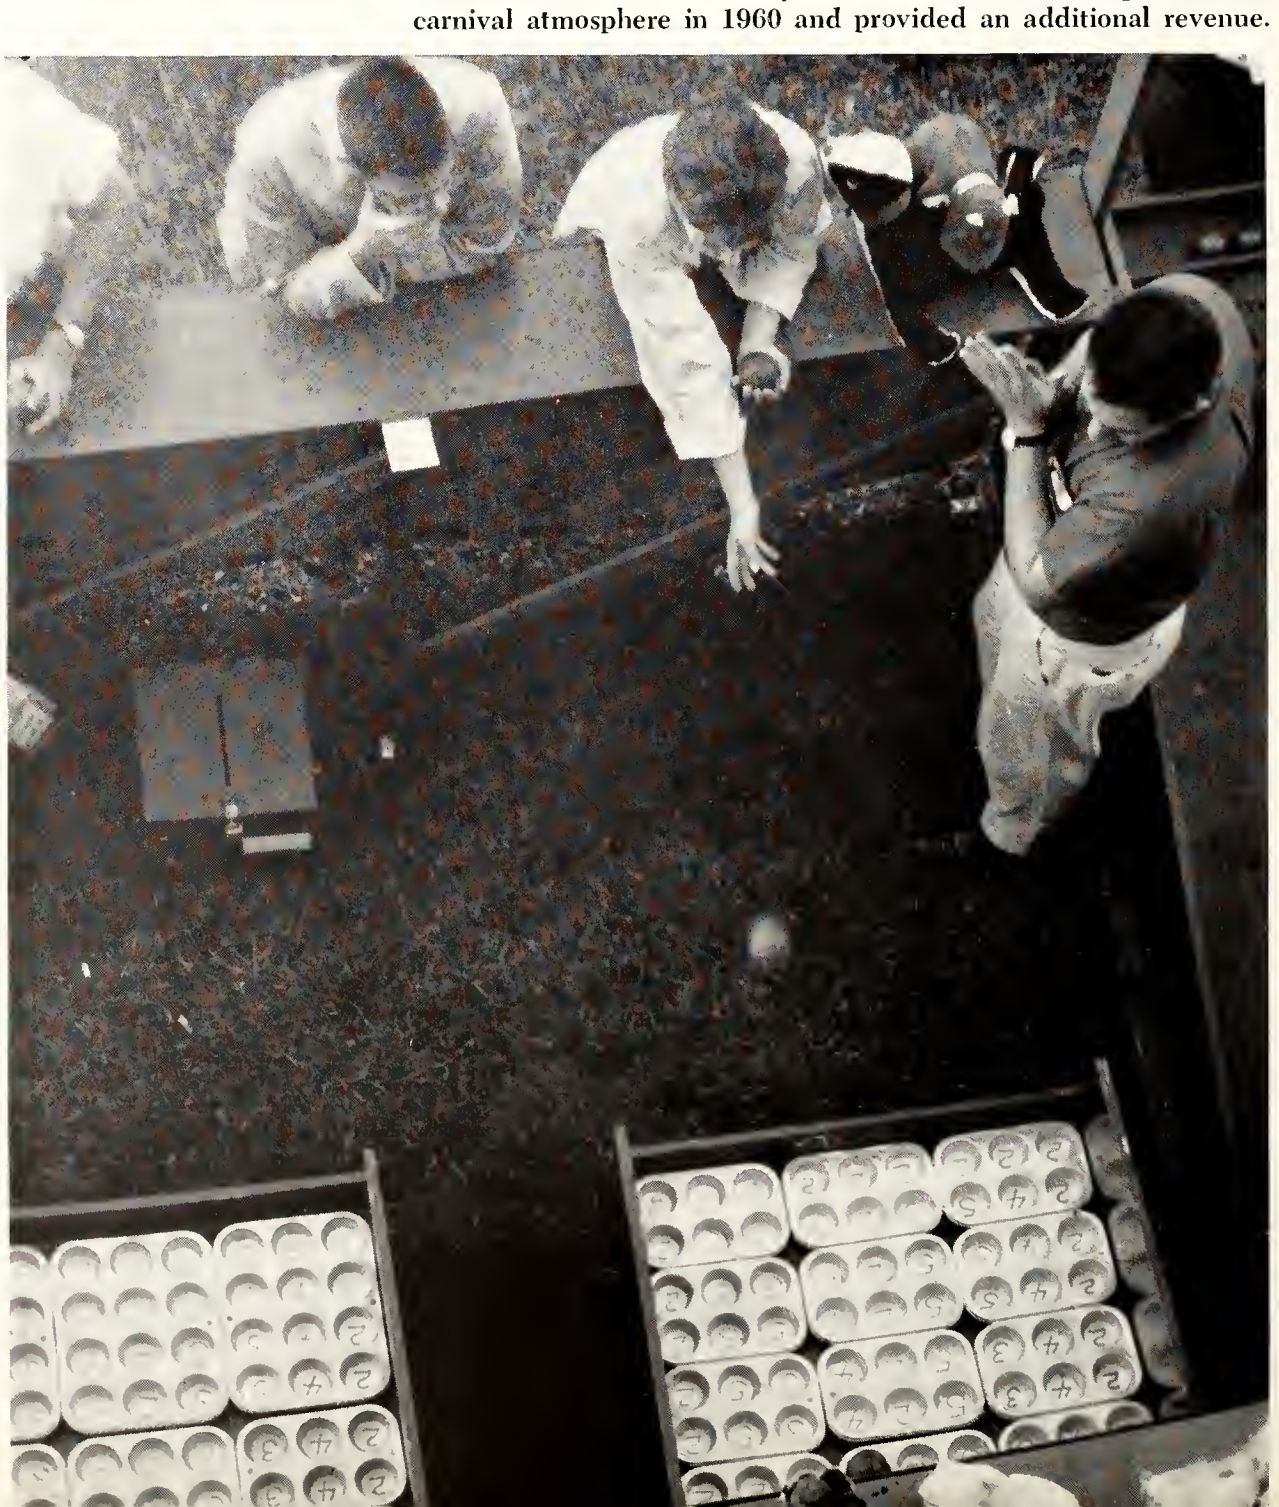
The harried hours of actual float construction demand united efforts to cap hours of planning with the polished product.

WATER CARNIVAL It begins with many small creative meetings in about every living unit on campus, progresses to struggles with hammer and paint, all too soon becomes frantic efforts to finish before the construction deadline, and ends on three warm spring evenings alive with lights, music, and happy crowds. It is the culmination of a year of hard work for many people, and it is called Water Carnival.

The 1960 Water Carnival, sponsored as always, by the senior class, was under the general chairmanship of Matt Surrell. The latest version of this 37 year old M.S.U. spectacular was produced under the theme of "The Sounds of Music", and, although delayed one night because of the ever present evening rain, it more than lived up to expectations.

Although weeks are spent in writing continuity and building the floats, participating campus living units are given only 41 hours for actual float construction. This time limit is imposed in order to give every group an even start in the heated race for the coveted first place trophy, captured last year by South Campbell and Pi Kappa Phi.

The introduction of a midway behind the bleachers heightened the carnival atmosphere in 1960 and provided an additional revenue.



Dazzling floats slip by the bandstand on the Red Cedar river on each of three June nights in the annual Water Carnival sponsored and produced by the senior class.

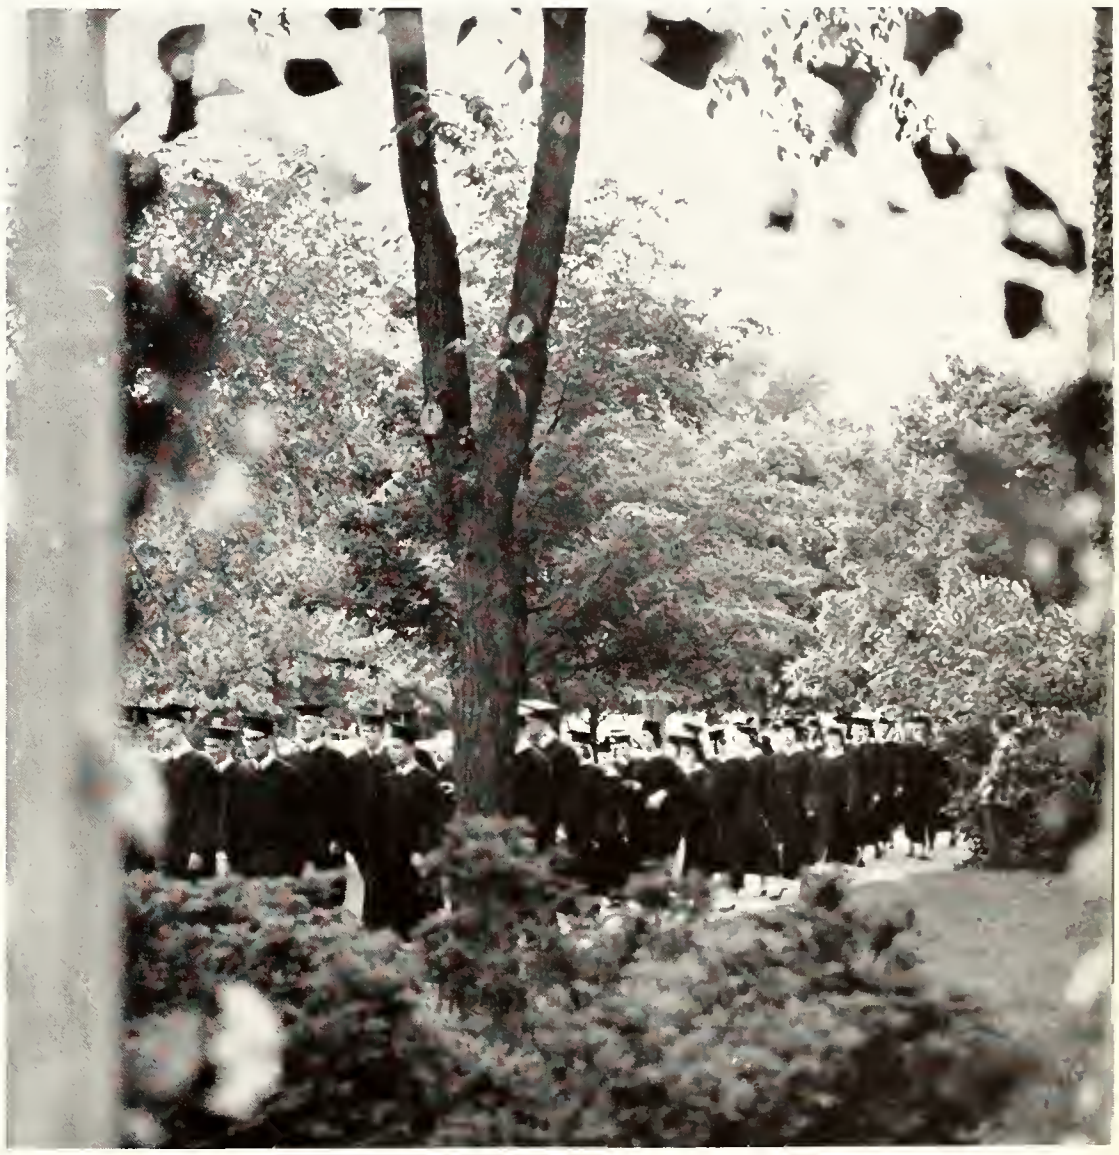
Participants in the Lantern Night program included outstanding women from all classes. The lanterns of responsibility were passed from class to class.

Senior Week is the week when Michigan State pauses to honor her graduating seniors. It is a week of triumph and tradition.

Each year, on the Sunday preceding commencement, 50 outstanding senior women are honored at Lantern Night. Previously the living units of these women have been serenaded, and a lantern left to mark their presence. At Lantern Night, after a colorful procession by coeds from each class, the names of these women are revealed, and the "light of responsibility" is passed to the underclassmen.

During Senior Swingout, the next big event, seniors dressed in caps and gowns gather in front of their respective colleges, and, led by the marching band, march to Fairchild theatre for class night.

On the day before commencement the advanced Air Force and Army ROTC cadets receive their commissions in an impressive military ceremony.



The 100th graduating class followed the marching band to Fairchild theater for Senior Swingout to finish their last class business as undergraduates.

Fifty-two Army and 15 Air Force cadets received commissions at the impressive June ceremony.

President John A. Hannah and Secretary Karl H. McDonel personally signed each diploma. This was Mr. McDonel's last commencement chore before his retirement after 47 years and thousands of diplomas.

Commencement seems a long way off to a first term freshman . . . and it is. The road that leads into Spartan Stadium on graduation day goes over mountains of required courses, through valleys of final examinations, and is full of detours that require adjustments to a new way of life. But in four years the road is traveled, the journey completed, and it doesn't seem like such a long way after all.

There are several thousand people sitting in Spartan Stadium graduation day, the graduates, their parents and friends, and the MSU faculty and staff, and to each it has its own meaning.

To the parents it might bring a feeling of pride that their son or daughter is now ready to accept the responsibilities of a mature citizen, or it might bring a wish that that same son or daughter was a little child again. The faculty may be patting themselves on the back for a job well done, to them it may bring a sense of worthwhile accomplishment, or it may merely mean another graduation in the hot sun.

And what does it mean to the graduate? To him it may mean the proud attainment of a long sought goal, or it may bring to him a feeling of sadness for all the things he must leave behind. But whatever it may mean to anyone present, everyone knows the road is expanding, not ending.

Former President Harry S. Truman received the honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Michigan State after delivering the 1960 commencement address.

June 12, 1960 was a proud day for picture-taking fathers and happy graduates.

More than 800 graduates received degrees at the winter term commencement exercises on March 20, 1961.

The long wait in the line-up area outside Spartan Stadium in June is a time for excitement, congratulations and goodbyes.

Senior Class Vice-President Ted Horning, Secretary Sharon Jones, President Bob Gustavson and Treasurer Norma Smith were the first to carve their initials on the senior table in Old College Hall.

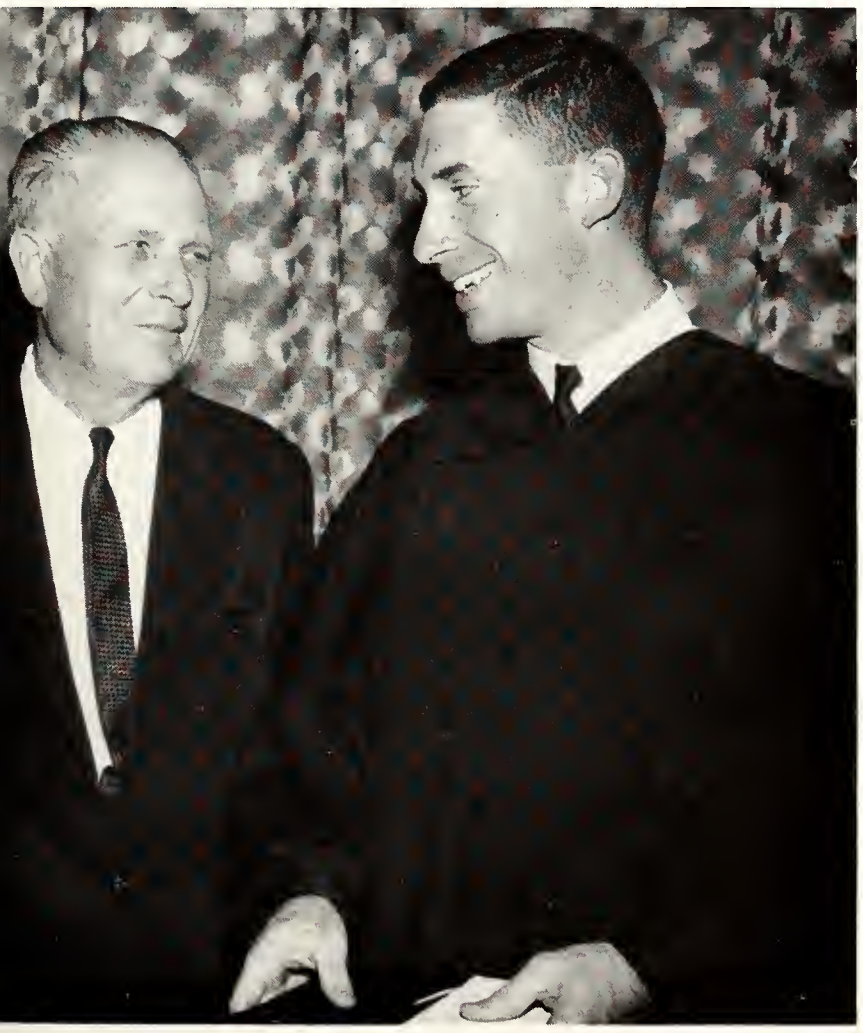
Graduates

President John Hannah congratulated Ginny Thrall and Jennings Bird, recipients of the 1960 Outstanding Senior awards, following Senior Swingout.



To each graduate, the donning of a cap and gown performs an individual magic. To some, it represents an achievement and the end of formal education; to many, it symbolizes a humble beginning. Yet for all it brings a realization of the responsibility of an educated and cultured citizen to Michigan State and to our society. . . .

Careful cultivation of greenhouse experimental plants is an important phase in research.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

While the exhaustive — and exhausting — efforts which more than 100 persons have contributed to the 1961 WOLVERINE can never be sufficiently rewarded, our sincere thanks can only be offered to those who have made the book possible.

And so, to the staff members who sacrificed sleep, grade-points and social life, to Mr. Edwin Hackleman of Jahn and Ollier Engraving Company of Chicago who carefully supervised the technical aspects of the book from its conception to its publication, to Mr. Jack Bundy of the S. K. Smith Company of Chicago who arranged for the design and production of the cover, and to Mr. Sam Fields of Delma Studios of New York who provided more than 2,000 senior portraits — a sincere "thank you."

But the most special tribute of all must be reserved for Mr. William McIlrath, Director of Student Publications, and Mr. John Vitovsky of Speaker-Hines and Thomas printing company of Lansing — two men who for many years have endlessly contributed sympathetic assistance and expert advice to the WOLVERINE. Their support and encouragement are the underlying cause of our success.

To them and to all who made it possible, we owe our appreciation — and Michigan State owes its thanks.
